Under present federal procedures, a man may be required to make a deposition to answers to questions about his very thoughts on an occasion in the past. "His only recourse is the Fifth," said Dr. Keeney.

Instead of repealing all or part of the Fifth Amendment, a better way would be to "define the procedures of Congressional committees, and to police them through Congress as a whole. as was finally done—too late—in the case of Senator McCarthy," said the President of Brown University.

The right of free speech has been abridged administratively in the government "by censorship and security regulations," said President Keeney.
