

Summer Ends Academically At UNC

BOTANISTS EXAMINE INFECTED LARVAE—Kenan Professor John N. Couch, (right), chairman of the UNC Botany Department, points out mosquito larvae infected by the deadly "Coelomomyces" fungus to his research assistant, Clyde Umphlett. The larvae were collected in Georgia this summer by Umphlett and Cecil B. O'Neil, a National Science Foundation undergraduate research participant, and are being studied now at the University of North Carolina.

Exams Loom Right Around The Corner

Final exams for the second Summer Session begin at 8 a.m. Friday and run through 5 p.m. Saturday, bringing the session to a close.

Dr. A. K. King, Director of Summer School, says "This has been the best attended Summer School we have had in a decade."

Dr. King said the "number of students who are interested in accelerating their academic standing is increasing, while the number of students here to remove deficiencies is decreasing."

"The Summer Session is especially appealing to graduate and upper college students," Dr. King said.

So except for faculty members and a few students, the campus will be deserted after Saturday afternoon.

But it won't be but a little more than two weeks before the campus will again be alive with students, both old and new. Fall semester registration is slated for Sept. 13 and 14, with classes getting underway on Thursday, the 15th.

Enrollment for the second Summer Session was 2,775, a drop of nearly 1,000 from first session enrollment. The combined enrollment for both sessions topped the expected figure of 6,200 by 412.

About one-third of the students on campus for the summer were graduate students, and one-fifth were visiting students, from 109 different institutions throughout the country.

In addition to the students here, nearly 3,500 visitors attended 40 different workshops, conferences, institutes and short courses.

Not included in this number are several schools and conferences held by the Institute of Government in the fields of state and local government.

Faculty Survey Shows Nixon Ahead In Presidential Poll

By JOE MEDLIN

A poll of several UNC professors this week showed that they feel that Vice-President Richard M. Nixon is the front-runner in the presidential campaign.

Five of eight professors polled said either that they felt Nixon is the leader at the present, or else said they are in favor of Nixon.

One said he was for Kennedy, while the other said he was not particularly for either candidate.

Several other professors who were contacted preferred not to give an opinion. One said he has "other things on his mind, and would prefer to be counted out."

The professors and their opinions are as follows:

George L. Simpson, professor of Sociology and Anthropology said he thought the Democrats were generally in the majority. "I think Kennedy probably has more voter appeal."

Frank W. Klingberg, professor of History said he thought the whole thing was speculation but would guess that both candidates were about even.

"I am a Republican and will vote for Nixon. I feel that he has a good bit of executive experience and I agree more with his philosophy on domestic issues as to the amount of private investment as distinguished from public investment."

John G. Kunstmann, professor of Germanic Languages said he was not for Kennedy.

"However, that does not mean that I am for Nixon."

James W. Prothor, professor of Political Science said he thought both candidates were very close.

"It is my guess that the number of people who are undecided will be large enough to swing the election either way.

"I am a Democrat and will vote for Kennedy."

Kenneth R. Byerly, associate professor of Journalism said the latest polls show that Nixon has a slight lead.

"I am for Nixon. I think he is the best man."

Clarence E. Philbrook, professor of Economics said he preferred Nixon.

EXAM SCHEDULE

Here it is folks. It seems that the session has hardly begun, and yet the final exam schedule is already causing chills to run up and down the spines of overheated students.

The schedule is as follows:

Friday, August 26:

Class	Exam
10:30	8:10 a.m.
2:00	11 p.m.
7:30	3-5 p.m.

Saturday, August 27:

9:00	9-10 a.m.
12:00	11-1 p.m.

P.M.'s and others not otherwise provided for will be held from 3-5 p.m.

No student may be excused from a scheduled examination except by the University Infirmary, in case of illness, or by his Dean, in case of any other emergency compelling his absence.

Dr. Duffey Is Named New Associate Dean

Dean J. Carlyle Sitterson and Chancellor William B. Aycock have announced the appointment of Dr. Frank M. Duffey to the position of associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of North Carolina.

Dr. Duffey, who has formerly served as advisor in the College of Arts and Sciences, is a professor of Spanish in the Department of Romance Languages. He joined the UNC faculty in 1938.

Dr. Duffey received his A. B. degree from Miami University in Ohio and his M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina. He is a member of the Modern Language Association, the South-eastern Conference on Latin American Studies, the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese, and the Council for Basic Education. Since 1950, he has served as editor of the South Atlantic Modern Language Association Bulletin.

His major published work, "The Early Cuadro de Costumbres in Colombia" deals with sketches on daily life published in the South American Republic of Colombia between 1838 and 1875. The book was very well received by distinguished South American historians.

Dr. Duffey will replace Dr. George M. Harper of the Department of English who wishes to return to full-time teaching.
