U.S. May Loose China Ban Fight

By United Press International

For 10 years, largely due to the efforts of the United States, Red China has been banned from membership in the United Nations.

But from this day on, the United States may be fighting a rear-guard and losing action. Ironically, the new or underdeveloped nations which have the most to fear from aggressive communism probably will be the ones to open Red China's way into the world organization.

Last year, with the help of European, Latin American and some Asian states, the United States successfully staved off for the ninth time Red China's membership bid.

This year, Cuba has broken the solid Latin American front and 14 new African nations are now scheduled for U.N. membership.

Most of the latter can be listed in the neutralist bloc and all of them have been assiduously wooed by the Reds.

Their membership could bring about a decisive change in the voting which last year was 44-29 against Red China.

Neither in the United States nor among its allies is there unanimity for the U.S. stand. But the arguments against Red China remain as valid now as they ever were.

The United Nations charter adopted in 1945 in San Francisco begins with a brave statement of determination "to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war."

It provided membership for all "peace-loving states which accept the obligations" of the charter and which "are able and willing to carry out these obligations."

It also provides that any member which consistently violates these obligations may be expelled.

In arguing its case last year, the United States charged that the Peiping regime had massacred "thousands" of Tibetans and had "kept itself in power by bloody purges and by liquidation of some 18 million Chinese in nine years."

It also accused Red China of promoting six foreign or civil wars—Korea, Tibet, Indo-China, the Philippines, Malaya and Laos. The argument asserted that to admit such a country to the U.N. would "make a mockery of our charter and rob it of all moral authority."

Those arguments, valid a year ago, still are valid, with the added emphasis that once more Red Chinese-supported communist guerrillas are attempting to take over Laos.

About the most effective argument used by those who favor Red China's membership is that it is a force in being, controlling the lives of 600 million people, and that no world organization can hope to function effectively and ignore it.

The question is not so much whether the U.N. can properly function without Red China. It is rather, can it function with Red China and still pretend to adhere to its own charter?

—To Discuss Implications—

'Ugly American Furor' Subject Of Speech By Service Leader

"The Ugly American Furor" is the subject of a speech to be given by the director of the U.S. State Department's Foreign Service Institute at 3 p.m. today in 106 Hanes Hall.

Dr. Harold B. Hoskins of Washington, D. C. will address students and others who may wish to attend under auspices of the Chancellor's Committee on International Studies.

Using the novel, "The Ugly American" as a touchstone, Dr. Hoskins will move into a discussion of the foreign service as a career.

Hoskins, a veteran of many years in foreign service, will attack the implications of the best-selling novel and will give a view of State Department operations from the vantage point of foreign service officers.

The State Department official will discuss the importance of "Ugly American," the reactions to it, and the results of its publication upon the public and the State Department.

He will then attempt to propose the answer to what he calls "The Ugly American Furor."

Following the discussion of the book, Dr. Hoskins will move into an intensive discussion of the foreign service as a career, outlining to the audience the necessary qualifications, procedures for entering the service and the necessary training program.

A part of the talk will be devoted to an explanation of the woman's increasing role in foreign service.

Special attention will be given to providing a rundown of foreign service organization, the type of education needed, with specific emphasis on language requirements and costs of training.

Salaries for foreign service employees will also be discussed.

Dr. Hoskins was born of missionary parents in Beirut, Lebanon. He graduated from Princeton University in 1917 and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He previously was a business executive in the textile industry.

State Affairs Group Begins Union Drive

2 Death Plots Set Against K

NEW YORK (UPI)—Two plots against Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev were reported on Wednesday, causing police to tighten their guard around the Communist dictator.

The Russians reported a former Nazi Gestapo agent posing as a cameraman would try to shoot Khrushchev Wednesday with a gun mounted in a camera.

Police were inclined to discount this report as just another Soviet propaganda bid but took the precaution of examining the cameras of some photographers assigned to Khrushchev. A UPI photographer was required to dismantle his camera 17 times.

The second reported plot was said to be the brainchild of a group of anti-Communist Hungarians. Police heard they planned to ride on a 68th Street bus past the Soviet mansion on the corner of Park Avenue and 68th Street and throw a fire bomb from it.

Khrushchev appeared to be untroubled by the reported "Gestapo" plot against his life and went about his business under the protection of New York police and his own security officers.

Student Government Preps For Biggest Job In 2 Years

By Edward Neal Riner

This semester the biggest project to face student government in two years starts building momentum for a program to benefit students, the University and the state of North Carolina.

This is the year of the Committee on State Affairs and the University's drive to get UNC's budget approved by the state's General Assembly. Chaired by Davis B. Young, the State Affairs Committee is a committee of student government appointed to work for the student body and with the University administration in seeking the approved budget.

Last spring Student Legislature granted the committee a budget of $851.10 for its project.

Judges Select Coeds To Try For CU Title

Janie Alle, Harriet Jackson and Jane Page will represent UNC Saturday morning in the judging for Consolidate University queen.

The judges—Earl Wynn of RTVMP, Mrs. Douglas Fambrough of Graham Memorial and Dr. George Daniel of Romance Languages—selected the three coeds last night in McIver dorm. There were 23 girls in the contest.

The three finalists will meet contestants from Woman's College and N. C. State in the final contest at Morehead Planetarium.

Janie Alle of Lambert, Miss., is a Chi Omega senior majoring in political science.

Harriet Jackson of Cartersville, Ga., is a Pi Beta Phi senior majoring in English. She is on the attorney general's staff.

Jane Page of Richmond, Va., a junior majoring in education. She sings in the University Chorus.

The CU queen will be presented 9:30 p.m. Saturday in Woollen Gym during the Order of the Grail dance.

Crowning To Lift CU Lid On Saturday

When Woman's College students arrive in Chapel Hill Saturday morning, when the Consolidated University queen is crowned Saturday night, Consolidated University day will be in session.

Planned each year at the time of the State-Carolina football game, CU Day is the work of the Consolidated University Student Council.

CUSC was officially organized in 1958 when it adopted its constitution to "fulfill the needs of consolidation at the student level."

Composed of representatives of the three schools—UNC, N. C. State and Woman's College—in the University, CUSC meets four times a year to represent "the opinions, interests and welfare of the student bodies of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, and to act as a means of liaison between the student bodies" of the University and the administration of the University.

CU Day is the effort to coordinate and initiate activities promoting more harmonious relations among the student bodies.

Each of the three schools contributes funds to CUSC for its expenses during the year.

Not only does the committee of hundreds of students have the approval of the Student Legislature, as noted by its appropriation, but student body President David Grigg has given the committee his personal and presidential green light.

Lighting the way for the committee is an executive board of nine students and a committee of 100 students representing each county in the state. With this set-up, the committee hopes to have the interest and cooperation of each North Carolinian on campus, plus interested out-of-state students. North Carolina students may work with their county's chairman, and any student may check with the committee headquarters in the Y building. (The county chairmen will be announced within two weeks.)

In working with students, the committee plans brochures; news, feature and individual comment in The Daily Tar Heel; letters and conferences, panel discussions and workshops.

The workshops will be to inform students of the needs and programs of the University and their roles in interpreting these needs and programs to the state. Interpreting may be the key-word in the work of the committee.

Chancellor William B. Aycock emphasized "interpret" Wednesday. "It is the job of students and the administration to interpret the needs and programs of the University to the people of the state. Only in this way will they understand our budget requests."

The chancellor said the interest and work of the State Affairs Committee is an important part of the administration's job of stressing the approval of the budget.

"When students take the interest and the time to work for the University, the people of the state will know our requests are important," he said.

"I am pleased with the work of the committee and student government, and I am willing to help the committee in any way I can," Aycock said.

But, as the chancellor praised the committee yesterday, Chairman Young issued a statement saying "widespread student support and the vigorous and continued assistance of the entire University community" is needed to make the committee wholly a student project and not just the work of a few.

Young stated Carolina is in a "very good position to obtain a new student union."

"Students must carry the ball. A new union is for all of us, not just a privileged minority. Because this is true, each student has a prime responsibility to be heard on this key question."

'Pacific' Tryouts Begin On Sunday

Tryouts for the Carolina Playmakers' production of Rodgers' and Hammerstein's popular musical, "South Pacific," will begin Sunday in Memorial Hall, and continue Monday at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Interested students may try out for any of 35 speaking parts or the chorus.

"South Pacific" will be presented Friday-Sunday, Oct. 28-30.

Student Summit

(Editor's Note: Results of a weekly Daily Tar Heel press conference with Student Body President David Grigg will appear each Thursday in Student Summit.)

David Grigg, student body president, challenged students yesterday to do something about "the pitiful plight of our campus political parties."

"Campus parties are not representative of the people they are trying to represent," he said. "Now, before fall elections, the students have a perfect opportunity to boost political parties," it was emphasized.

"If our political parties don't straighten up," said the President, "they are not going to be able to survive. The situation has steadily gotten worse. The basic responsibility for correcting it lies with the students themselves, not the parties."

Grigg praised the leaders of the Student and University Parties, Bill Harris and Rick Overstreet. "Both chairmen are capable and sincere," he said, "and I challenge them to make their parties representative of the whole campus."

The political party system is important to a large campus as an eliminator of candidates, according to Grigg. He said the campus has been "extremely fortunate" in recent class, student legislature, and study body elections despite the party situation.

Smith Heads Demo Group At Carolina

Norman E. Smith has been named head of a Students for Kennedy organization, Bob Huffman, president of the Young Democrats Club, announced yesterday.

"Many of us are familiar with the fine work that Smith did in organizing the Kennedy forces for the Mock Democratic Convention last year. I have talked with him and find that he remains vitally interested in Sen. Kennedy's candidacy. Therefore, I am appointing him and feel that we are fortunate to be able to secure his leadership," Huffman said.

Smith, a 20-year-old junior from Chevy Chase, Maryland, is majoring in political science and has previously served on the Student Legislature, Publications Board and the Academic Affairs Committee.
