

McFadyen Commander Of AFROTC

Donald W. McFadyen, a Senior from Sanford, has been appointed Cadet Group Commander of the AFROTC Unit at the University for the fall semester.

He carries the responsibility of commanding the 225 cadets who are receiving officer training under the AFROTC program.

McFadyen's Deputy Commander is Samuel S. Woodley, a law student who hails from Columbia, N. C.

The actual planning of the cadet activities is done by the Operations Officer, Cadet Arthur Dozier, of Raleigh.

The eighteen Seniors who have been selected for the advanced AFROTC program have had three years of leadership training.

In addition to McFadyen, Woodley, and Dozier, the other Seniors are: Cadet Captain Franklin Adams, Rowland, N. C.; Cadet Captain Robert Scott, Pinetops, N. C.; Cadet Captain David Parker, Denton, N. C.; Cadet Captain Gordon Basnight, Columbia, N. C.; Cadet Captain Robert Siliman, Newton, Mass.; Cadet Captain Robert Wilkinson, Greensboro, N. C.; Cadet Captain L. C. Sanford, Mocksville, N. C.

Highway Study To Use Univac

An answer to the problem of "city traffic jams" may be the result of a research contract awarded to UNC.

The contract for $39,250, with the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, will be conducted by Professor F. Stuart Chapin, Jr., of the department of city and regional planning, and director of the urban studies program. The purposes of the contract will be for the study of the relationships between the routing of highway systems and land development in urban areas.

The study will use a number of North Carolina cities as a laboratory area including Greensboro, High Point, Lexington, Thomasville, and Winston-Salem.

The entire study is being designed to utilize the University's Univac 1105. Dr. Thomas G. Donnelly, mathematical statistician, is assisting in these aspects of the program.

Ferglinghetti, Dos Passos Among Lecturers Slated At N. C. State This Year

Four speakers, ranging from a San Francisco "beat" poet to an historian-novelist, are scheduled this year in a series of lectures at N. C. State College.

Lawrence Ferlinghetti, John Dos Passos, John Ciardi and Malcolm Cowley will be presented in a series titled "The Contemporary Scene."

Tickets to the first lecture on October 26 are now available at the N. C. State Col-

Ex-Student Has TV Production

A former UNC student, Ruth George Dobson, is the producer of a series of sixteen history lecture programs entitled "Great Cities" given on WUNC-TV, Channel 4, at 3:00 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons and re-run again during one of the evening broadcast hours of the week.

The program, of lecture and visual style, travels back in time to visit a city during that period in history when the city attained greatness as a center of civilization.

THE CHURCH KEY

The Westminster Fellowship Supper Forum will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m. The program is entitled "Christian Beliefs and Presbyterian Doctrine."

Students are also invited to attend the Student Bible class at 9:45 a.m.

Canterbury Club will meet at the Chapel of the Cross at 5 p.m. and go to the Phillips Farm for the annual fall picnic. Entertainment will be provided by the "Carolina Gentlemen." Any cars that can be supplied for transportation to the farm will be appreciated.

Wesley Foundation is sponsoring a retreat this weekend. Students will leave Wesley House Saturday at 10 a.m. and return about 2 p.m. Sunday. The topic for study and discussion will be "The Church in the College Community." Dr. Warren Ashby of the Woman's College Philosophy Dept. has been chosen to lead the retreat.

Dr. Ashby will also speak at the Wesley Supper Forum Sunday night at 5:45 p.m.

A brunch for unmarried graduate students will be given at Hotel House Sunday at 11 a.m.

Dr. Donald R. Matthews of the Political Science Dept. will address the Newman Club Sunday on the "Religious Issue." Discussion will follow. Supper lege Union. Individual season tickets are $2 and students may obtain them by writing the Library Committee, College Union, N. C. State College, Raleigh.

Opening the series in October will be John Dos Passos. His first novel, "Three Soldiers" (1921), was called a strongly pacifistic account of the impact of war upon three representative Americans.

Reviews of this novel indicate the critical and satirical tone characterizing much of his work.

Ferlinghetti, scheduled to speak November 16, is labeled a mercless, but often cheerful satirist. One of his best-known poems is titled "A tentative description of a dinner to pro-

As a man who is "Waiting for the war which will make the world safe for anarchy," the California poet sees the poets and writers of the fifties "revolving against Romanticism."

Ciardi, set to appear February 27, is a poet, essayist, critic, editor, translator and educator.

As a Poetry editor of the "Saturday Review," he has been seen as a man "strongly concerned with establishing high critical standards" for the magazine.

Malcolm Cowley, scheduled to lecture April 18, is described as "a man of letters who has been thoroughly involved in the literary milieu."

The four lectures, to be held in the College Union Ballroom at 8:15 p.m., are sponsored by the State Library Committee.

1949 Grad Is Aid To Ervin

A 1949 UNC graduate has been named secretary to Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., it was announced this week.

Attorney John E. Giles, of Morganton, will succeed Harry Gaton, of Statesville, who has been named executive director of the North Carolina Bankers Association in Raleigh.

Giles, 35, is a native of Charlotte. He received his B.S. degree in commerce from UNC in 1949 and the LL.B. degree in 1951.

As an undergraduate, he headed the Philanthropic Debating Society; in the law school he was president of Phi Alpha Delta Law fraternity.

All-Stars Picked For Political Science Majors

NEW YORK (UPI)—The 10-man College All-Star basketball team which will play the New York Knickerbockers in an exhibition game Oct. 14 has been completed with the addition of Bob Boozer, former Kansas State star and a member of the victorious United States Olympic quintet at Rome.

Others on the team are Oscar Robertson, Jerry West, Darrall Imhoff, Tom Sanders, Dave Budd, Bill (Pickles) Kennedy, Ron Johnson, Jackie Moreland and Len Wilkens.

'Internship' Not Exactly Toil

By BILL HOBBS

This past summer provided five UNC student "Political Interns" an opportunity for observing congressional activities first-hand for five weeks and then travelling across the country in a Volkswagen microbus to take part in the hectic, confused operation of the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles.

These five—three seniors, one graduate student, and one junior—were participating in the University's third annual summer program for gifted political science majors.

The program ordinarily consists solely of "intern" work as a member of the office staff of a congressman for several weeks during the summer between the students' junior and senior years at Carolina.

This summer's convention activity, though, not only cut short the usual stay in congressional offices, but offered the group a chance to extend their studious activities to one of the greatest of all American political spectacles—the national nominating convention.

Somehow, by some understandable process perhaps similar to osmosis, the reporter gathered that these students did not consider the summer's activity as sheer studious drudgery or entirely concentrated mental activity.

Possibly this intuitive knowledge was transmitted by their smiling relation of the time Senator Kennedy (being at this moment sorely set upon by a vast and fearsome horde of admirers in a L. A. hotel) escaped his pursuers by ducking into a small secluded office. When he asked one of the office workers where he was, the Senator blushed to learn that he had entered one of the scarce hide-outs of those rabid "Draft Stevenson" people. He left quite hastily.

This not-at-all-tangible feeling of pleasure in their activities of the summer was also conveyed when they joyfully

UNC Professor Of Greek Finds Retirement Satisfying

"I miss the classroom—but it's beside. He is doing some writing and is re-reading Shakespeare and other writers he read in college to see the difference in his perspective then and now.

"Primarily, I'm just doing what comes along," he said. "I believe that a man must be something before he can do something. And being something is enough of a job for now," the professor smiled from under his familiar green eyeshade.

The rewards of teaching, according to Epps, are found in having fun teaching. "I always aimed to help the student get the material. What he did with it was his own business."

Johnny Couldn't Read And Now Can't Write

PRINCETON, N. J. (UPI) — Johnny can't write either, according to the chairman of the English department at Princeton University.

Many of today's college students use a kind of "no-English" that defies constructive criticism, according to D. Willard Thorp.

"A red pencil used against it becomes as impotent as a word in a folk-tale which has had a spell put on it," Thorp writes in the Princeton quarterly publication.

Thorp offers these examples, culled from examination papers in a sophomore course in American literature:

"A change from the optimistic view of the individual man as put forth in transcendental philosophy to the pessimistic view of man kind fought with inviolable morals living a superficial life with no directions such as T. E. Eliot fitting bug-eyed from Antwerp to Brussels to London."

"The American ideal seemed to hang void in the twenties, a shameful thing because Americans must forage ahead."

Eliot was not the gung-ho American as Whitman. Whitman was one of the best examples of this 'nature into thought' angle."

Thorp says: "Listened to with half an ear the samples sound impressive, authoritative, and even powerful. Though their authors were composing complete nonsense, they put down these jumbled words with the self-assurance of an advertising copywriter or an editor of Time."

"A teen-ager dropped into my office today, much worried about his inferiority complex and anxious to adjust. He seemed to think I was a sincere-type professor and had some know-how in interpersonal relations."

Laws Subject Of New Book Publication

A new volume, "Publication Laws of North Carolina," has just been released here by the University's Institute of Government.

It was written by David S. Eyns, assistant director of the Institute and a graduate of the UNC School of Law.

The purpose of the book is to bring together all statutory requirements of publication of legal notices. It is designed for use by public officials, newspaper publishers and lawyers.

The book may be used either as a reference work for information in this particular field or an index for the General Statutes for the information not included in this volume.

NYU Offers 10 Hints For College Freshmen

Ten pieces of advice for college freshmen come from the dean of New York University's Washington Square College of Arts and Science, Dr. Thomas Clark Pollock. The advice is intended to help new students to get the most out of, and stay in, college.

Here are Dean Pollock's suggestions:

—Get your bearings by talking with your faculty advisor before classes begin.

—Find a quiet, private place for study. Schedule your study hours.

—Take a preliminary look through your textbooks to get an overall view of the coming term's work.

—Instructors are human, and they approach their subjects differently. Try to anticipate their requirements.

—Watch your health. Get enough sleep and eat regular meals.

—In taking lecture notes, don't miss the forest for the trees.

—Do some supplementary reading. "A" students do.

—If you miss important points, don't put off asking for help. Early "repair work" pays off later.

—Face up to your weaknesses and do something about them. You may need special instruction in reading or composition.

—Ration your extra-curricular activities.
