DeGaulle Wins Nuclear Battle

PARIS—President Charles de Gaulle Tuesday won a bitter parliamentary battle for approval of his plan to give France a $1.2 billion independent nuclear striking force.

The controversial project, which an alliance of left and right-wing political parties tried to kill, became law after an opposition censure motion was defeated in the National Assembly.

Hoffa Bids For Kennedy Friendship

WASHINGTON—Teamster President James R. Hoffa has made a bid to improve his relations with President-elect John F. Kennedy. The two have been feuding ever since the Senate rackets inquiry into the Teamsters.

Hoffa's conciliatory mood apparently did not extend, however, to Kennedy's younger brother, Robert, who served as general counsel to the rackets group. A Hoffa aide said Robert was unfit for attorney general, a post for which he has been mentioned in speculation.

Kennedy said after the unexpectedly long White House conference that he raised the question of Eisenhower's availability and the President assured him he would be willing to be on service. Kennedy said he had no particular assignment in mind at present.

Last Lecture By Wallace Is Tuesday

Earle Wallace, assistant professor of political science at UNC, will be the next speaker in the Last Lecture Series on Tuesday, December 13, at 7:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall. Dr. Wallace will speak on the topic, "The Misconceptions of Politics."

Dr. Wallace was part-time instructor of American government at UNC from 1952 to 1954. He has done research in the fields of conservation, natural resources, American government and Congress.

"Politics, U.S.A." is Dr. Wallace's recently published work. He has also contributed articles to the "National Resources and an Informed Public" magazine.

"Dr. Wallace has been suggested by many as a speaker for the Last Lecture Series," said Bill Whichard, chairman of the Series' committee. "In a year in which everyone has been affected by politics, his topic should be of particular concern."

Tar Heels Winners Over UVa By 81-47

WHO'S GOT IT—Dick Kepley, Jim Hudock and Doug Moe fight with several Virginia players for a rebound in the first half of last night's action against Virginia. Kepley eventually got it.

Moe, Larese Lead Again

By HARRY W. LLOYD

North Carolina's Tar Heels gave an encore to their brilliant opening night performance here last night, demolishing the Virginia Cavaliers by 81-47. Frank McGuire's red-hot boys hit exactly half of their floor shots, 36 of 71, as Doug Moe led all scoring with 20 points and teammate York Larese scored 15. Jim Hudock, who tallied 11 in the first half, finished with 13.

The Tar Heels turned in a more polished game than their 77-61 win over LSU, grabbing a lead early and building it as high as 38 points at one time. Again it was an aggressive man-to-man defense throughout the contest that forced the visitors into shots they couldn't make. But Carolina's accurate, deft passes riddled the Cavalier press, leaving easy shots for UNC sharpshooters to take right under the backboards.

Virginia Scores First

The Wahoos cut the scoring ice first, with forward Gene Flamm dropping a jump shot with 30 second gone. Against the Cavalier pressing defense, Jim Hudock was left alone to tie the count. Doug Moe of Carolina and Gene Angel of Virginia exchanged baskets, as did Hudock and Tony Laquintano before York Larese sank a jumper to push the Tar Heels in front, 8-6, with 4:23 gone. From then on, a mad barrage of Carolina baskets forged the hosts ahead, and when Hudock hit a layup with 8:01 elapsed, the Heels were safely in front by 19-10.

The biggest Carolina lead of the first period came when Yogi Poteet crammed in a long jump shot with 2:13 left to run the tally sheet to 45-19 in favor of Carolina. The visitors made two charity tries before the first half ended with the score standing at 45-21 in favor of the heavily favored Tar Heels.

Heavy Substitutions

With such a commanding lead throughout the contest, McGuire could easily experiment with playing combinations. All of his players except center

Moe Leads Rebounding

The rebounding of Moe was another factor for the extreme Tar Heel success. The high-jumping senior pulled 16 off the boards, leading his team to almost complete domination. Carolina in total captured 61 rebounds, and Virginia managed only 30 saves.

Winter Quarterly Appears Tomorrow

The Carolina Quarterly makes its initial appearance on the campus this year with its Winter Issue, to be distributed Thursday at Graham Memorial, the Bulls Head and the Intimate Bookshop.

Richard Rickert, Quarterly editor, said, "The new look of the Quarterly will make it the best purchase of the week before Christmas vacation. It features an attractive red cover silk-screened by the staff. It will stand out even at Jeff's."

"And what counts on the inside is that this issue has the newest and best available writing done by students and other young writers associated with the University."

Critical Appraisal

One of the feature articles is a critical appraisal of the present campus architecture and development program. Author John Reuer, a student at the State College School of Design, asserts that the university architecture misses the functional and aesthetic needs of university teaching and will not meet growth requirements expected here in the next few decades.

Fiction in the current issue is represented by a farce-comedy, "Kiss the Book," by Guilbert A. Daley. With a dramatic sense of timing and humor, Daley handles the situation of a "village of northeastern North Carolina" when Negroes attempt to register for voting. The play was completed by Daley during the past summer term and became one of the hits of the Carolina Playmakers' summer season.

Other fiction includes a compact short-story about events leading to the lynching of a Negro Korean veteran who lives by impulse and indifference. Poems include selections from the recent poems of John Tagliabue's travels in Japan and two pieces by campus poet R. C. Cook.

FOR THE UNITED NIHILISTS

Members: Not Wanted

A new Carolina organization announces itself in the following notice to the Daily Tar Heel.

"This is to reveal the presence on campus of a new organization, the U.N., or United Nihilists.

"Unlike most organizations the U.N. has no charter, no officers and no purpose—only a loyal collection of transitorities, which seem to be members, apparently dedicated solely to the vagaries of an ordinary consciousness.

"Their activities, beyond the mere constitution of themselves as sheer denials in the face of an overwhelmingly oppressive contingency, consist strictly in the performing of utterly gratuitous actions, which stand as motional analogues to the loosely gratuitous character of consciousness itself, (a character, we might add, whose character it is to be without character).

"If you want to join, you can, although you won't be especially welcome: the U.N. in support of its doctrine of denial attempts to discourage membership.

"We don't do anything; we don't believe in anything; we simply are—there, and there for nothing, like existence itself. There might be a meeting sometime this month, somewhere in town, probably at Peter Ford's house, although I can't say for sure: (we never know for certain when or where we'll meet until actually we find ourselves doing it.)"

With Films Of Polar Adventures:

Arctic Hero Talks Tonight

He is one of the three living members of the twelve original American pioneers in the Arctic.

Beginning his lengthy career as an assistant on the Peary North Polar Expedition in 1908, Admiral MacMillan has made 35 trips to the Arctic since then.

He has been honored by Congress for "distinguished services in exploration," by the National Geographic Society for "valuable service to geographic education and science, by the Explorers Club and the Chicago Geographic Society.
