Stevenson Named UN Ambassador Demo Leader Delaying Decision Until Next Week

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President-elect John F. Kennedy Thursday asked Adlai E. Stevenson to join his administration as next U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, and Stevenson indicated he might accept.

He said, however, that he first wanted to consider matters connected with the assignment, including the question of whether he could draft certain people he felt were needed to strengthen the U.S. delegation.

"I have not accepted it (the nomination) pending a further talk," the two-time Democratic presidential candidate told reporters from the steps of Kennedy's Georgetown home, where he had conferred privately with the president-elect for 65 minutes.

Kennedy said he would meet with Stevenson for a final decision before the end of next week. Reporters who talked with the two got the impression at least that Stevenson was on the verge of accepting.

The 60-year-old former Illinois governor also had been mentioned prominently as a possibility for secretary of state. But Kennedy associates said some time ago that Kennedy was thinking more in terms of the U.N. ambassador's job.

Kennedy Elevates Position
Kennedy made it clear that Stevenson, if he took the job, would be one of the top foreign policy officials in the new administration.

"I regard this as one of the three or four most important jobs in the United States government," Kennedy said. "The United States ambassador to the United Nations must play a greater role in policy making."

He said the post was part of the cabinet as far as he was concerned and added the hope that Stevenson would attend cabinet meetings if he accepted. Henry Cabot Lodge, as President Eisenhower's ambassador to the United Nations, also attended cabinet sessions.

Lauds Stevenson Ability
After his conference with Stevenson, Kennedy said he had offered him the United Nations job because he believed that the importance of the world body deserved "increased emphasis in 1961."

"The whole field of U.S. policy will be affected by the judgment, energy and responsibility of the man who heads the American delegation, he said.

In his opinion, Kennedy went on, no American could fill the position with greater responsibility than Stevenson.

Stevenson was in the U.S. delegation to the U.N. after the war, before he ran for governor of Illinois in 1948.

Stevenson Respected Abroad
In pre-convention campaigning, Kennedy had said Stevenson would make a good secretary of state. It was generally believed Stevenson lost his chance for that job when he remained in the running for the Democratic nomination instead of swinging behind Kennedy.

Because of his two presidential campaigns and his wide travels abroad, Stevenson is well known and respected outside of the United States. His appointment as ambassador to the United Nations no doubt would be welcomed almost everywhere.

Kennedy also had a meeting Thursday with Dean Rusk, former assistant secretary of state for Far Eastern affairs and now president of the Rockefeller Foundation.

Rusk has been mentioned for secretary of state. He declined to say, however, whether he and Kennedy had discussed a possible post for him in the new administration.

Carolina's State Legislators

Eleven of UNC's delegates to the State Student Legislature gather before leaving for Raleigh where the session is meeting. During the three-day meet. 13 North Carolina institutions of higher learning will present bills to the student legislature. Music Dept. Sells Tickets To Traviata

Tickets are now on sale in Hill Hall for Verdi's "La Traviata," sponsored by the UNC Music Department, to be presented at 8:30 a.m. in Memorial Hall Jan. 14 and 15.

Miss Phyllis Curtin, nationally-known soprano of the New York Center Opera, will appear in the leading role of Violetta.

Chosen as understudy of Miss Curtin is Mrs. Rebecca Carnes of Chapel Hill, currently playing the title role in the rehearsals of the opera, directed by Prof. Wilson Mason of the Music Department.

In addition to the large cast of local and imported singers the University Chorus will perform the choral parts of the production.

Gene Strassler, a UNC graduate student in music, will sing the tenor role of Alfredo.

Mrs. Carnes is also cast in the part of Flora in addition to her understudy work.

Sayers Will Direct Men's Honor Group

Senior Bill Sayers was elected president of the Men's Honor Council for the spring semester in a meeting of the body Wednesday night.

He will serve until the next biannual election at the end of the spring semester.

Sayers is a member of Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity and Phi Eta Sigma, freshman honorary fraternity.

Past treasurer of the IDC, he is also a member of the Order of the Grail and the Society of Janus.

Economics Prof Receives Post

R. William Pfouts, UNC professor of Economics, has been elected vice-president of the Southern Economic Association at the annual meeting in Atlanta, Ga.

Professor Pfouts is chairman of Graduate studies in the School of Business Administration here. He edited a recently published book honoring Professor Harold Hotelling of the Department of Statistics at UNC. He is also a member of the Board of Editors of "Metroeconomica" an international economic journal published in Italy and of the Southern Economic Journal published in Chapel Hill.

Professor Pfouts is the fourth American ever to serve on the 16-member board of the "Metroeconomica."

Debaters In New York Tournament

The Carolina debate team are participating in the annual Hall of Fame debate tournament at New York University today and Saturday.

The squad is hoping to equal or better last year's performance in New York when it finished fifth among the fifty competing colleges.

Bill Imes and Haywood Clayton compose the affirmative team with Earl Baker and Mack Armstrong debating the negative side. Professor Donald Springen, debate coach, will accompany the group.

The national topic this year is "Resolved: the U.S. should adopt a program of compulsory health insurance for all its citizens."

On The Campus

All interested persons are invited to attend the meeting of the Rules Committee of the Student Legislature this afternoon at two in GM.

Canterbury Club will hold its Christmas party Sunday evening at 5:30. After supper there will be carols and tree-trimming. Each student is asked to bring a "useless" present for another student.

Rumor has it that unofficial sources have denied any connection with a statement to the effect that a spokesman for an unnamed party has opposed the furthering of an unrelaxed announcement not yet confirmed.

Individual Check Proposed; Tax Records To Be Examined

BY HENRY MAYER

A plan to check a list of "fraudulent" student voters against the Orange County tax lists has been presented by Elections Board Secretary Clyde C. Carter, in an effort to "preserve the integrity of our registration books."

Carter claims that "many student applicants have induced registration by making inaccurate and false statements in response to the queries of registrars." Approximately 600 of the 900 student voters come under Carter's heading of "temporary residents."

The Board of County Commissioners declined to take action on Carter's crackdown campaign, choosing to postpone discussion until their Jan. 3 meeting. The Elections Board has been asked to meet with the commissioners at that time.

The long-time secretary stated that he feels students "justify" their statements to registrars "on the ground that the election laws are harsh and unreasonable; in other instances, false statements may be made because the applicant does not fully understand the import of the question.

If Plan Approved
If Carter's plan is approved, a list of students registered in Chapel Hill and Carrboro precincts would be checked against county tax record and auto registration reports to determine the accuracy of statements made by applicants for registration.

Students believed to be guilty of making "false or inaccurate" statements would be sent a letter of warning, listing two alternatives:

"Either he could list his poll and property taxes with county lists next month or he could request in writing that his name

Present Facilities Inadequate

Undergrad Library Needs Space, Quiet

By DRENA EDWARDS

Space—lots of it. Quiet—lots of it, too. And stacks of books all around you.

These are three of the main advantages to be had with the proposed new undergraduate library as outlined by the head of the UNC Library, Dr. Jerry Orne.

As any student is aware, the Louis Round Wilson Library is not large enough to handle all the students who use it. It is difficult enough now to find room to study there without rubbing elbows with the boy next to you or kicking the girl across the table.

And, too, a certain amount of unavoidable noise goes with a large crowd in a small area. This situation is not going to improve as enrollment figures increase each year. Additional floor space is the only answer.

The proposed undergraduate library would be 40,000 square feet—four times the size of the present undergraduate room. It would contain the books now in the reserve room and the 15,000 titles in the undergraduate library.

Miss Mary Lou Lucy, head of the undergraduate library, said she hopes to move 50,000 titles into a new library. She intends to put more books on the open shelves and to arrange the stacks to provide numerous cut-off areas for studying.

It is no easy task to decide which books would be moved and which would stay. Miss Lucy and her staff, however, have been at work for more than a year and a half compiling lists of books to be duplicated and making out order cards for other new books that would be essential to a well-equipped undergraduate library.

Also, library personnel want to avoid a student's having to run back and forth between the two buildings. Possibly a tunnel will be built connecting them.

In discussing the undergraduate library's sharing a building with the student union, Miss Lucy said the plans include soundproofing and completely separate entrances. It is to be apart from the student union. "I will not be opening bottles and racking cue balls," Miss Lucy laughed.

Along this same line Assistant Librarian Olan V. Cook said that he had been a bit leery of the combination at first. However, he said the more he thinks about it the more it appeals to him in that it might serve to bring more students into the library.

Campus Parties Beginning For Christmas

Campus Christmas parties began Thursday with a party for underprivileged Negro children given by the Kappa Delta sorority and the Chi Phi fraternity.

Next Thursday the Kappa Delta's are giving another party for underprivileged boys and girls with the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. Monday the KD's travel to the women's ward at Dix Hill in Raleigh.

The Beta Theta Pi fraternity is entertaining 40 second graders from the Northside Elementary School this Saturday afternoon.

They will keep the seven-year-olds for two hours. Each brother and his date will be responsible for one child.

The children will see "The Littlest Angel" and be given a gift.

Play Santa
The Interdormitory Council and the Carolina Women's Council are playing Santa to 37 underprivileged Negro children Wednesday evening in the basement of Nurses' Dorm.

Delta Sigma Pi fraternity is planning to visit the orphanage in Oxford, North Carolina. They will hold the party there.

World News in Brief

Alabama To Fight Hard If Integration Is Ordered

Gov. John Patterson of Alabama announced Wednesday he intends to "resist, harass and interfere with the federal government" if a federal court should order school desegregation in his state.

"The bars cannot be let down," he told a news conference. "We in Alabama don't owe them the federal government a thing."

The recent admission of four Negro girls to two previously all-white schools in New Orleans left Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina and Mississippi the only states still maintaining full segregation.
