

Conference Swimming Championships Begin Tonight

Over 100 Athletes Converge On Pool

By RIP SLUSSER

The Atlantic Coast Conference swimming and diving championships open here tonight with the 1500-yard freestyle event at 8 o'clock.

Over 100 swimmers will converge on Bowman Gray pool for a crack at one of the coveted individual titles. There is no team championship at stake in this three-day affair, just personal honors.

During the regular dual meet season, North Carolina, Maryland and North Carolina State tied for the crown. All teams lost only one ACC meet—State beat Maryland, Maryland topped Carolina, and Carolina whipped State. Thus the tie.

Several records fell this season and it is likely that many will fall during the next three days. With the 1500 being the only race tonight, things will really get under way Friday morning with the preliminaries.

Leading the assaults on the ever changing record book will be State's gregarious Pete Fogarasy and Carolina's own Harry Bloom and Vince Simonton. Fogarasy is a threat in the breaststroke events, Bloom in the freestyles and Simonton in the butterfly events.

The schedule of events is as follows:

INTRASQUAD GAME
Coach Frank McGuire will have his cagers play an intrasquad game in Woolen Gym today, beginning at 4 p.m. It is open to the public.

McGuire has suggested that students who are unable to purchase tickets for the Duke game Saturday might witness this contest and catch a last look at the greatest duo in Carolina history—Doug Moe and York Larese.

61 Teams Compete For Top Honors In Campus Tourney

By Richard Soles

With regular season play having ended earlier in the week, intramural basketball playoffs for campus honors begin today.

The top two teams of the four divisions will play off for their respective divisional title. The four divisions are: Fraternity Blue, Fraternity White, Dormitory, and Graduate. The winners of these separate divisions will then play for the All-Campus championship.

Tom Johnson, assistant athletic director of intramurals, said that there would be trophies given to the winners of the individual division winners, under the point system. He added, however, that no trophy will be presented to the All-Campus winner.

Figures showed that there was a decrease in the number of teams that were participating in basketball this year, from 132 to 117, as compared with 1959-0. However, the figures also showed that the cage sport ranked No. 1 in total number of student participation.

In the tournament, 61 teams will be vying for division honors, with Fraternity Blue having the most, 22. The Dormitory teams enter 18 teams into the tournament; Fraternity White, 13; and Graduate teams, 8.

Here is the tournament schedule for Thursday:

- COURT 4:00
- 1—ATO Coolies vs. Sig Chi-2 (W)
 - 2—DKE Dogs vs. Pi Lamb-2 (W)

'Duke Can Fear Nothing But A Good Game Of Basketball'

By Tom Camp

What precautions has the University of North Carolina taken to assure a peaceful game with Duke Saturday?

Ask that question of Coach Frank McGuire and you're liable to be sorry you ever spoke.

"What do you mean by precautions?" asks McGuire.

"Do you think we really need them here? Listen, I've got complete confidence in our players and Duke's. I have tremendous respect for Johnny Frye, Youngkin, Kistler, and Hurt. They're not only very good basketball players, but are gentlemen as well."

Coach McGuire speaks with very high regard for Duke's Johnny Frye, a starter after guard Jack Mullen failed to meet academic requirements.

"Johnny was with me last summer at a retreat for Christian athletes. He's the kind of kid every coach likes to have on his team."

However, Carolina has added a few barricades in the tiny home of the Tar Heels. Guard rails have been placed in front of the bleachers, and chains in front of the passageways to the court stay strung throughout the entire game. Anyone leaving the stands is forced to leave the gym.

"But we really don't need barricades and policemen in our house," McGuire says.

"I take it on myself to see that no fighting breaks out. Just last week I chased a boisterous fellow from behind Maryland's bench.

Two years ago I cost us a game with Duke by asking the students to control themselves. We had a 6 or 8 point lead with just a few minutes to go. I took the mike and asked the students' cooperation. They got quiet, but the silence hurt us. My team lost its fire and Duke went on to win.

"Still, I'd do the same thing again. I've lost games in the last second, on tap-ins, foul shots, and every way imaginable. As long as we've played the game on the square, I can look the opposing coach in the eye and say, 'We'll meet agin.' When I get to the point that I can't lose as well as I can win, I'll give up coaching."

The Tar Heels have a whole week of silence before the big nose Saturday. In their last game at Charlotte they pulled away from Clemson in the closing minutes to win by a narrow six points.

Saturday's meeting will be the third of the year for the two nationally ranked teams. In the first meeting the Tar Heels walked off with the Dixie Classic championship trophy. In the second meeting at Duke, the Blue Devils captured the win. That game ended in a last nine seconds free-for-all.

"The suspensions placed on Larry Brown, Donnie Walsh, and Art Heyman have killed this game," says McGuire, speaking of Saturday's meeting.

"Doug Moe, Dick Kopley, and York Larese will be playing their last game, and those boys looked forward to seeing Heyman again. He (Heyman) is a fine player and a threat, and my boys wanted to prove themselves with him in there.

"It should be a fine game of basketball. The Duke boys will be out to prove themselves without their star.

"But when you get right down to the hard facts, this game means nothing as far as anyone is concerned. It's a shame, too."

Duke has lost its other Big Four games on the road, losing a close one to State at Raleigh and a runaway to Wake at Winston-Salem. Heyman played in both those games.

McGuire indicated that he would not personally make an appeal to the Carolina student body to control themselves and keep the game free from fistuffs.

"That would be a slam on every student and on the University," the coach emphasized pointedly.

"I'm not going to request that students who have always given their team a whole-hearted effort, and in a sporting way, change their way of conduct. They'll conduct themselves as they always have; as members of the Carolina family. Duke has nothing to fear but a good game of basketball."

Tip-off time Saturday will be at 2 P.M. The freshman teams from the two schools will meet at 12 o'clock.

CHAC States Its Stand On Newspaper Stories

The Chapel Hill Athletic Club, an organization which supports the University of North Carolina athletic teams by making various awards and in other ways, has passed a resolution deploring "those journalists who would inflame that which should be minimized, either out of improper judgment, or for personal gain."

The action was taken following press comment that was made after the recent North Carolina-Duke basketball game in Durham when a free-for-all fight involving players and spectators took place.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that any judgment or condemnation of players or spectators involved in such an incident is solely the responsibility of the officials, the concerned institutions, and their conference heads. The Chapel Hill Athletic Club feels that those journalists who would inflame that which should be minimized, either out of improper judgment, or for personal gain, or for any other reason have not measured up to their duty to their fellow men nor to the trust invested in them as members of the press."

The point of the resolution appeared to be that allegedly intemperate comments in the press endangered the athletic relationships between the two schools and increased animosities.

Complete text of the resolution, which was mailed to athletic directors of all the schools in the conference, follows:

"WHEREAS, the Chapel Hill Athletic Club has a great respect for the wholesome goals of College Athletic Competition and WHEREAS, the Chapel Hill Athletic Club has a particular respect for the Administrations, faculties, students, and alumni of Duke University and the University of North Carolina and WHEREAS, the Chapel Hill Athletic Club deprecates the unfortunate incidents which occurred recently during the playing of the Duke-Carolina basketball game; it is cognizant of the fact that athletes under the pressure and strain of championship competition in a strenuous athletic event may become short-tempered to a point of regrettable action.

"THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that those who would capitalize on such an incident between two great institutions, who are and have been forever bound by close friendships, wholesome competition and close cooperation, would do a great disservice not only to each institution, but to each other's overall purposes, and would also strike a blow to college athletics everywhere.

The Terps gathered a total of nine individual titles in last year's ACC championship meet and three of these champs have been benched by the sophomores. Chief among the second-year men is Bob Moulder who was picked on the mid-season tentative All-America squad. Moulder wrestles in the 123-pound division. Match time is 8 o'clock in Woolen Gym.

Wrestlers To Oppose Maryland

Maryland's defending ACC championship wrestling team invades Chapel Hill Friday night for an encounter with the grapplers of Carolina and Coach Sam Barnes.

Terp Coach William E. "Sully" Krouse rates this year's Maryland contingent as the greatest he has had in 14 years. An outstanding group of sophomores is the basis for Krouse's enthusiasm.
