UNEMPLOYMENT STILL ON RISE

WASHINGTON—Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg reported yesterday that the number of people drawing unemployment compensation rose by 31,700 to a record high of 3,422,300 in the week ended Feb. 18.

He announced the new total in urging Congress to act immediately on legislation to help areas suffering from chronic unemployment. He told the House banking subcommittee that aiding the jobless was one of the gravest domestic problems confronting the government.

Goldberg said 40 per cent more married men are unemployed now than a year ago. He said the present unemployment rate is 17 per cent in agriculture, 15 per cent in mining and 22 per cent in construction.

SPAACK CALLS FOR NATO UNITY

PARIS—Outgoing NATO Secretary General Paul-Henri Spaak called Friday for closer political unity in Europe and attacked the United Nations General Assembly as a "temple of hypocrisy."

Spaak, a socialist who shortly will return to political life in Belgium, spoke at a foreign press association lunch to mark his departure after four years in the NATO job.

On The Campus

Interviews for positions in the Freshman Class Cabinet will be held this Monday in the Woodhouse Conference Room in GM. Applicants whose last names begin with the letters A through H will be interviewed between seven and eight p.m.; last names beginning with I through R between eight and nine p.m.; and last names S through Z between nine and ten p.m. All interested students in the Freshman Class are urged to come for interviews.

The YWCA will hold interviews for all executive positions Monday through Wednesday 2-5 p.m. All interested girls are asked to fill out a questionnaire and sign up for an interview in the Y office.

The last presentation of "Stars and Galaxies" will be given at the Morehead Planetarium this Monday night at 8:30 p.m. This program is about the modern concept of the universe. Tuesday night "Easter the Awakening" will open for its 12th season and will run through April 10.

The North Carolina Personnel and Guidance Assn. is now holding its 34th annual meeting in Peabody Hall on the theme "Guidance for the Transitional Decade."

Undergraduates in the physical sciences now have the opportunity to participate in a program of biochemical or plant physiological research sponsored by the Field Corps Department at N. C. State College and the National Science Foundation. Interested students are requested to contact Dr. Arthur Roe of the U.N.C. chemistry at 942-3060.

The short subject scheduled for showing along with "Blue Angel" at the Chapel Hill Film Society program Sunday night has been changed. Originally slated was "New York, New York." This has been replaced by Martha Graham's dance interpretation of Aaron Copeland's "Appalachian Spring."

Heart Appeal

THE HEART of the Campus Chest is the heart research project by Dr. Daniel T. Young at N. C. Memorial Hospital. Part of the money collected during the annual Campus Chest drive will go to this project. Dr. Young and an assistant are working on the project now.

Sudanese UN Troops Clash With Congolese; Flare-Up Follows Seizure Of UN Radioman

Fight Rages Thru Afternoon, Night

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (UPI)—Sudanese United Nations troops battled Congo army soldiers through Friday afternoon and into the night in a bush country fight that started when the Congolese tried to seize a U.N. radio operator.

U.N. command headquarters in Leopoldville, busy trying to prevent a flare-up in its own backyard between angry Tunisian U.N. soldiers and the Congolese, reported at least one Congolese soldier killed in the jungle clash at Banana, 225 miles west of Leopoldville on the Congo River mouth.

A single cable to headquarters reported the incident started when Congolese soldiers grabbed the radio operator. He managed to send out an alarm and a Sudanese detachment responded.

McKeown Seeks Truce
Bad blood has been brewing between Congolese soldiers and the Tunisians since Sunday when Congolese fired over the heads of a Tunisian patrol and forced the patrol to surrender 12 rifles.

As friction increased between Congolese and the troops sent in by the United Nations to police the country, U.N. troop commander Gen. Sean McKeown of Ireland sought to arrange a truce between rival Congolese factions.

He flew to Stanleyville, seat of the Soviet-backed regime set up by Antoine Gizenga to try to stop incursions into the rival territory by Gizenga troops.

SEES ASIAN PROGRAM SOON
TOKYO (UPI)—U. S. Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II said Thursday he expects to see an Asian productivity organization launched soon, with Japanese leadership playing an important role. "The success of the productivity program in Japan has been a factor in the spread of productivity concepts through the other free nations of Asia," he said.

Budget Outlook Appears Favorable

By WAYNE KING

The outlook for UNC's budget requests, specifically those for faculty salaries and an undergraduate library-student union, appears much better than two months ago, an interview with Davis Young, chairman of UNC's committee on state affairs, indicated yesterday.

The Board of Higher Education's cutbacks have been superseded by the recommendations of the state advisory budget commission and those recommendations are more nearly in line with the budget originally proposed by the administration here.

"I am greatly encouraged by the progress that has been made to date," Young said, commenting on the present state of the budget.

According to Young, "there seems to be a general awareness of educational need in Raleigh—this is reflected in Governor Sanford's 'New Day' program for the public school. We are a state institution and stand to gain from this program." Young pointed out that the recommendations of the advisory budget commission have taken "an obvious priority." Over half of the general fund appropriations and bond issues for capital improvements are slated for education. The state affairs committee chairman felt that "this emphasis on the academic welfare of our state has heightened the realization that the university must be supported with all available resources."

"This apparent consciousness of educational goals should enable the University to procure a greater percentage of its budget requests than in past years," he added.

The two phases of the budget controversy which have most interested Carolina students have been faculty salaries and the undergraduate library-student union building.

The University has requested $3.6 million for faculty salary increases for the biennium; the advisory budget commission recommended approximately $3.2 million in this category.

Commenting on this recommended appropriation and its meaning, Young stated "Of course, we are hopeful that the general assembly will move to restore the difference, but we are still in a better position than we were a few months ago—and certainly better off than we were two years ago, when we got an even bigger cut in requests."

The requests for an undergraduate library-student union totaled about $2.6 million. The commission recommended that $1.6 million be placed in a bond issue.

The remaining million would be self-liquidating, probably by an increase in student fees.

Asked whether he thought the general assembly would pass favorably on this recommendation, and whether UNC would get a union, Young stated that he "honestly felt we are going to get a student union."

He went on to say "in the past when we have requested a union, we have been turned down almost immediately in Raleigh. This year, we have gone past a big hurdle in passing through the advisory commission on the budget."

"A number of other state-supported colleges have also impressed lawmakers with needs for student unions on their various campuses. I have no reason whatsoever to believe the appropriations committee of the general assembly will overrule our request."

"They realize the request both for an undergraduate library and a student union is a valid one."

Asked whether student support for the proposed budget had been a factor in deciding the outcome of the advisory budget commission's recommendations, Young stated: "If we do get an increase in faculty salaries and a new library-union, it will be for two reasons. First, because the administration stuck behind us all the way, and secondly because students have given their loyal support to the idea."

"This same support will encourage the general assembly to pass, or increase the advisory commission's recommendations."

"There is a lull at present until the bill comes before the appropriations committee, sometime in a few months."

"However, this is not the time to cease our efforts, as students, to come as close as we possibly can to getting our requests," Young concluded.

PHYSICS LAW—NO MUTTS
A new law of physics: no dogs in building.

"We have had several occasions where dogs in the classrooms caused some confusion," said Dr. Charles Dolan of the physics department. "I am afraid students will be bitten while trying to chase the dogs out."

Opening For GMAB President Disclosed

BY LOUISE CASGRAIN

Students interested in applying for the positions of president and secretary of Graham Memorial Activities Board have been urged to fill in application blanks available at the information desk in the student union and turn them in Monday.

"I feel that this is a real opportunity for imaginative leadership," GMAB President R. V. Fulk said yesterday. "I would like to encourage anyone who is interested in serving in either of these two capacities to come down before Monday and apply for one of these positions."

GMAB presents such programs as the Petite Musicales, the Petite Dramatiques, the free flicks series and the GM Series which brought The Weavers, Marcel Marceau and Sound and Fury to campus this year.

In addition GMAB produces the calendar, offers a current affairs series and presents weekend entertainment in the Rendezvous Room.

The new president will be in charge of appointing committee chairmen for the various committees. He also will select a presidential assistant, replacing the former position of vice president this year.

Duties of the secretary of GMAB are serving as secretary to the board and appointing a secretary to handle various correspondence and reports.

JFK Sets Up Air Planning Board

WASHINGTON (UPI)

President Kennedy Friday set up a special task force to draft long-range national aviation goals designed to help America establish a safe, efficient and economical aviation system.

The President named Fred M. Glass of New York to head the task force study, dubbed "Project Horizon." Glass, executive vice-president of the Empire State Building Corp., is an aviation expert and has served on a number of study groups in the field.

The President announced his action in connection with swearing-in ceremonies for Najeb Halaby, administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency.

In a letter to Halaby, the Chief Executive said there must be prompt development of goals which re-define the technical, economic and military objectives of the government throughout the broad field of aviation.

Campus Presidential Hopefuls May Participate In TV Debate

BY LINDA CRAVOTTA

The possibility of having a "Sevier-Harris" television debate similar to the Nixon-Kennedy debates is causing much comment among student politicians.

The idea originated at the Di-Phi debate last week with a suggestion made by Mary Jeanne Reid, graduate student in political science.

"I have not been approached about participating in such a debate," stated Bill Harris, Student Party presidential candidate. "However, I would be more than willing to meet my opponent publicly to trash out the issues of this campaign."

University Party candidate, Bob Sevier, has declined to make a statement until he has conferred with the University Party leaders.

David Grigg, president of student government stated:

"I believe the televised debates to be an excellent means by which students may see both candidates. Had this debate idea been popular last year, I would have been happy to have taken part in it."

Jonathan Yardley, editor of The Daily Tar Heel said:

"I think that a debate of this type would be a very good idea because I feel that in recent elections the most important issues have been kept in the background."

"Instead, we urge issues such as laundry machines in the dorms, quiz files, how much it would cost to get shirts washed . . . but nobody has pressured the candidates to stand up and speak out on some of the vital issues; issues which in their importance will be transcended years later."

"The honor system, fraternities, student-faculty relations and the necessity for increased stress on academics are the issues which need our attention."

"I think that such a debate, if the candidates are willing to state publicly the full extent of their feelings, could be of tremendous value in bringing these issues to the fore."

"I certainly hope that these debates can be arranged."

It is the general consensus of opinion among UP and SP leaders and supporters of the television debates that they should be held along the identical lines of the Nixon-Kennedy debates.

This would entail broadcasting the program direct from the studio with no audience present, having a panel of non-partisan journalists to ask the questions and putting a time limit on the amount of speaking time each candidate is allowed a question.

The possibility is also being discussed of having the vice-presidential candidates available for answering questions pertaining to them.

Seminar Open

English, drama, or radio-TV majors interested in working for honors in writing may join a weekly seminar program which provides guidance and criticism.

Members of the class must have a project for the year. Currently three students are working on novels, one on a 3-act play and two on TV scripts.

In the past a number of students have had work published, and two novels resulting from last year's class are now with agents.

Earlier this year the Playmakers produced a one-act play, the work of a current student, Frank Murphy.

Advisors to the group are John Ehle, RTVMP; Tom Patterson, Dramatic Art, and Miss Jesse Rehder, English.

The course gives three hour credit for the year, and can be dropped at any time without penalty. Interested students may contact Miss Rehder at 942-3827 any morning.
