Texas, New Orleans, Little Rock, Atlanta, Georgia, and North Carolina.

Mr. Paramsothy said that young Negroes were now setting the tempo in the fight for equal treatment with whites.

Small groups of whites were also admitting the need for integration, he added.

"But it will take a long time before all these people can break down segregation," he said.

Mr. Paramsothy will submit a report to the international students' conference, which sponsored his trip.

* * * * *

The above story gives an indication of how foreign colored students and the nations they represent, look at the racial situation in the South. The terms "gradual," "Southern way of life," and "the courts are trying to legislate morals when they force integration down the South's throat," mean absolutely nothing to the foreign visitor; all he sees is that the Negro is being discriminated against and that the majority of the South is attempting to continue the tradition of discrimination as long as possible. Southern arguments about "Northern agitators," and "Northern hypocrisy" sound like simple evasions of the issue and cruel relationalizations to the foreigner unused to our glorious way of life.

On the other hand, Mr. Paramsothy appeared to be slanting the interview somewhat. Why was nothing said about Chapel Hill? Why was nothing said about Atlanta, where the buses, parks and golf courses, the libraries, and Georgia Tech are all integrated, and next fall will come the public schools and all major stores' lunch counters. What about other towns in North Carolina, and in Texas?

We feel that Mr. Paramsothy went out of his way to make the southern United States look like a region of racial bigots—not that he doesn't have plenty of justification, but it appears he puffed and puffed, blowing up the truth, until it was no longer the truth, but only an indiscriminate mixing of facts and stereotypes.

The South must change rapidly, and it cannot afford to discourage criticism from "outsiders" merely because they are outsiders. But the aim of speedy integration will not be served honorably by reports such as Mr. Paramsothy's, which take certain areas of the South out of context and by these areas, paint the entire South the color of blood red.

University Wins Award For Gaining Financial Support

The University has won a prize and recognition for "sustained performance" in gaining financial support from its alumni.

The American Alumni Council lists the University at Chapel Hill as one of 67 public and private colleges or universities in the nation as winner for "distinguished achievement in the development of alumni support." Over 2,000 institutions of higher learning in the country are in the competition for awards.

This is the third consecutive year the University here has won such an honor. It coincides with the three times "over hundred thousand dollars" successful campaign for funds in the Alumni Annual Giving Program at Chapel Hill.

E. J. Evans, mayor of Durham, has been chairman of the unrestricted giving program at Chapel Hill in 1959, 1960 and 1961—each time it has gone over $100,000 a year.

Annual Giving

Tom Bost Jr., of Chapel Hill, is director of the Alumni Annual Giving Program in the University.

Top prize for sustained performance was won by Georgia Tech in Atlanta. Among public institutions recognized for sustained performance were Ohio State University and the University of North Carolina. Each institution receives a certificate and cash prize. UNC's cash prize is $100.

Members of the University's Alumni Annual Giving Executive Council, besides Evans and Bost, are Ben C. Trotter, Leaksville; Harry H. Montgomery, Wilmington; Henry N. Patterson, Manhasset, N. Y.; William B. Harrison, Rocky Mount; Voit Gilmore, Southern Pines; Howard Gray, Winston-Salem; Dail Holderness, Tarboro; Dr. James Davis, Durham; Chancellor William B. Aycock, Dean James L. Godfrey, Kenan Professor E. D. Palmatier, Dean Charles Henderson Jr., Charles M. Shaffer, and J. Maryon Saunders, all of Chapel Hill.

FIERCE

It is Generally regarded as One of the Fiercer Animals. I am not frightened of Fierce Animals in the ordinary way, but it is well known that, if One of the Fiercer Animals is Deprived of its Young, it becomes as Fierce as Two of the Fiercer Animals. In which case "aha" is perhaps a foolish thing to say.—A. A. Milne.
