Herbert Matthews No Stranger To Hot Controversy

By DAVID WITHERSPOON

Herbert Matthews, who speaks in Howell Hall at 8 tonight, is no stranger to controversy. Much of his life has been spent in the middle of shooting controversy. But the controversy he is involved in now may be the biggest of his life.

Before Fidel Castro seized control of Cuba, Matthews visited him in his mountain stronghold. The New York Times editorial staff was not the only journalist favorably impressed by the Cuban revolutionary. He is now, however, virtually the only major reporter who insists that Castro is not a Communist puppet.

In his book published this year, "The Cuban Story," Matthews takes the position that the Cuban revolution was forced into anti-Americanism and into a close relationship with the Communist world by United States mistakes and halfheartedness in dealing with the revolutionary movement.

He holds that Castro was not in the beginning and is not now a puppet of the USSR. In 1959, he says Castro was "instinctively and emotionally anti-Communist." Castro's revolution was based, he says, on a genuine concern for human need.

Background For Talk

It is against this background that Matthews will speak here on recent events in Cuba.

For his position Matthews has come under fire from several segments of the American press. He has been called "emotionally biased" by "Time" magazine. A cartoon in the "National Review" showed Castro sitting on a map of Cuba, saying "I got my job through the New York Times."

The "National Review" has also said that Matthews either "has not the faintest understanding of how Communism functions" or has "developed a school boy crush on a powerful six-footer with a straggly beard."

Among Matthews' staunchest supporters is the "New Republic" magazine. This magazine agrees with Matthews that the issue is not the Communization of Cuba, but the goals which the revolution worked for. Matthews' supporters agree with his conclusion, "We are going to have to live with Fidel Castro and all he stands for while he is alive, and with his ghost when he is dead."

Matthews graduated from Columbia University in 1922, after he had served in the Tank Corps during World War I. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Matthews will speak earlier this week to the WCUNC Social Science Forum.

His speech here is sponsored by the International Relations Committee of the YM-YWCA and Pi Sigma Alpha, political science honorary.

SG Passes $250 Homecoming Bill

Homecoming activities got a boost from Student Legislature Wednesday night when the body appropriated $250 for the Homecoming queen and her court. It was one of eight bills passed in the special session.

One of the appropriations gave $142 to send six Carolina delegates to the National Collegiate Council for the United Nations this weekend in New York.

Two major items were passed to be included in next year's Student Government budget. They were:

Scholarship Provision

Provision for a $500 scholarship for the president of the student body. John Randall, sponsor of the proposal, argued that presidential duties prevent the president from carrying a full academic load. Therefore, Randall said, the expense incurred by the president in making up the deficiency "has placed the office financially beyond the reach of otherwise qualified candidates."

Provision to include the Goettingen Scholarship program in the budget at a cost of $2,966, was also passed. This year Legislature has appropriated $1,486. Order of the Graill, $100; Faculty Scholarship Committee $1,000; and Campus Chest $900.

The bill's sponsor, Henrietta Brown, said that the Campus Chest wants to branch out its activities now that the Goettingen program is established.

Not Without Inspection, Kennedy Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy and Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru called Thursday for a nuclear test ban treaty "with necessary provision for inspection and control."

But Kennedy told Nehru, according to a communique, that the United States is unwilling to accept another uncontrolled moratorium on atomic tests.

The communique made plain that Kennedy had ruled out any acceptance of an uncontrolled test ban because of the Soviet resumption of tests "which broke the previous moratorium."

The joint communique winding up a four-day visit by the Indian leader said their talks had been "especially pleasant and rewarding."

Invited Kennedy to India

Kennedy and Nehru promised to "keep closely in touch with each other in the months and years ahead." The prime minister had said earlier that he had invited Kennedy to India and hoped the President could make it a year from this winter. But Kennedy told reporters he had no plans now to go there.

The communique said that both men exchanged views on the desirability of halting nuclear testing. It was issued a few hours after Nehru told a National Press Club audience that the Soviet tests were "very harmful—a disastrous thing."
