Politicos Cry For Dorm Group

The lower quad rang last night with politicians and their supporters crying "We want dormitory representation. We want Randy Gilliam."

The rally, beginning at 10:30, followed the Homecoming Pep Rally. About 40 boys milled around the speakers while more than 100 leaned out of the windows of Lewis, Graham, Aycock, Stacy and Everett to listen. Some of Gilliam's supporters carried torches of newspaper and kerosene.

The crowds gradually broke up just before 11 p.m. when the first shout for parties was heard. The politicians left.

Dormitory advisors were mingling through the crowd watching closely for further demonstrations. They were so prominent that a few got more cheers than the politicians.

Gilliam's speech emphasized the "crying need for social life in the dormitories." One of his supporters Joe Masi, said, "This is the year the dormitories can make a choice." He said the fraternity freshmen represented only one-ninth of the freshman class. "Let's march on the madras draped parthenons."

Mike Putzel also spoke, mentioning his recent fight with the University Party. He claimed that a vote for the independent, Gilliam, was a vote for the dorms.

The first briefing seminar for the students will be held Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the "Y," when the students will present their slips stating their intention to attend the seminar. At the second briefing session Wednesday evening, Tartt Bell of the American Friends' Service Committee will speak on the "Role of the Afro-Asian Nations in the U.N."

In New York briefing sessions have already been scheduled with the Cuban and U.S.S.R. delegations. The UNC seminar will join with a similar seminar group from Duke at the U.S. mission for a briefing on the American stand on nuclear testing.

In addition, other briefings are being scheduled with delegations from the various neutralist nations.

Cadets Attending Game En Masse

The AFROTC Cadet Corps here will pay tribute to Veterans Day, today, by attending the LSU-UNC football game in unity. The 221 cadets will sit in a special section reserved for them and their dates in observance of this occasion.

Veterans Day was established by Congress in 1954 in honor of servicemen and women who have served their country in the military forces. Prior to 1954 Veterans Day was officially designated Armistice Day.

For Defeated Bond Issues CU Will Renew Bids For Money

By DRENA EDWARDS

Next year the Consolidated University will present a budget request to the Advisory Commission that will include the capital improvements defeated in Tuesday's bond election.

CU President William Friday said Thursday "We believe that these programs are so vitally essential to the strength and development of the university that we shall have to ask for their approval again."

If the Advisory Budget Commission approves the requests they will be sent to the 1963 General Assembly for action. By 1963 the CU's long-range capital improvement program will be two years behind schedule.

Friday estimated that even if the legislature acts favorably, it would probably be 1965 before any of the capital improvements were completed.

The defeated bonds would have meant $13.5 million to the CU. Friday said that matching funds from the federal government and student fees would have brought the total to $18 million.

Meanwhile Friday added, the CU "will have to slow down some." Enrollment, research and extension services will feel this pinch he said.

CU Meets Friday

The CU officials who met with Friday in his office on Thursday were Chancellor William Aycock of UNC, Chancellor Fred Caldwell of State College, C.U. Secretary Fred Weaver, C.U. Treasurer A. H. Shepard and Claude Teague, a consultant to Friday.

Chancellor Aycock yesterday said that "At UNC we are going to do as many makeshift things as possible within our resources."

More specifically he said "We are planning to go ahead with renovating Cobb Dorm for women. We will explore the possibilities of additional reading room space at least on a temporary basis. Perhaps we can expand the eating facilities in the new Craige and Ehringhaus dorms."

Aycock said that while the University will try to make do with these temporary setups, "we will be looking for more permanent solutions."

LIVE AND LEARN

EVANSTON, Ill. (UPI)—You don't have to tell oil deliveryman Richard Reith not to believe everything he reads.

Reith looked at the gauge on the storage tank in the basement of a variety store which showed a 1,000 gallon capacity.

He pumped 1,000 gallons into the 500-gallon tank and it took firemen an hour to clean up the mess.

Infirmary

Maple's Offspring

Red Cedar's papa was a maple or so it seems. This little 11' red cedar has sprung up in the crook of a low limb on a maple tree beside Carr dorm. Dr. C. R. Bell of the botany department explained that leaves and other organic material must have gathered in the hollow allowing the red cedar seed to plant its roots. The tree may live until it has exhausted the minerals in the material, he said. —Photo by Wallace

For Dorm Rooms

Acting Dean of Women Mrs. Martha DeBerry yesterday asked all women students desiring dormitory space for the spring semester to sign up their dorms before Thursday, Nov. 16.

A $25 room deposit and a room reservation card are required to reserve a room, she said. "Failure to sign up for a room during this period means the student may not be able to live in the room of her choice," Mrs. DeBerry said.

She also said that women students who have been living in town who wish to move into a dorm for the spring, should come by her office, 202 South Building, before Thursday.
