Faculty Speaker Sees US-USSR Relations Better

The changes are "moderately hopeful" for improved relations between the United States and the Soviet Union in the near future, in the judgment of a University political scientist.

Speaking before the University Faculty Club luncheon this week on "War, Peace, and Nuclear Stra. tegy," Andrew Scott, associate professor of political science, said that war between the two countries was not probable the next three to eight years.

The improved outlook is based on the U. S. present policy of "mutual deterrents," he said-a shaky stability reached when each side maintains arms at a point that keeps the other in fear of retalia-

Security Perilous

When one side falls behind, under these circumstances, the security of the situation becomes more perilous, Prof. Scott said. "This is too fine a balance to be stable in the long run. We would need a significant improvement in Soviet-American relations for safety. And the Soviets would need to change some of their objectives.

"Among these it must renounce the idea of all-out war as a solution to problems and also the idea of indefinite expansion of Soviet influence." Despite this situation, Prof. Scott said the chances for improved relations seemed "moderately hopeful."

"Actually there are no good policies in this situation," he declargerous than others. From this time on man is simply going to have to live in the shadow of something frightful happening . . . . It might be that our time has about run out, but we can still work and hope

Air Force Sights Raft

POINT BARROW, Alaska - An Air Force C-54 Thursday sighted a life raft with 11 men from a downed Navy transport aboard it. The Air Force said the raft was sighted 30 miles southeast of an ice island research station in the Arctic Ocean. The 11 men had taken off from the ice island, Arlis II Wednesday for a four-hour flight to Point Barrow. An air and sea search was started when the plane failed to arrive.

The Air Force plane which sighted the missing men said they had signaled that no one was injured when their transport craft went down and that no emergency rescue operations were needed. The men in the raft told the search plane by radio that they were looking for an island in the ice pack in which they could chop out a short runway so a rescue plane could land and pick them up.
