Delegates Urge UNC Host Congress

Regional NSA Delegates Meet In Greensboro

By BILL HOBBS
Special to the DTH
GREENSBORO — Student delegates from 23 colleges and universities from North Carolina and Virginia yesterday urged that the 13th National Student Congress be held at UNC.

Meeting at the Woman's College of the Consolidated University, the delegates of the Fall Regional Conference of the Carolinas-Virginia region of the National Student Association resolved that this would "provide a much needed stimulus to student thought and action in this region."

The conference also ratified a new constitution drafted by the UNC campus NSA committee. Both measures passed by unanimous vote of the delegates.

Emergent Areas

The conference, whose theme was "the importance of the university in emergency areas," heard a telegraphed message from Gov. Terry Sanford, praising NSA's role in "altering the entire American student body to the challenges which await their attention in the areas of educational, political, social, and cultural affairs and international as well as national scene."

Attending the conference as official delegates from UNC were Dwight Wheelock, Robin Britt, Scott Summers, Bill Hobbs, Bill Straughn and Tim Tetlow.

Also attending from UNC as unofficial delegates, NSA regional officers or panel members were Bill Harriss, Hank Patterson, Yoshio Teshima, John Brent, John Randall and Norman Smith.

The NSA congress, which the conference urged be held at UNC, is the annual national meeting of delegates from all NSA member schools which can send representatives.

The 1961 congress was held at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Wis.

Inexpensive Facilities

The resolution urging that the 1962 congress be held at Carolina cited the inexpensive facilities at the University and the support of state and University officials.

Friday night, the conference heard John Thompson of the World Confederation of Teaching Profession, with an address on the role of higher education in the emergent countries.

Castro Admits He's Communist

HAVANA (UPI)—Premier Fidel Castro settled once and for all Saturday the question of his politics: He is dedicated to the principles of communism and has been since his college days.

"I'm a Marxist-Leninist and I'll remain one till I die," he shouted during a five-hour television address early Saturday in which he announced the merging of his 26th of July movement with the Communist Party.

Castro explained he had hidden his belief in communism from the Cuban people and his American friends for years "because otherwise we might have alienated the bourgeoisie and other forces which we knew we would eventually have to fight."

His speech stripping away the last veneer of democratic trappings were in sharp contrast to his statement he made six months after he overthrew dictator Fulgencio Batista on Jan. 1, 1959: "Ours is not a Communist revolution."

Television Marathon

Saturday in his post-midnight television marathon he said that when his tiny band of rebels made its first abortive attack on the Moncardo barracks at Santiago on July 26, 1953, "the revolutionary thinking was completely formed."

Castro followed Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev in rejecting the idea of the cult of the personality.

and said he had discarded the probability of himself becoming a "caudillo" boss . . . "for which renunciation I congratulate myself."

The premier said he was "politically illiterate" when he attended high school "but today I'm a convinced revolutionary."

"In college I had my first contacts with bourgeois economic policies and right then I began to dissent," he said. "Thereafter I read the Communist Manifesto and other Marxist books."

Castro said his 26th of July movement and the Popular Socialist Communist Party would be fused into the "integrated revolutionary organization" to be known as "the united party of Cuba's socialist revolution."

One Party

He said the one party would have a Marxist-Leninist platform adjusted to the conditions of the Cuban revolution and those of the Cuban nation.

"Every honest Cuban will have a place in its rank and file," he said. He emphasized that the most important thing were the schools for Marxist training now operating in Cuba.

Castro traced the process of the Cuban revolution and encouraged other Latin American nations to follow his example.

Man Is Held On 1st Degree Murder Rap

Bobby Lee (Lucky) Moore was charged with first degree murder Saturday in the death of William Ellis, son of the owners of the Village Cafeteria. Bill Ellis was fatally shot at 12:30 a.m. during a card game in the cafeteria.

According to Ruffin Harville and Graham Cotton, who claim to have seen the shooting, Ellis was confronted by Bobby Lee (Lucky) Moore of Carboro. Moore alleged, by asked Ellis what he intended to do about a $1000 debt he owed Moore.

Ellis threw up his hands and said, "Do what you are going to do." Moore shot him near the base of the neck with a .32 caliber pistol, said the reputed witnesses. Ellis, according to Harville and Cotton, jumped to his feet and staggered out the back door of the restaurant.

Moore and his wife left the cafeteria by one door, and Harville went out by another to look for Ellis.

Harville says he found Ellis lying on the brick terrace in back of the Ackland Art Museum. Ellis still had a weak pulse, but he made no other response.

Harville called the police and sent for an ambulance. Ellis was reportedly already dead by the time the ambulance arrived.

Minutes later, Moore was arrested at his home in Carboro. He was taken to the Chapel Hill jail.

Looked By Ellis

According to a statement Moore's wife gave to Chapel Hill police she and her husband looked for Ellis in his car to see if they could help him.

They then got into Moore's pickup and drove home. She said that she did not see her husband get rid of the pistol.

Harville said that he was looking for Ellis at 10 o'clock. He and Ellis had been classmates in high school. Harville saw Ellis' car parked by the restaurant. He found Ellis inside playing cards with Graham Cotton, a Negro whom Ellis had met through his furniture business in Carboro. Moore was sitting at the table with them. Moore had his head in his hands and was not playing cards. Reportedly he had been drinking heavily. Shortly before midnight Moore called his wife to come and get him. According to witnesses Moore shot Ellis shortly after her arrival at 12:15.

Ellis was not married. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Ellis, and his sister, Mrs. Stanley Peele.
