US Gets Powers For Abel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States exchanged U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers for Russian master spy Rudolph Abel on a lonely Berlin bridge Saturday and secretly flew him home to freedom and a happy reunion with his family.

The 35-year-old flier will be kept from newsmen and the public until he has been thoroughly questioned by U. S. authorities about his ill-fated flight over Russia on May 1, 1960.

The Russians claimed that Powers, imprisoned for aerial espionage in August, 1960, was released "to improve relations between the Soviet Union and the United States. But State Department officials cautioned that it had no major cold war significance.

In a series of fiction-like developments that began unfolding before dawn, Moscow freed both Powers and Frederic L. Pryor, a young American student who had been held by East German authorities since August 1961.

In return, the Soviets got back Abel who was convicted in 1957 and sentenced to 30 years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary for conspiring to send U. S. defense and nuclear secrets to Russia.

Spectacular Powers, whose spying mission over the Soviet Union sparked one of the most spectacular diplomatic incidents of the cold war—a bitter exchange between former President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev—flew back to the United States almost as soon as he was placed in the hands of American authorities.

But the time of his arrival and his future whereabouts were shrouded in secrecy as tight as that which first surrounded his espionage flight over Russia.

White House Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, who announced the exchange at 3:17 a.m. EST, would say only that he was en route home and would arrive some time Saturday or Sunday.

No Announcement He said flatly that there would be no announcement of the time or place of arrival.

It was known, however, that U. S. officials planned to give Powers time for a family reunion and then conduct an exhaustive interview before letting him go home. He is not expected to be available for questioning by the press before 10 days or two weeks.

Powers, Moscow reports said, was released last Thursday from Vladimir prison, 110 miles east of the Russian capital. He had served less than two years of the 10-year espionage term handed down by a Soviet court on Aug. 19, 1960.

Chappell Scores 36 Deacs Trim Tar Heels, 87-80

Late Carolina Rally Falls Short

Wake Forest withheld a late North Carolina rally Saturday to paste an 87-80 defeat on Coach Dean Smith's Tar Heels.

Once again it was huge Len Chappell who paced the Demon Deacon attack and almost singlehandedly overpowered the smaller Carolina team. The 6-8, 240-pound tower connected on 16 of 24 shots from the floor and added four of five from the foul line for 36 points to lead the scoring for both teams.

The visiting Deacons captured a 47-37 halftime advantage and stretched the lead to 53-39 in the opening minutes of the second period. But the home team was not to be denied. They chipped away at the Wake Forest lead and with 8:50 remaining were behind only 68-63.

Two minutes later the Blue and White trailed Coach Bones McKinney's crew, 71-69. Deacon guard Billy Packer then hit on a jump shot to make it a four-point lead. From then on it was all Chappell. He lowered the boom on UNC by scoring seven markers in two minutes and 18 seconds. When Chappell hit a lay-up for his 36th point, the Baptists held an 80-73 lead.

Wild Finish The final two and a half minutes were even wilder than the first 37 and a half. Though down seven points, the Heels refused to quit. Donnie Walsh connected on a jump shot to close the gap to five, but Butch Hassell—cousin of UNC frosh starter, Pud—countered with a jump to push the lead back to seven.

Mike Cooke then hit a lay-up and added a foul shot for a three-point play to close the gap to four. Again Hassell scored a pair, this time from the foul line, and Wake led 84-78. UNC's Mike Cooke was thrown out of the game for fouling Hassell deliberately. Only 46 seconds remained when Hassell sunk his free tosses.

Carolina's final points came on a pair of charity heaves by Larry Brown, who tied Jim Hudock for UNC scoring honors with 21 points. A foul shot by Bill Hull and a two-pointer for Dave Wiedeman gave the Deacons their final seven-point win.

The Wake Forest guards, Packer and Wiedeman, followed Chappell in scoring with 14 points each. Wiedeman hit on six of eight shots from the floor and added two points from the foul line. Packer was true on six of eleven attempts from the floor. He missed only one of up two points on the line.

Four Tar Heels hit for double figures. Don Walsh hit for 13 and big Jim Donohue added 11, ten of them coming in the last half. Donohue was near-perfect from the floor. He missed only one of six shots during the regionally televised contest. The top Tar Heel scorers, Brown and Hudock, had 8-15 and 7-13, respectively from the floor.

Heels Hot From Floor The Tar Heels returned to their dead-eye shooting of the season's first eight games when they moved to the top of the nation in field goal accuracy. They pumped in 32 of 62 shots and showed a 51.6 shooting percentage. From the foul line they hit only 16 of 24 for a 66.7 mark.

Two UNC Staff Members Have Volumes Published

Jessie Rehder—like the squirrels, the Old Well and Davie Poplar—is firmly established at UNC. She isn't nearly so well-known as they nor has she been there nearly so long, but for at least a dozen or so students each year she is the pivot about which everything else at the University revolves. She teaches writing. They are students in writing.

Old students keep in touch with her and new students—more than can be accommodated—each year turn up for her writing courses and her classes on the modern novel.

On January 26, The Odyssey Press published her new book on writing, "The Young Writer at Work." The book is aimed as a text to be used in colleges and universities and is also an anthology of good short stories.

The book may not teach one how to write, but after reading it and working the numerous assignments one will at least know, by the success or failure of one's assignments, whether one can write. In that sense the book offers just what young writers need to develop their craftsmanship. For it is all there: the lessons in style, plot, character, locale, viewpoint; everything, in fact, that is commonly the stumbling ground for beginning fiction writers.

Story of Students

"The Young Writer at Work" is the story of students who want to write, of students as they are learning to write, of students who eventually do write.

Students take creative writing courses for all kinds of reasons and all kinds take creative writing courses and they are all in this book, the hoodlums, the teases, the talented and the very talented. There are numerous UNC writers represented in "The Young Writer at Work."

Nothing helps and worries writers more than the reading of good writing. It helps them because it makes them want to write as well and it worries them because they become afraid they can't.

Famous Writers and Others

Complete stories included in the book are "The Alligator" (previously unpublished) and "The Proud and the Virtuous" by Doris Betts; "The Field of Blue Children" by Tennessee Williams; "The Use of Force" by William Carlos Williams; "Eveline" by James Joyce; "The Lost Beach"

and "The First Supper" by Louise Hardeman

"Miss Brill" by Katherine Mansfield; "The Day After Tomorrow" by Charles Nesbit; "The Saints in Caesar's Household" by Anne Tyler; and "The Tonsil Operation (at Age Six)" by Cherry Parker.

There are also long and short excerpts from the work of F. Scott Fitzgerald, Thomas Wolfe, Mark Twain, Carson McCullers, William Styron, Max Steele, Normal Mailer, Betty Smith, Hemingway, Faulkner and many others.

Excerpts from student and post-student writing is also abundantly displayed in the work of Ralph Dennis, Wally Kuralt, Hugh A. McEachern, Leon Capetanos, Leon Rooke, and others designated only by their initials.

NSA Sponsors School Study

The National Student Association has established a program whereby college students can spend a week at a Southern Negro College and observe campus life. Applications are due before Feb. 17.

The purpose of the program, according to national affairs vice-president Paul Potter, is that there will be a "greater understanding of the contemporary South and the problem of Negro education."

The college which will be visited is Tougaloo Southern Christian College near Jackson, Miss. This school, founded in 1869 and with a present enrollment of 500, has been deeply involved in many current civil rights questions. In 1961, nine Tougaloo students were the first from Mississippi to be involved in a sit-in movement.
