Bennett Says Odd Combinations Are Part Of Planning

White Bricks Cannot Be Used On UNC Buildings Any More

By JOE HODGES

J. S. Bennett, University Director of Operations, yesterday offered some explanation for the clash of brick colors in some buildings on campus now under construction.

The annex of Hill Hall, Music Building, in red brick as contrasted to the yellow brick of the present building, has caused quite a bit of consternation from some campus factions.

In a recent article in the DTH, the following opinion was expressed concerning the minds of the designers:

"Esthetically speaking, their minds must be a howling wilderness."

The different type of brick is not the result of the absences of planning, but is part of an overall positive plan to beautify the campus. "We've had some atrocious architecture around here in the last 50 years, and the planning committee is now taking action to correct it and see that future structures are properly planned and built," Mr. Bennett said.

He explained that many of the light colored brick buildings on campus were built with little architectural refinement and do not meet the required construction standards which have since been established by the state.

North Carolina state laws require that all brick used in state institutions be obtained in this state. Since there is no light colored clay in the state, university buildings must now be constructed of red brick.

Light-colored brick buildings, in most cases, are not fireproof and all present campus construction according to state rules must be fireproof. The non-fireproof buildings will eventually be replaced with red brick fireproof buildings in the colonial architectural style, such as is evidenced in the building between South Building and the Library and in most of the existing dorms.

Old East, Old West, and South have already been rebuilt within their original walls and now meet state specifications. Because of their historic significance, these buildings will be preserved in this form. The buildings that were built in the 1920's however have no historical significance, nor architectural beauty that would justify preserving any part of them. Alumni Building, for instance, is not fireproof and contains five different major architectural styles. Carr, built according to the wishes of its donor, is likewise a hodgepodge of architectural efforts.

Because of fund limitations, however, many of these buildings will probably remain in use for many years. Some, like Caldwell, are considered firetraps and have been equipped with large independent fire escapes in order to allow their continued use in relative safety.

Hill Hall is not the first building to have an annex in a different color brick. Hopefully, it will someday be converted to all red brick with colonial styling similar to Peabody Hall which has been almost surrounded by this new styling and has only one rear corner of yellow brick exposed. Red brick fronts are also proposed for Swain and Davie.

When asked about future plans for university building, Mr. Bennett explained the grouping of buildings of different fields of study to make them more convenient to students who will be mainly concerned with that one subject area. Similar to the medical complex, a science complex will center around Wilson with the new Botany building at its side and the new Geology-Geography building behind it. The arts, including music and drama will most probably be centered in the area between Hill Hall and Ackland, where a theater may be built.

A coliseum type of building, complete with classrooms and offices in the basement, is being considered for the area now occupied by the Ram Varsity parking lot. "Memorial Hall and Woolen Gym have always been handicapped as far as size is concerned," Bennett said. This new building, which would probably have to be subsidized by the Federal government, would house both Air Force and Navy ROTC units.

This same planning committee which is also concerned with the parking problem (over 30 per cent of students have cars) has the additional job of landscape planning. "We always try to keep enough trees in our planning to keep the campus naturally beautiful," Mr. Bennett added.

It looks as if student need not be dismayed by temporary architectural incongruities; they're all part of a far-reaching, well thought-out plan.

Ruffin Residents Protest Change To Freshman Dorm

By RICHARD BURNS

"How would you feel if you woke up one morning and read in the paper that you have been evicted from your neighborhood?"

This is the question of the residents of Ruffin Dorm, who woke up last Thursday morning and read in the Daily Tar Heel that the administration planned to make Ruffin one of the all freshman dorms. Their eviction came as a shock.

Mrs. Kennedy Wows Indians

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Jacqueline Kennedy, a "knockout" in white satin, dined with Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru Tuesday night after a day that saw her hand out lollipops at a children's hospital and feed bamboo shoots to Nehru's pet pandas.

The First Lady was Nehru's guest at a small formal dinner for 26 on the first official day of her visit — one supposed to be quiet but which proved crowded and colorful.

Her costume changes ranged from bright kelly green linen with hairbow to a full-length evening gown, cut low in back with twin wide shoulder straps, her hair in banks over her forehead and a diamond brooch above.

but spirit runs high at Ruffin and the "Ruffinites" weren't about to take it lying down. "The students spontaneously called a meeting," said Roger Asher, chairman of the "Save Ruffin Committee," and "it wasn't something a few of us started," he added. The first thing the group did was to see Bill Long, Assistant Dean of Student Affairs, Thursday afternoon. That night the committee was officially started with "a great number of students volunteering their help."

The committee is following the advice of Long who said they should submit a proposition of their grievances along with an alternative plan.

Petition Of Displeasure The group is also circulating a petition stating that the residents are displeased with the administration's handling of their case and that they do not wish to be evicted.

One of their grievances was the abruptness of the announcement. Said Barry Craig, a member of the committee, "a lot of friendships have been formed here. We are a homogeneous group . . . The housing office can give no guarantee of unity when we are moved." Another Committee member, Gerry Good, pointed out that Ruffin had won the dorm participation trophy last year and was "well on the way to winning it again this year."

Strong's Reasons Rebuffed The committee was in general agreement as to their disapproval of the arguments which Assistant in Student Affairs George Strong presented to them regarding the selection of Ruffin as a freshman dorm.

Another point which the Committee brought up was the fact that they as freshmen wouldn't have wanted to be segregated from the upper classmen. They also said that this year's freshmen in Ruffin were "100% in agreement that they were glad we (upper classmen) were here."

In summing up the Committee's views on the subject, Barry Craig said "we feel that the choice of our dorm as an all freshman dorm without our notification is inconsistent with the University's principles of student participation in student affairs."

SP Platform Calls For Dorm Activity, Academic Emphasis

Spring Talks Planned By Fraternities

Faculty and fraternity members will meet here Saturday to discuss such topics as deferred rush, the 50 per cent rule, and the role of the Inter-Fraternity Council.

This conference is a follow-up on the Mid-Pines Student-Faculty Fraternity Conference held at Southern Pines last May, and the topics will be evaluated in the light of last year's findings.

The conference, financed and sponsored by national Sigma Nu fraternity and its local chapter, will bring about 25 UNC faculty members and 65 UNC fraternity members face to face to consider many of the problems of fraternity life.

Starting at 1 p.m. in Peabody Hall, the conference will be divided into six groups which will go to six different fraternity houses to hold their discussions. At 6 p.m. all members will hear the National Executive Secretary of Sigma Nu, Mr. Richard Fletcher as he addresses the banquet in the Carolina Inn Ballroom.

The office of Student Affairs will compile the results of the conference. As an outline for the meeting they have presented the three general topics of The Fraternity in Scholarship, The Fraternity in Discipline, and The Fraternity in Finance. Dean Long said that the conference should offer more "face to face consultation between fraternity and faculty members than there has been in a long time."

U.S. Cautious Toward N-Ban, Kennedy Says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy told Democratic congressional leaders Tuesday that the United States would take a "realistic" approach to a nuclear test ban and general disarmament at the Geneva conference opening Wednesday.

The leaders quoted the President as saying that this country would try to "secure agreement on a complete disarmament program under effective international control and, to this end, to seek the widest area of agreement at the earliest possible date."

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said if any agreements are reached, the United States is ready to put such disarmament measures into effect immediately.

"We believe this to be a realistic approach to the need for a beginning to the end of the nuclear arms race and we hope it is an approach that will be shared by all the nations at the conference," Mansfield said in a statement issued after the weekly legislative meeting at the White House.

The statement appeared to be a new U. S. call for Russia to forego any effort to turn the 17-nation disarmament conference into a propaganda circus. The President and other U. S. officials have issued similar demands in recent days.

The latest American statement came as Western officials in Geneva reported that Russia appeared ready to attempt a propaganda coup. Their skepticism was reinforced by Soviet publication of nuclear proposals without advance notice to the United States or Britain.

In his statement, Mansfield said the President "made clear the determination of our negotiators to seek realistic avenues of agreement that will permit the world to move forward from this time of nuclear peril to a more secure and promising future."

DEAN CARMICHAEL

Police Search Saigon Home Of UNC Dean

The apartments of two UNC professors teaching in South Viet Nam were searched Saturday morning by a squad of at least 30 Vietnamese police, government agents and soldiers.

The apartment of a third American professor, Dr. Stanley Milot of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., was also searched.

The UNC professors, Dr. Katherine Carmichael, Dean of Women at Carolina and Dr. Frank Durham are in Viet Nam to teach for one year under the Smith-Mundt Act.

Dr. Durham, who has taught English literature at Saigon University since August, said he "looked out the window and saw the driveways around the house swarming with men, most of them in uniform. They apparently were searching houses all up and down the block."

He said that he and his wife "saw them checking around Miss Carmichael's apartment, who lives alone, and called out to her to make sure she was all right. She said she was."

Police Police

Dr. Durham said that the police "were polite, but they searched very thoroughly . . . They said at first they were looking for a thief, then one said they were looking for a prisoner."

Four policemen were posted outside the apartment building following the raid. Said Durham: "I believe we are under very close surveillance. We haven't protested formally or anything," he added, "as far as I know, we're not suspected of anything."

An investigation of the incident was begun by the U. S. embassy. There was no official comment however.

The three professors all live in the same apartment building. Two Vietnamese men, an adult and a 17-year-old, live with Dr. Milot and were arrested by the police.

The incident is probably related to the Feb. 27 bombing of the presidential palace by two rebel fighter planes. The apartments searched are only a few blocks from the palace and the planes flew directly over them during the attack.

None of the Americans were arrested.

Infirmary

Those in the infirmary yesterday included Betty Smith, Phyllis Bowers, Margaret Parrish, Judy Fuller, Judith Harlow, Serena Parks, Lindell Upp, Sandra Strahum, Suzanna Johnson, Roy Pons, Richard Hayes, Richard Brand.

Party Pushes Degree In Fine Arts

The Student Party aimed at greater dormitory participation in campus government and more activities for dorm students in their 20-plan platform adopted at a party meeting Monday night.

Communication between the different areas of the campus also was stressed as the party proposed the expansion of the communications committee and the improvement of dormitory newspapers.

In academic affairs, the platform promised action toward securing a well-known literary figure in residence, work toward the establishment of a fine arts degree at UNC, and the publication of a booklet describing courses from the student's point of view.

The establishment of libraries of basic texts in the dorms and of a central quiz file under the control of the communications committee, and the revision of the academic affairs committee so that membership would be limited to students of outstanding scholarship, were also called for.

The SP pledged active support of the National Student Association and promised more publication of NSA activities and an effort to make NSA more representative of American students.

Berlin Talks Are Fruitless At Conference

GENEVA (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met Tuesday in the third straight day of apparently fruitless talks on Berlin. Gromyko indicated later the Russians have stiffened their stand on the isolated city.

Rusk and Gromyko conferred in "businesslike" manner for three hours. But indications were the talks failed to reduce East-West differences on Berlin and other key issues before the opening Wednesday of the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference.

Gromyko told newsmen after the lengthy discussion that Moscow's proposal for a broad settlement based on a German peace treaty would be preferable, by far to an isolated accord on Berlin.

Gromyko's stress on this point appeared to foreshadow a new Soviet attempt to frustrate U. S. and British desires for a limited accord on Berlin and indicated a Russian campaign for a broad settlement that would recognize the sovereignty of Communist East Germany.

"An agreed solution based on a peace treaty would be the best solution," Gromyko said.

Harry Golden To See Performance Of Play

The Playmakers have scheduled two holdover performances of "Only In America" for Monday and Tuesday nights due to the "best pre-opening ticket sales of the season."

Harry Golden, editor of the Carolina Israelite and author of the best-seller from which the script was adapted, will view the production but has not disclosed which evening he will attend.

"There's nothing quite so frightening as seeing yourself portrayed on the stage," Golden has remarked.
