Three Mexican students sponsored by the State Department arrived in Chapel Hill yesterday for a visit which is part of a tour designed to give them an acquaintance with American processes in government at the university, municipal, state and national level.

They will stay in Chapel Hill until Sunday and will live in Avery Dorm. They are accompanied on their tour by a State Dept. escort and interpreter, Mr. Francisco Lanza.

The visiting students are Francisco Del Prado, 34, a third year student in Political Science and Public Administration; Roberto Ducoing, 23, second year student in Political Science; and Eduardo Reinhart Thome, 22, third year student in Political Science and Public Administration. Yesterday morning the students visited a political science class and held a brief question and answer period, ate luncheon at the Carolina Inn as guests of the University, and took a tour of the campus arranged by ATO fraternity.

Their itinerary for the remainder of the week calls for a visit to the School of Education, a visit to the Planetarium, a trip to the State Capitol in Raleigh, a tour of student government activities and panel discussion with student government officers at Graham Memorial, and a tour of the Institute of Government. An international dinner, sponsored by the Cosmopolitan Club will be held Saturday night at 6:30 at the Presbyterian Student Center.

Mathers Withdraws From Editorial Race

Clotfelter-Wrye, Stepp In Runoff

By Harry W. Lloyd

Senior Mike Mathers, who took a surprising victory in a hurried write-in campaign for the Daily Tar Heel editorship in Tuesday's elections, announced yesterday that he could not be a candidate in next week's runoff.

In a statement released to the Tar Heel, Mathers said that he had discovered that he would not be able to return to UNC as a special student next fall after graduating with a B.S. in Journalism this spring.

With Mathers out of the race, the ballot for the runoff will match Ernest Stepp against the co-candidates, Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye.

Official returns gave Mathers a total of 1,629 votes, as against 1,171 for Clotfelter-Wrye and 1,151 for Stepp. In winning the election with a write-in campaign, Mathers collected more votes than current editor Wayne King got while running unopposed last year.

Mathers, who had been approved by the Publications Board but had not been recognized by the Elections Board as an official candidate, was planning to appeal to the Constitutional Council for recognition yesterday so that his name would appear on the run off ballot against Clotfelter-Wrye.

However, before he could go before the council, he learned from the Journalism School Dean, Norval Neil Luxon, that school policy prevented his returning next semester as a special student. He would also have been prevented from serving as editor if he were a graduate student.

Because Clotfelter-Wrye did not capture a majority of the votes cast, they could not be the winners without defeating Stepp in a runoff. Election law demands that the candidates for the Big Four offices and Tar Heel editor be elected by a majority.

There will also be a runoff for vice-president between Mike Lawler and Larry McDewitt on Tuesday.

Mathers said that if he won the election, he could only serve until the end of the spring semester, and there would have to be another election next fall to choose his successor. "I couldn't honestly take part in a campaign knowing that I could only serve for 35 days," he said.

Statement By Mike Mathers

The following is the statement released to the Daily Tar Heel by Mike Mathers, who announced that he would not be a candidate in the runoff election for which he qualified:

It would be impossible for me to run in another election this coming Tuesday. The paramount reason for this is that it is a policy of this school not to let a person with a degree reenter school as a special student.

I will graduate in June as I previously mentioned in the campaign. There is a reason for this policy of the Administration. Facilities are scarce enough as it is and should not be used by people who simply like Chapel Hill.

Another fact which would make my running again very difficult for many people is that if the Constitutional Council decided that the particular selection law concerning illegality of write-in candidates were repealed, then the entire election law would be null and void. This is because the Student Legislature voted on them as a whole. If these laws were declared unconstitutional then the entire election would have to be run over again.

When I decided to run, I was blissfully ignorant of the two things mentioned above. I had absolutely no idea of the administration's policy concerning special students until this morning. I knew about the other but did not realize the extenuating circumstances; that is, I did not realize that the entire elections laws would be thrown out if one law was declared unconstitutional.

It would sound very empty, indeed, to say thank you for your support.
