UNC Legislature Approves Motion For A Resolution

Solons To Commend Norwegian People

In a special called meeting last night, the Student Legislature voted by a 21-19 margin to approve a resolution commending Norwegian fishermen for a record season. A special copy of the resolution will be sent by air mail to Ursted Jønanek, president of the Norway Fishing Bureau.

The bill was introduced by Arthur McLach, Student Party representative from Dorm Men's I. McLach said that on such an important international issue as this one, with the lives of all the herring in the North Atlantic at stake, the legislature could not fail to take action.

Despite the insistence of McLach and several other Student Party leaders, the bill did not pass without a heated floor fight. University Party representatives argued that it was not the duty of the legislature to make such resolutions no matter what their importance.

When the matter came to a vote, the UP representative from Frat Rat II moved the bill be tabled. But his motion was ruled out of order by Parliamentarian Ron Jabbell.

Arboretum To Be UNC Parking Lot

University Grounds Director Oswald Overby yesterday announced plans to convert Oker Arboretum into a parking lot. Bulldozer work on the site will begin late this week, he announced, in order to give campus botanists and armours a final chance to make use of the wooded area.

Overby said that the plan to uproot the ancient trees and plants and coeds in the Arboretum had been reached only after all other possibilities for parking spaces had been exhausted. "We may even have to blacktop the area between South Building and the library," he said, "in order to find space for the extra 5,000 cars we expect next year. Silent Sam will probably be moved from Polk place and replaced with a giant parking meter."

Plans for a changeover at the Arboretum met with an immediate disapproval over campus. IDC president Horst Inman charged that the move was "a cheap trick by the administration to take away our happy hunting grounds. Is it the dorm man's fault that there aren't enough parking places on campus? It would have been a better idea to tear down the Deke house if they needed a parking lot."

Racial Troubles Solved At UNC, Friday Reveals

Carolina Riders To Have More Freedom

President William A. Friday announced yesterday that the long-standing racial problems at UNC had finally come to an end. "I think that we will be able to win every race next season, without any trouble," said Friday, who had been under alumni pressure after the Carolina drag racing team finished its second straight season without a victory.

After making this announcement, Friday uncovered the new 595 horsepower engine that had been constructed for the UNC dragster. The engine, painted a shining Carolina Blue and with silver covers for its carburetors, was constructed by 400 physics majors, all of whom are attending Carolina on drag-racing scholarships.

The editorial staff of the Daily Tar Heel yesterday squelched reports that the paper was a radical, biased and untruthful publication. After Editor Wayne King tried repeatedly to come up with some way to prove the fairness of the paper, star advertising man Chuck Oberdorfer performed an experiment in the paper's favor.

After rolling his own, and taking a few deep puffs, Oberdorfer reported that the paper is "exciting, and really mild." However, King was still trying to show that the paper could be enjoyed without being burned. (Photo by Hayashi Zalk)

Doesn't Like 80% Rule, He Tells Faculty

Chancellor William B. Aycock yesterday revealed the first stage in a long range plan for the betterment of student-faculty relations at the University of North Carolina. "In the past, there has often been an unnecessary amount of tension between the students and the administration," said Aycock in an exclusive interview with the Daily Tar Heel. "I have proposed a program to do something about this situation."

"I realize that the problem here at South Building has grown out of hand. Upon close consideration, and after weighing all the factors, I have decided that the 80% rule and the Honor System are at fault. It has come to my attention that certain persons under our employment may be in the wrong jobs, and therefore I have taken it upon myself to see that they are replaced."

The chancellor said that he had conferred with President William A. Friday and with Governor Terry Sanford, and they had agreed with him completely. The rulings will go into effect as soon as they are approved by the Board of Trustees, which has called an emergency meeting for Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

23 Fraternities Move To Disband

By BILL WOMBATT

Twenty-three of UNC's twenty-four social fraternities disbanded yesterday in a move that drew praise from the administration and other campus groups, and biting criticism from the NAACP and Barry Goldwater.

The ex-fraternity men plan to devote themselves to "academic excellence," IFC chairman Inman Sevier announced yesterday, and want to "put an end to our frivolous ways."

The PiKA house was the only fraternity which refused to disband as a spokesman for the house, Jackie Lohr, said. "We like to party and don't care who knows it. We shall fight on the bandstand, in the bedroom and under the bar. We shall never give up."

Senator Barry Goldwater scored the move, as he appeared on the Senate floor dressed in mourning. "I must make an announcement of great sadness," he told the august body. "The University of North Carolina has finally succumbed to the infiltration of communism. The death of the fraternity system marks the end of the democratic process at that once-great southern institution."

The move was attacked from another quarter today by Leroy Wilkinson, secretary of the NAACP. "It's a dirty racist trick," he said in a prepared press statement. "They know they can't disband. It's just like a bus station closing its waiting room. They can't close; they must integrate. We'll fight this in every court in the land."

Dean George Long, spokesman for the administration, praised the move by saying, "I'm glad the fraternities have finally realized that the 'Gentleman's C' is no longer good enough. We feel that this action will make it much easier for the campus to achieve the C plus average that is the mark of academic excellence."

The administration, he stated, "has tried to guide the fraternities toward this move by the recent establishment of the 80 per cent and deferred rush rules."

The IFC head thanked the administration by saying, "Their loving guidance, and especially the establishment of the 80 per cent rule at our request, have shown us the error of our ways. On to brotherhood and BA."

The New Left Club was one of many campus groups to praise the fraternities' action. Nick King, president of the club, said "I want to welcome the fraternity men to the true brotherhood of man. It is very gratifying to see another group realize that only by giving away their privileges can they hope to attain them."

"We are hoping to acquire one of the vacated houses for use as a home for wayward Albanians."

One campus group, however, censured the move. The Student Legislature passed a unanimous resolution condemning the action on the grounds that student government had not been contacted first.

"These people must learn to work within student government," one legislator said. "Their unannounced action has completely unbalanced our budget."

Eighteen Dorm Men Found Guilty, Sentenced By IDC

Eighteen dormitory residents of keeping empty bottles in his room and using tape on his door, and it appears that he is a habitual offender. A second student, who lived in Mangum Dorm, was restricted from living in a dormitory for the next year for keeping an electrical appliance in his room. Maudlin explained that the boy, who seemed to have no respect for university rules, had kept a coffeepot hidden in his closet. "He was just waiting for the time when the dorm manager wasn't around, so that he could plug it in."

Two students defaulted their room deposits for next semester and were forced to leave Winston Dorm for conspiring to start a snowball fight with Alexander. Maudlin said that the two were reported by resident advisor John Rosencranz, who said that they had maliciously planned an all out war between the two dorms. "It was supposed to last for two full days, April 6-7," said Rosencranz, "but I found out about it and tried to talk the boys out of it. When they wouldn't admit their fiendish plot, I turned them over to the IDC."

In other action, 15 residents of Lewis Dorm were given unofficial reprimands and were moved into Ruffin after they set fire to the lower quad and burned down Graham and Stacy Dorms. "If this action doesn't stop," Maudlin said, "we may have to pass some kind of regulation against it."

Clodfellow Says Chez Hickory Is Ridiculous Clan

Chez Hickory, well known campus journalistic outpost, was brought under fire yesterday by Jim Clodfellow, president of the UNC chapter of the INJRCCC. Clodfellow charged that, "Chez Hickory is an organization dedicated to the ridiculous principle that majority groups may sometimes be right."

Clodfellow stated that a full-scale investigation will be forthcoming.

Lenoir Hall Speeds Up Serving Of Customers

Lenoir Hall yesterday introduced a new method to relieve congestion in the lines where hundreds of starving students wait to eat every day. Burns Hamburger, manager of the dining hall, said that students will not have to go through the long waiting lines any more in order to be served. "We have also gotten rid of the student special," he revealed. "From now on, our customers will not have to select which meat they want to eat. The choice has already been made. We will only be serving beans at every meal."

Hamburger said that the new plan had worked very well at both meals at which it was tried yesterday. "We even cut prices to 30 cents for a meal," he said. "We could still make a profit by serving customers water instead of iced tea." The manager said that the new plan worked in this way:

UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT William T. Friday personally inspected the new Tar Heel drag racing engine before making an announcement about it to the press. The engine, which gives Carolina fans hope for another magnificent season like 1929, is painted Carolina blue and white.
