HIGH NOTE — Margot Harris, who appears as Lauretta in tonight's Opera Workshop presentation of The Music Master, hits a high note in a practice session. Robert Williamson, right, appears as her maestro, Lamberto.

Students And Local Singers Perform In Opera Workshop

This evening at Hill Music Hall, the Carolina Opera Workshop will present, fully staged, Peroglesi's comic opera "The Music Master," in English, and Offenbach's masterpiece "The Tales of Hoffman," in French. The cast of each opera is composed of outstanding local singers who are either students of the University or permanent Chapel Hillians. Admission is free.

In "The Music Master," Margot Dodge Harris will appear as the student Lauretta. Mrs. Harris is a student of Walter Golde, outstanding Chapel Hill voice coach. She also is employed at the Intimate Bookshop as secretary.

Bert Adams, as the impresario Colagiani, is a Ph.D. candidate in Sociology. Mr. Adams is well-known to many Chapel Hillians through his appearances as guest soloist in several of the local churches. His most recent operatic role was that of the elder Germont in the UNC Music Department's production of Verdi's "La Traviata."

Robert Williamson, as the maestro Lamberto is a senior majoring in music. He is also student director of the UNC Men's Glee Club and choir director of the University Methodist Church choir. Mr. Adams and Mr. Williamson will also be seen in "Tales of Hoffman."

Mrs. Rebecca Carnes heads the list of Chapel Hillians in the "Tales of Hoffman." Mrs. Carnes, as the young invalid Antonia, is a voice student of Wilton Mason of the UNC Music Department. Besides attending to the many duties of a mother of five, she teaches schools in Hillsboro. Doss Philips, as Antonia's father, is also a senior voice student at the University.

Mr. Philips, recently gave a voice recital at Hill Hall and in May will give another recital in connection with a Bachelor of Music Degree. He is baritone soloist at the Presbyterian Church.

Roselyn Langley as the Mother is a junior music major. Recently she toured with the UNC Men's Glee Club on their spring tour and was their guest soloist.

Di-Phi Passes Bill To Limit Legislature

The Di-Phi passed a resolution Wednesday night recommending that the student legislature confine itself to the discussion and passage of legislation which directly concerns the student body and the University campus.

The formation of a second house of the student legislature was recommended in an amendment to the resolution. The amendment submitted by Norwood Pratt advocated an upper house that would concern itself solely with national and international issues that do not concern the student body as a whole.

The first vote among members of the Di-Phi was five to three in favor of the bill. The chamber vote including all those in the hall was 8 to 7 in favor of the bill.

The main arguments against assigning the responsibility of debating off campus issues to the Di-Phi exclusively was that the Di-Phi besides being unrepresentative of the student body, no longer swung the weight that the legislature possesses.

Norwood Pratt claimed that his idea of forming a second house would remedy that problem by both relieving the regular legislature of the loss of time spent in debating matters which did not directly concern it and by providing representatives elected by the student body to do the debating.

Representative Randall pointed out that it was asking a lot to expect those people most interested in issues to come to both the legislature, the Di-Phi and another House. He said that there was no question that the upper house idea would detract from the Di-Phi.

Randall then said that the legislature had debated off campus issues since 1947 and that it was about time that the Student Body realized that the student legislature does handle issues which do not directly affect the student body.

Senate Passes $63 Million Corps Outlay

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Thursday passed and sent to President Kennedy a bill authorizing $63,750,000 to finance the Peace Corps for its second year of operation.

Approval was by voice vote after senators defeated, also voice vote, an amendment by Sen. Frank J. Lausche, D-Ohio, to cut the amount to $45,780,000.

Also rejected was a restriction written in by the Foreign Relations Committee to provide that no more than 15 per cent of Peace Corps volunteers could be sent to any one country or area.

The limitation was dropped after Sen. John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., floor manager for the bill, said Peace Corps Director R. Sargent Shriver had given assurances this policy would be followed without the restriction spelled out. The $63,750,000 was the full amount asked by Kennedy. It provides for about 10,000 volunteers by Aug. 31, 1963.

The President last year asked $40 million for the first year of Peace Corps operations but Congress cut the amount to $30 million.

Senate approval came after only brief debate in which Sparkman urged passage to enable the corps to carry on work already under way and to expand operations.

Lausche argued that the program was still experimental. His amendment would have cut the number of corps members to 6,970 by August of next year. The corps expects to have 2,400 volunteers abroad or in training by July 1 of this year.

Chi O's Give Annual Award To Woman From Charlotte

Mrs. Gladys Avery Tillett of Charlotte received Chi Omega sorority's annual award for the most outstanding woman in North Carolina at the chapter's Eleusinian banquet last night.

The award was presented to Mrs. Tillett by Chancellor Emeritus Robert Burton House at the banquet held at Schraff's Country Inn.

Mrs. Tillett has served as a U. S. delegate to the UNESCO conference in Paris; U. S. delegate to the Commission on the Status of Women for the U.N.; vice-chairman of the National Democratic Committee; state chairman of the USO; assistant to the national chairman in the Adlai Stevenson campaign. She has also been a welfare worker and a trustee of the Consolidated University of North Carolina since 1952.

Dr. Guy B. Johnson then presented an award to Mrs. Ann Woodward Morgan for her outstanding work in the Sociology department. Mrs. Morgan is at present working in the Honors program.

Larry Brown Is Defendant In Mock Trial

Miss Evans Charges Reckless Driving In $150,000 Suit

Miss Barbara (Bevan) Evans, UNC cheerleader, is to be released today from the N. C. Memorial Hospital in time to testify in her suit for $150,000 against Larry Brown, Carolina basketball player, in a mock trial in the Law School Courtroom tonight at 8.

Miss Evans seeks damages as a result of multiple facial injuries sustained when a car in which she and Brown were returning from a party in Durham last Saturday night ran out of control. Reports conflict as to the cause of the accident.

Experienced legal "heads" at UNC, among them James C. Harper, chairman of the annual Law School Mock Trial Committee, predicted that a capacity crowd will witness an exhibition of adroit legal maneuvering by the attorneys chosen from the Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity.

The annual Mock Trial, which saw Mike Deutsch of the UNC Business School tried for the "murder" of former All-American basketball player Lennie Rosenbluth last year, is expected to provide real fireworks tonight. The principals, including Lindsay Raiford and John Flournoy, who are to testify as witnesses, are all prominent members of the student body.

Attorneys for Miss Evans and Brown are Tom Starnes and La Fontaine Odom.

The trial begins with selection of a jury at 2 p.m. Testimony will get under way at 8. All students may attend.

UNC Press To Publish Book By Ex-Governor

LUTHER H. HODGES

A new book by Luther H. Hodges, titled "Businessman in the Statehouse: My Six Years As Governor of North Carolina" has just been completed and will be published in September by the UNC Press, it was announced here today by Lambert Davis, director of the Press.

Gov. Hodges, now U. S. Secretary of Commerce, wrote the book at odd times in the past six months, mainly by means of tape recorder. Preparation of the final manuscript was performed by Charles Dunn, special writer for the Durham Morning Herald and formerly of Ahoskie.

Davis said the book contains the personal recollections of Gov. Hodges and includes conversation and hitherto undisclosed background regarding some of the major developments and controversial issues in North Carolina during his six-year tenure as Governor.

Hodges presents behind-the-scenes details relating to industrial development; the segregation-integration problem in the state following the Supreme Court decisions; the Henderson textile strikes; growing complexities in public and higher education; politics in highway construction; and development of plans for the new Statehouse in Raleigh, trips to Europe in search for new industry, and a trip to Russia which included a talk with Khrushchev.

He also divulges some of his views as to the future for North Carolina, particularly the Governorship as a position for leadership in shaping the state's destiny.

Davis revealed that he got the idea of the book when he read Gov. Hodges' reports of his Russian trip, and was struck by the Governor's plain-spoken and human-interest revelations. He wrote the Governor and suggested a book.

The Governor disclosed that his Russian trip reports were written after being dictated on a tape recording machine. Davis suggested that he do the same thing in a book.

"When he became Secretary of Commerce, I thought we might have to table the idea," said Davis. "But I found that he was still interested in going ahead with it. So, he has dictated or written out the body of the book, and with an outline and arrangements of categories, Charlie Dunn and the rest of us have worked on the editing." Miss Harriet Herring of the Institute for Research in Social Science at Chapel Hill also assisted and Ed L. Rankin Jr., Gov. Hodges' former press secretary, checked accounts and made additions.

Steel Price Hike Sets Antitrust Move Loose

JFK Talks With Cabinet; Probe Likely

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy held an economic council of war on the steel price increase Thursday amid reports that the government was studying possible court action to break up the giant U. S. Steel Corp.

At the same time, the FBI was investigating reports that a top official of Bethlehem Steel Corp. said no price increase was necessary just a few days before Bethlehem followed U. S. Steel's lead and raised prices.

These developments came as Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield predicted that congressional anti-trust subcommittees would launch immediate investigations and the Justice Department would take "more than ordinary interest in this unnecessary rise."

"The time for talking is past," Mansfield said. "The time for action has come."

The President held an unusual meeting with cabinet officers, including Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy and Labor Secretary Arthur J. Goldberg, to consider numerous moves designed to combat effects of the $8 a ton steel price boost.

Robert Kennedy's Justice Department was reported to be considering a variety of possible moves. Among other things, it was said to be studying whether to file an antitrust suit seeking a breakup of U. S. Steel into several smaller companies. It was emphasized that this idea was only in the discussion stage.

Any antitrust suit would be based on charges that U. S. Steel holds excessive control over the industry because of its 40 per cent share of the market and its power over pricing. Other firms fell in line after U. S. Steel announced the first price hike.

The aluminum industry provides a precedent for such a suit. In 1951 the government filed suit to force Aluminum Company of America (ALCOA) to drop control of Aluminum Ltd. of Canada. The divestiture was complete last year.

Flatt And Scruggs Win Over Students To Bluegrass Music

By Bill Wuamett

Music that "tells a story," and the warmth and humor of Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs and the Foggy Mountain Boys left a Memorial Hall audience of about 1,000 persons wildly applauding after three encores Wednesday night.

After the two hour performance, the wings were jammed with autograph seekers who had given the performance what one informed observer called "a better reception than any German's concert had received since the Kingston Trio in the fall of 1959."

Many of those in the audience apparently came to jeer, as some were dressed in overalls and straw hats and others greeted the country music performers with calls of "soo piggie," and other calls.

By the end of the second number, however, the applause was genuine and the overalls ones were cheering as loudly as the rest of the audience. At the end of the show, a standing ovation continued through the three encores.

While seeking to accommodate about 100 autograph seekers backstage, Lester and Earl gave their reasons for the success of country music performers in the past few years.

Reaction to Rock and Roll
The rise in popularity in folk and country music was attributed by Flatt to a growing popular demand for music that tells a story, as opposed to the rock and roll music of the "Yackety Yak" variety.

"This shift can best be seen," Scruggs said, "in the growth of our high school and college audience. Up around New York and Boston, for instance, almost every kid you see is learning to play the 5-string banjo."

"This is the second on-campus performance we have given," he said, "and we plan to continue performing for college audiences. We were real pleased with the reception we received here tonight."

No Style Change
Earl Flatt said their group's success was due to the fact that their basic bluegrass style had never been changed to try to imitate the popular music of the day.

"Many people tried to imitate Elvis Presley, for instance," Flatt said, "and I think they have all suffered for it. We play the same music we played when our group was organized in 1948. And our audience has grown every year."

"When we began playing, we thought our audience would be composed chiefly of country people. Television, however, has changed all that."

"Thanks to television," Flatt said, "our LP records are now our leading source of income. People who two years ago would not have listened to our type of music have now seen us on television and have then bought our records." It was apparent after the show that at least one Carolina student had been converted to bluegrass music, as one overalled autograph seeker was overheard to say, "boy, they sure were great, weren't they?"
