Bureaucrats Hurt Alliance For Progress

By BILL DOWELL

"There is no doubt that if the alliance for progress is carried on as a social revolution from Washington, it will collapse," Tad Szulc, New York Times correspondent to Latin America said yesterday. Szulc delivered the last paper of the 1962 session of the Southeastern Conference for Latin American Affairs.

Answering a question about Washington bureaucracy and the Alliance, Szulc said that it was like someone trying to court a girl through a staff meeting.

He said that if the Alliance were to succeed it would have to convince South American diplomats that it was worth sacrificing their political careers to defend it.

Contact With the People

The Alliance would also have to convince Latin America that it was not just another big grant from the United States, he said, and it would have to get into the boondocks and establish contact with the common people.

Szulc said that a viewpoint held by many people about the Alliance is that it is a race against time to build more dams and housing projects than the communist.

"That view," he said, "is something like a group of boys holding their fingers in a leaky dike to prevent a flood. The next step is a general lamentation because the flood is impossible to hold back."

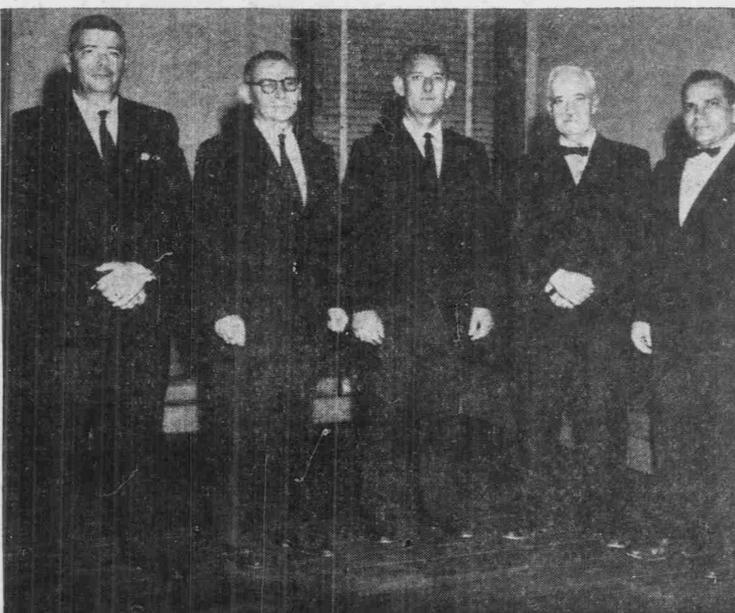

Fear Of U. S. Help

Szulc also said that he had been told by a Latin American diplomat that the Latin American people were worried about the United States going right. He said that they were afraid that if they became friendly to the United States they would not be able to reform their own governments.

Brass Group Will Present Concert Here

The University Brass Ensemble under the direction of Edward Kettick will present a concert Wednesday night of the works of Pezel, Poulenc, Ewald, Bohme, and Dahl. It will be held in Hill Hall at 8 p.m.

Sonata No. 30 by Johann Pezel, will illustrate the work of a seventeenth century German musician who in his lifetime composed and published several collections of pieces for wind instruments.

Sonata for Horn, Trumpet, and Trombone by the French composer Francis Poulenc displays Poulenc's compositional traits: polytonal techniques and interesting and unusual rhythms.

Victor Ewald wrote his Opus 5 for a quintet of saxophones, a family of brass instruments invented in the 19th century by Adolph Sax, who also gave to the musical world the saxophone. This work shows to some extent Russian influences reminiscent of Tchaikovsky.

Sextet, Opus 30 by Oskar Bohme is one of the most difficult pieces in the entire repertoire of the brass ensemble. It combines ensemble techniques found in the string quartet and also shows Bohme's feeling for melodic lines.

Dahl was at one time a disciple of Stravinsky, his advanced polyphonic style in free dissonata counterpoint has had considerable influence on contemporary writing for brass instruments.

COLLEGE ROUNDUP:

No 'Pinks' At Maine

The threat of adverse public opinion has apparently caused the cancellation of a proposed debate at the University of Maine that would have featured a speaker of "communist persuasion."

The debate was canceled after its organizer surveyed the state legislature as to their opinion of public relation. Twenty percent of the sons said they were opposed, forty per cent said there would be little public opposition, and the rest said they had "mixed" feelings.

Upon receiving the results of the survey (which was conducted after the University's president expressed concern about public opinion), its sponsors dropped the project. "Public opinion," one sponsor commented, "would turn the whole thing into a circus."

LEGAL LIQUOR

A petition to allow Stanford University students over 21 to have liquor in their dorm rooms has been signed by over 1,700 students and presented to the Student Legislature. The Legislature is expected to call a special referendum on the issue.

Students over 21 may drink legally only if they are outside a one-mile "dry" limit around the campus.

A faculty committee has also been studying the problem for six months and is expected to submit a report shortly. Final action on the issue, however, must come from the University President and the Board of Trustees.

FOOTBALL IS "TOUGH LIFE"

Nearly half of the University of Kentucky football team have turned in their suits since Charlie Bradshaw became head coach this January. Eighteen quit before spring practice and 19 others left after practice began.

"Life isn't easy and football at this level certainly isn't," Bradshaw has commented, "but none of us are sadists."

SIGMA NU GETS AUTONOMY

The Cornell chapter of Sigma Nu has been released from a national discriminatory clause by a waiver granting local autonomy to the chapter. All members of the local fraternity will be regarded as members of the national, even if they had been denied national membership before the waiver was granted.

The Cornell Nu stated that "the University chapter is one of the few Sigma Nu locals that has received a waiver from the national before a university-imposed deadline. The national policy has been to delay granting local autonomy until the last moment."

FRATERNITIES REFUSED

Three of four fraternities at Colgate with discriminatory clauses have reported that efforts to remove these restrictions in the local chapters had been thwarted by the national fraternities, mainly because Colgate has no definite time limit for removal of the clauses.

Phi Gamma Delta and Sigma Nu stated their positions for removal of the clauses had been rejected on these grounds. Lambda Chi supported an abolition resolution at the national convention last summer, but the resolution was defeated.

Spaghetti Dinner

Tri Deltis will have a spaghetti dinner Monday night at 5:30 and 6:30 at the Tri Delt House. Tickets may be purchased from any Tri Delt or at the door. Proceeds will go to the Tri Delt scholarship fund.

Brantley Is Not Censured By WF Board

No action will be taken against Russell Brantley, whose controversial novel, "The Education of Jonathan Beam" has created furor among North Carolina Baptists. This was the decision of the Wake Forest College trustees in a 16 to 4 vote Friday.

One reviewer has termed the book as "an attack on the narrow-minded religious fundamentalism that the author finds in a large segment of the Baptist State Convention."

The trustees also voted to drop racial bars in the undergraduate college during the same Friday meeting.

Finance Committee

The Finance Committee of the Student Legislature will meet Wednesday at 5 to 7:30 p.m. in Roland Parker II.

A. G. Whitener

To Address YAF

A. G. Whitener, leader of the recently formed Conservative Party in North Carolina, will speak to the Young Americans for Freedom Monday night at 7:30 in the Law School Courtroom.

Whitener, a candidate for the Democratic Congressional nomination in the Sixth District, will discuss the need for the restoration of conservative, constitutional government, and the desirability of the establishment of an independent Conservative party in North Carolina.

There will be a question period at the end of Whitener's speech. YAF has invited the general public, including those of opposing political views, to attend the meeting.
