

NC Folk Festival Saturday Waldensians Give Dance Program

A bit of the old piedmont section of Italy will come to piedmont Carolina Saturday at the 14th annual Carolina Folk Festival in Memorial Hall beginning at 8 p.m.

The Waldensian Dancers from Valdese, N. C., will perform a selection of spirited, lively dances to the appropriate mixture of Italian country music.

Julia Ribet, a native of Valdese and a singer of the old Waldensian folk tunes, will sing accompanying some of the dancers. Miss Ribet sings in the Patua dialect, the language of the Waldensian peoples.

One of her songs is called "The Cuckoo," in which the sounds of the cuckoo bird are repeated throughout.

There will be 10 males and 11 females complementing the Waldensian dancing group. Miss Ribet will call some of the dances.

Miss Ribet attended Flora Macdonald College where she graduated with a bachelor of music degree in 1956. She majored in voice. Following her graduation, she spent one year in Kings Mountain and another year in Zebulon where she was working with church music.

In 1960, Miss Ribet took a position with the North Carolina Tercentenary Commission in Raleigh.

Among her singing activities, Miss Ribet has performed with the National Opera Company in Raleigh and she has been a member of the Raleigh Oratorio Society for four years.

In the fall of 1960, she was in the musical play "Paint Your Wagon," performed by the Raleigh Little Theater. Although singing takes up a good bit of her time, Julia Ribet says her hobby is travelling.

Waldensian People

The Waldensian people of the piedmont section of Italy have a history going back to 1170 when, as an oppressed people, they took their name from a gracious merchant of their area, Peter Waldo. Their history is one of a persecuted people.

On February 17, 1848, King Charles granted the Waldensian people their freedom which was their beginning of religious and civil freedom. They came to the United States in 1893 and settled in Valdese.

The festival is sponsored by the UNC Folklore Council, with Kenan Professor A. P. Hudson as chairman.

Several Carolina lovelies practice for one of the events of the Sigma Chi Derby to be held this afternoon. The annual affair features coed contests from the "Miss Modern Venus" beauty contest to pie-throwing activities. The derby is open to the public without charge.

Project To Register Negroes Set In Raleigh June-August

A pilot project to register local Negro citizens and at the same time to provide an educational experience for college students is to be held this summer in Raleigh from June 15 to August 12. The N.S.A. Southern Human Relations Project will sponsor the project which is hoped will raise the present registration level of Negro citizens which is now 18 per cent.

Cooperating in the program are the American Friends Service Committee and the Southern Regional Y.W.C.A.

As part of the project, the fifteen students will make a survey of registered and unregistered voters.

DTH Meeting

Co-Editors Jim Clotfelter and Chuck Wrye invited any interested student to come to the Daily Tar Heel staff meeting at 4 this afternoon in DTH offices, second floor of Graham Memorial.

Students interested in writing news, editorial material, or sports should talk to the editors today or any afternoon this week.

All present staff members should be at the meeting.

encouraging citizens to register through a door-to-door campaign and through block precinct meetings; carry on a citizenship education program about issues, candidates, and political structures; facilitate transportation to the registrars' offices; and keep records on the campaign.

There will also be seminars, speakers, and forums for the orientation and education of the participants.

Applications are now available for the 15 places open in the interracial co-educational group that along with the Raleigh Citizens Committee make up the project.

Students will live together with their leaders in a house, doing their own cooking. Room and board will be provided free along with a $50 stipend and travel funds to cover personal expenses and to defray travel costs to and from Raleigh.

Applications and/or additional information may be had by applying to: Voter Registration Project, Southern Office, NA, 41 Exchange Place, S.E., Room 701, Atlanta 3, Georgia.

A similar program will be held in Jackson, Tenn. Inquiries should be made to: Mr. Dick Ramsay, 1818 South Main St., High Point, N. C.

Applications must be received by May 12. Announcements of final selections will reach all participants by May 25.

SG INTERVIEWS
Interviews are being held today for positions on student government committees. Interviews will be held in the President's office in Graham Memorial and interview times may be reserved in the student government offices.

What about Chamberlain?
"There was no problem with Wilt. I called him in the first day and said, 'Look, you've got a national reputation, Wilt. I think I'm the only coach you've ever had who also had a national reputation. Together, we can go far. Apart, we're lost in the woods.' The guy was tremendous the whole year."

Good Rookies
On the subject of next year's team, the man who guided Carolina in some of its greatest basketball moments, was less than positive.

"Our drafts look real good. We got Hightower (former Kansas star Wayne Hightower who last year played in Spain on the Real Madrid team) and Hubie White from Villanova but I haven't talked to either of them yet. I hope Arizona will be back and that Gola can recover from his injuries, but I can't be sure about anything."

The conversation turned to baseball. McGuire, an avid fan, recalled that not many people knew that he had also coached baseball in college.

"In 1952, St. John's (St. John's University of New York City where McGuire coached both basketball and baseball) went to the NCAA playoffs and finished third. I'm real proud that I've been able to drinking in our club. This amazed me. I mean, here we are dealing with pro basketball players—grown men free to do as they pleased in hotels anywhere, and not one smoker or drinker. Arizin (Paul), Gola (Tom), they're all very religious boys. We went to church together every Sunday. The whole team went to church. I even converted Al Attles."

Britt Elected SP Chairman Beats Harkness And Putzel

By HARRY DeLUNG

Robin Britt was elected Student Party Chairman last night after a run off election with Pete Harkness. Mike Putzel also sought the post which requires a majority vote.

In his nominating speech, Britt quoted UNC graduate Joel Fleishman who once said, "The Student Party is a party of discontent." The new chairman said that this tradition must continue if the S.P. is to continue its efforts for progress.

Dwight Wheelers, seconding Britt's nomination emphasized the rising senior's history of support for the S. P. Britt ran for S. P. nomination for President of the student body this spring.

Each candidate was sighted for his emphasis on seeking S. P. support from the dormitories. In speaking for Britt, who is Chi Psi, Scott Summers recalled his role as Chairman of the Communications Committee in establishing dorm newspapers.

Seconding nominations for Pete Harkness were given by Rufus Edmiston, Beth Walker, and Haines McFadden. George Rosenthal and Curtis Gans spoke for Mike Putzel. Gans, a long time liberal, noted the irony in his support for Putzel who is the ex-president of the conservative Young Americans for Freedom.

An amendment to change the attendance requirement for party membership from two to three meetings was passed by the body. The amendment, which must be voted on again at next week's meeting according to S. P. rules, will not go into effect until after the 1962 fall elections.

Straughn Elected To NSA Position

Eight From Carolina Attend Regional Meet At Belmont Abbey

Bill Straughn, last year's National Student Association Co-ordinator on campus, was elected National Affairs Vice-Chairman for the Carolinas-Virginia region of N.S.A. at a conference at Belmont Abbey College Saturday.

In addition to working with the rest of the regional officers on the semi-annual conferences, Straughn said that he hoped to promote plans for a fall conference of student body presidents and a spring human relations seminar.

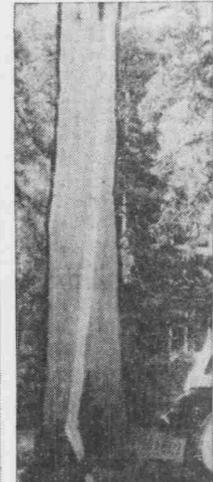

The regional delegates met for the weekend in Belmont, N. C. Carolina's delegation included Harry DeLung, chairman; Anne Lup-ton, John Randall, Bill Bowerman, Ford Rowan, and Hank Patterson. Bill Straughn and Fran Roth attended as alternate delegates.

Leo Jenkins, President of East Carolina College, spoke Friday night about the functions of student government. His keynote address was followed by a panel discussion which led to spirited dissent by the UNC delegation on the subject of the administration's right to "pull the rug out" from any student government operation.

Saturday night's speech was given by Tim Zagot recent Harvard graduate and presently the East Coast Program Vice President of N.S.A. Zagot, who feels that too much emphasis has been placed by past N.S.A. leaders on national and international affairs, divided the functions of N.S.A. into three areas: relations with local student governments, service to students and campuses, and expressing the opinions of delegates to the National Student Congress.

3 Students Refuse To Pay When Negro Not Served In Grill

Three UNC students were taken to the Durham police station at 2 a.m. Saturday morning after they refused to pay for food they had ordered at the Toddle House.

The students were Charlie Brooks, Henry Ramer and Jimmy Masters. Brooks is a Negro.

The students went into the Toddle House, according to Ramer, and asked if it would be all right for Brooks to eat there. The waitress said that it would be all right and she served them cokes.

The waitress then served Masters and Ramer hamburgers and brought nothing for Brooks. Ramer said that after ten minutes he asked her if she would serve him a hamburger. She said that she would serve him a hamburger outside.

The manager of the Toddle House said later that the waitress was a new girl and that she did not know the Toddle House's policy on segregation. The manager said that the woman who had been in charge that night had seen that a Negro was being served at the counter and stopped the order.

A police officer had also arrived on the scene, according to Ramer.

When Ramer and Masters saw that Brooks was not going to be served they said they would not eat there. The waitress then asked them to pay for their meals. They refused.

After a discussion, the manager of the Toddle House was called and he said that the students would not have to pay for the meals if they would leave.

There are two different accounts of what happened after that. According to the police, Ramer, Masters and Brooks asked to be taken

Humber Asks Federation In The World

Without world government, "we are deficient in the organic structure of our world society," Dr. Robert Humber told the Orange County Bar Association and the faculties of the Law School and Institute of Government at the Association's annual Law Day program Friday night.

Dr. Humber is a long-time advocate of world federation, and is the author of the "Humber Resolution" in favor of world federation which has been passed by North Carolina's General Assembly and 16 other state legislatures.

A state senator from Greenville, N. C., Humber holds honorary law degrees from UNC and Wake Forest. He was a delegate to the San Francisco conference that founded the United Nations.

Humber told the guests at the Law Day program (today is National Law Day) that the world is trying to achieve the impossible by trying to seek peace through diplomacy. "We are trying, in effect, to govern a world community with no government," he said. "The world now clamors for its founding fathers."

Dr. Humber expressed the view that in a governed world the individuals who breached the world peace would be punished; that in our present ungoverned world the entire nation in which an offender lives becomes the "target of annihilation." "The extermination of millions of people for the acts of the few is a crime against human sanity and our humanitarian history," he declared.

Treaties are not the supreme law of every nation, and thus do not constitute an effective substitute for enforceable world law, according to Dr. Humber. He observed that, "treaties are disregarded by the arbitrary will of nations and are unenforceable except on the battlefield."

He told the attorneys that, "the greatest challenge to the legal profession and to our generation is to organize the world society and institute in it law and legal authority." "We must stabilize the world's destiny on the basis of justice," he concluded, "and establish a world society based on principles that can survive the cataclysms of our epoch."

McGUIRE AS A PRO COACH:

Nice Guys Don't Always Finish Last

By CURRY KIRKPATRICK

A long, tough schedule, burdening responsibilities, and "problem" professional basketball players. These were the main obstacles Frank McGuire anticipated this past season as coach of the National Basketball Association's Philadelphia Warriors and their indomitable scoring machine, Wilt Chamberlain.

McGuire, back in Chapel Hill for a well-deserved rest from the war that is the NBA, was surprised on only one of his expectations.

A living contradiction of Leo Durocher's famous "Nice Guys Finish Last" theory, Frank McGuire had some interesting observations Saturday, on his first year in the big league and the experiences that went with it.

"The biggest adjustment for me in pro ball was definitely that long drawn-out schedule," McGuire explained as he relaxed in his home on the outskirts of Chapel Hill. "We played 92 ball games last season and prior to that, the most I had ever experienced were those 32 in '57 when we won the championship. The schedule really began to tell on me the latter part of the year."

Questioned on his responsibilities as a pro coach, McGuire did not hesitate. "I missed an assistant coach this year. Detroit has one but they're the only team in the league that does. Most of the duties of a club secretary were mine because I was the only one traveling with the team all the time. I had to arrange our traveling schedules, eating facilities and hotel accommodations in addition to coaching. It's a real job."

Some Last-Minute Advice

Soloists in the University's Chorus' presentation of Mendelssohn's Elijah pause to check an interesting point in the score with the director Wilton Mason. Left to right: Bert Adams, baritone in the title role of the prophet Elijah; Mar-

cha Teachey, soprano; Nell Wiseman soprano; Mason; Robert Williamson, tenor; and Virginia Johnson, contralto. The work will be given in Hill Music Hall tonight at 8 p.m. The performance is open to the public free of charge.
