Missing Sculpture Returned

A piece of sculpture reported missing a week and a half ago was found leaning against the door to the upstairs Art Gallery on Franklin Street at 1:00 o'clock Thursday morning.

Bill Norton, a senior at UNC, found the piece leaning against the rear door of the Gallery. He has a studio behind the Gallery. Norton said that he ran with the piece to the police station to report that it had been returned. The police returned it to the Gallery later Thursday morning.

The piece, which is called "Trio," is by Robert Shannon, a well-known Chapel Hill artist. It stands 33 inches high and is constructed of welded steel. It was reported missing from the storage room of the gallery a week and a half ago.

Miss Jane Hasland, one of the operators of the Gallery, said that the price of the piece would go up from $200 to around $300 now that it had gained notoriety.

Chapel Hill police said Thursday afternoon that they were still tracking down a lead as to who removed the sculpture. There was no indication as to whether or not the robbery was tied in with the recent theft of a $1,500 piece of sculpture from State College.

Shannon's "Trio" was the second piece of metal sculpture to be stolen from Chapel Hill in recent weeks. The first, Mike Hall's "Bug," was stolen from Merritt's Service Station and returned shortly afterwards.

'Zero,' New Literary Magazine, Slated For Distribution Soon

ZERO, a new literary magazine, will appear on campus this week-end. Published by the North American Zeropological Society, the oddly shaped magazine promises to "provide an identifiable forum for the free exchange of cacophonous... ideas." Interviewed in the campus office of the NAZS, editor Myles Eric Ludwig explained that "the editors of ZERO believe that there is room in Chapel Hill for a new publication. You see, we want to establish a new market for those writers who feel that the two existing publications do not satisfy their stylistic needs. "I'm pretty excited about this first issue. Bart Weinhirsh has done a wonderfully simple cover for us, and we've got a tremendously profound short story by Peter L. Van Ripper. A. J. Winkelman has provided us with one of the finest short poetic statements I've seen in a long while. But perhaps the highlight of the issue is a crossword puzzle for the intellectual's intellectual."

Newman, Thibaut Named Distinguished Professors

Two new Alumni Distinguished Professors were named Monday by Chancellor William B. Aycock, bringing the total number of these professorships to eight.

The two new professors are John W. Thibaut, professor and chairman of the Department of Psychology, and William S. Newman, professor of music.

A former undergraduate student at UNC, Dr. Thibaut received a B. A. degree in philosophy in 1939. He has a Ph.D. degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He has taught at Harvard, Boston University, the University of Michigan, and came to UNC in 1953.

Dr. Thibaut, along with Professor Harold H. Kelley of the University of Minnesota, is the author of a book entitled "The Social Psychology of Groups," a study of social interaction and group functioning. This book was published in 1959, and was selected as one of the "fifty" outstanding books of the year, chosen by the Brunner Book Bulletin in 1961. This bulletin annually picks out the best professional books published in areas of psychology, neurology, psychoanalysis and psychiatry.

In 1964, Dr. Thibaut was named chairman of the Organizational Research Group of the Institute for Research in Social Sciences at UNC, and director of the "Small Group Laboratory," engaged chiefly in behavioral studies. Dr. Thibaut has served as a member of the editorial boards of "Sociometry," a journal published by the American Sociological Association, and of the "Journal of Personality." British Announce They Will Send Men If Needed

BANGKOK (UPI) — Eighteen hundred U. S. Marines trained for jungle warfare set up bases within striking range of the Laos-Thailand border Thursday, joining 1,000 U. S. troops, Air Force planes and the 80,000-man Thai army in the job of containing Laos Communist rebels.

Britain announced it was ready to dispatch military forces to Thailand and had alerted an Air Force Squadron in Singapore. Australia and New Zealand said they would send in token forces if asked and Pakistan and the Philippines were preparing to do the same.

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Kennedy said yesterday the United States is counting on the three princes of Laos to reach political agreement which would avoid a "shooting war in the jungles of Asia."

Elsewhere Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said yesterday that U. S. actions in Southeast Asia are "very bad" and are complicating the situation there. Gromyko also repeated previous Soviet warnings that Russians will resume their nuclear testing. But he did not say when the tests would begin.

The U. S. Defense Department said in Washington a total of 5,000 U. S. combat troops would be used in Thailand to prevent direct invasion by scaling off the border and to help the Thai combat Communist infiltration. So far no such penetration has been reported.

In Laos itself the fighting appeared at a standstill and indications were the three rival princes of Laos—right-wing Premier Bouamoun, neutralist Souvanna Phouma and pro-Communist leader Souphanouvong—might meet soon to try to form a coalition government that could end the war.

Marines Move Near Border One thousand U. S. Army men already were in Thailand at start of the present crisis. The 1,900 Marines armed and ready for battle landed early Thursday by helicopters and assault ships and sped through the streets of Saigon and then flew off to the "front."

The Marines, members of the 3rd battalion, 9th Regiment, 3rd Marine Division, began setting up tents under full field conditions in a dry plateau area near Nong Han, about 20 miles east of Udorn. Udorn is 400 miles from Bangkok and about 35 miles south of Vientiane, Laos.

The American troops will be deployed in a horseshoe-shaped area with a 500-mile front on the Mekong River border. They brought with them tanks, 105 millimeter howitzers, tank-like track vehicles armed with recoilless weapons.

Allen Pleased With Committee Turnout

"This year's substantially increased turnout for Student Government committee positions is a reflection of the new interest being taken by all students in their government," said President Immanuel Allen yesterday.

Allen's comments come at the end of three weeks of committee appointments which were completed last night with Student Legislature's approval of his appointments.

Appreciation was extended to the 450 who applied for positions, and Allen said that all applications would be kept on file. He estimated that 250 appointments had been made, and said that additional openings would be available next year.

"Those who did not get up for an interview this spring and those who wish to re-express their interest should apply when announcement is made this fall," Allen said.

The student body president expressed thanks "to the many people who worked in the committee membership drive." He cited particularly the publicity work done by Communications Committee Chairman Bob Spearman.

IT MUST BE SUMMER

A Warm Day, Chicks & Watermelons

A fair showing of the fair sex turned out for the CWC and Pachel-sponsored watermelon feast yesterday afternoon on McIver lawn.

While eating watermelon, chatting, playing bridge on the grass and even playing ouija board, the co-eds were entertained by the folk songs of Dan Brock, assisted by Guerry Matthews.

"No men allowed" was the original rule concerning the Watermelon Feast; however, there were a number of Carolina Gentlemen present helping the co-eds cut the watermelons, and several others watched the party from the edge of the lawn, while enjoying slices of watermelon thoughtfully sneaked over to them by the girls.
