McGill Looks To 1962 Grads For New Leadership

Atlanta editor Ralph McGill examined the present "confusion" of the young Southerner and found hope for new leadership from the graduating classes of 1962 in his commencement address here last Monday.

McGill, appearing with N. C. Gov. Terry Sanford, Consolidated University President William Friday and University Chancellor William B. Aycock in a rain-drenched Kenan Stadium, said that many young people in the South find it difficult to rationalize their religious beliefs with the actions of their political representatives.

He felt that, "Out of the graduating classes of 1962 will come . . . a new and better political leadership. I like to think that the day of the demagogue is dying."

Some 2,200 UNC graduates received degrees in the University's 168th annual commencement exercise. Governor Sanford praised the "youth and vigor" of the University's ideas "down through the years."

4,500 Enrollment Expected

SMILING NANCY WOOD waits anxiously as she watches that line of men registering for summer school. It's also probable that Nancy is being watched as those men look forward to a summer of fun in the sun at Chapel Hill. Nancy is a 1962 graduate of Chapel Hill High School and will be attending summer school here and then going to Wilmington College in the fall. Dirty clothes should also be fun this summer since Nancy plans to work as a secretary at the University Laundry in addition to her class attendance.

Classes Begin For Summer

A registration of 4,500 is expected today for the first session of UNC summer school, an increase of about ten per cent over last year's first session enrollment.

Due to this increased enrollment, Summer School Director A. K. King said Monday that University housing was the fullest that it had been in many summers. At that time there were about 75 rooms for women still available and a few scattered rooms for men.

Of the 4,500 expected students, Dr. King stated that between 2,100 and 2,200 of these would be students who were enrolled in the regular fall and spring semesters. About 900 others will be graduate and professional students, and approximately 125 will be seeking re-admission as regular students.

The rest of the expected enrollment will be composed of "visiting students" who have been admitted to the summer school only. These will represent over 110 other institutions and some foreign countries.

Fewer "Poor" Students

"Far fewer poor students enroll in the two terms of summer session than in the regular nine-month school term," Dr. King stated. "Students who come here from other institutions have to be in good standing, academically and otherwise, in order to be admitted to summer session."

Student Government To Hold Summer Position Interviews

By BILL HOBBS

Any persons interested in serving on the summer school Student Government Board, the summer school honor councils, or as acting student government Secretary-Treasurer for the summer will be interviewed next Tuesday and Wednesday from 2 to 5 p.m. in the student government offices on second floor Graham Memorial.

Inman Allen, acting president of the student body for summer school and president of the regular session student body, said he would welcome applications for the positions from any interested student.

He stressed that a person need not be a student at the University's regular sessions to apply. Students who will be here for both summer sessions are preferred, but this is not a requirement. Allen also said it was not necessary to have had previous experience in student government.

Wants Active SG

Allen, who was elected student body president on the University Party ticket after a heated campaign in opposition to Student Party nominee Dwight Wheelers, said this week that he hoped to make this summer's student government more active than in the past. He said, "If we are going to have an active student government, we will need active, interested people to run it," in urging students to apply for the available positions.

The Summer School Student Government Board consists of seven appointed members, the acting Secretary-Treasurer, and the acting president, who also serves as chairman of the Board. The Board was established to replace the old Summer School Legislative Board in a bill which passed the regular session Student Legislature last March.

'Shpreme Power'

The Board meets weekly and has the "supreme legislative power in the Summer School Student Body." It thus acts in the same capacity as the regular session Student Legislature and can appropriate funds, establish committees, approve presidential appointments, and pass legislation "proper and necessary to promote the general welfare of the Summer School Student Body." The Board has a fund of approximately $700 from which it can appropriate money, according to President Allen.

The Acting Secretary-Treasurer for summer school receives and disburses all summer school student government funds. Besides his financial work, he is automatically a member of the Student Government Board and serves as chairman of the Summer School Publications Board. He is also empowered "to perform the duties of the Acting President in the event of his absence or incapacity."

Temporary Treasurer

Mike Lawler, vice president of the Student Body during the regular sessions, is presently filling the post as temporary acting secretary-treasurer, but will be unable to continue in the position.

The summer school Men's and Women's honor councils have the same powers to try cases under the Honor Code as do the regular session Men's and Women's Councils. Each Council consists of seven members and a chairman. Men's Council chairman for both summer sessions is Grant Wheeler, the Women's Council chairman for the first session is Carolyn Pinion; Bev Haynes is Woman's Council chairman for the second session.

Allen's original appointments to the summer school honor councils, which he made last month, were not approved by the regular session legislature on the grounds that he had not held interviews for the positions.

In addition to the appointed members of the two councils, any member of the regular session councils who is present in summer school automatically sits on the councils.

'Best' Quarterly Has Six Stories

The summer issue of the Carolina Quarterly, which its editor Jerome Stern calls the "biggest and best ever," is now on sale at local newsstands for 50 cents a copy.

This issue contains six short stories and contributions from 17 poets. Three of the authors were recently awarded prizes by the Quarterly editorial staff for outstanding work during the past year.

Two prize winning stories by Leon Rooke are included and an award winning poem by Don Eulert. Also featured are selections by two "name" poets, Judson Crews and David Cornel De Jong.

The cover of the 72-page summer issue features a close-up photograph of the face of "Hotai," the Japanese god of happiness and good luck. Jim Cornel, UNC undergraduate in geology, was the photographer.

Four of the writers are native North Carolinians or students at UNC. Rooke is from Roanoke Rapids and an employee of the UNC News Bureau, Kay Barnhart is an English major at UNC and now in summer school, Richard Rickert is a UNC graduate now teaching in Maryland, and Sally Nixon is from Stanley, N. C.
