

Dean Heard Leaves Vision Behind

The University lost one of its best known and most respected members Saturday when Dean of the Graduate School Alexander Heard was appointed Chancellor of Vanderbilt University. His absence will be sorely felt during the next years as the University seeks to meet increased demands on both the quality and quantity of its facilities, but he has left behind a legacy of achievement and a vision of a new university of national prominence.

The University in the past has been one of regional greatness. This, however, is nonetheless the past, and its future is uncertain. It faces the fact that its role in the South is decreasing with the growth of newer and more universities of prominence and quality. It faces also the fact that its past greatness has been Southern greatness, and, as Dean Heard has stated, Southern greatness does not mean national greatness or even national excellence.

For the University to gain a national reputation, as he envisioned, a large expansion in the now existing graduate schools and a steep rise in the quality of instruction there will be required. This expansion, however, may mean that the undergraduate program here will suffer; yet one of the outstanding past achievements of this institution has been its ability to provide an intellectual atmosphere for those of its students who have little to gain from graduate study.

A further complication arises in the fact that it seems to be the need of the people of this state to place economy before excellence in the realm of education. Several University programs received a severe setback in the defeat of the November bond issue, and it is probable that these programs will have rough sledding in the 1963 General Assembly when President Friday's money requests challenge the Legislature to do what the people themselves would not.

Dean Heard, however, has pointed out four great advantages that the University has which give hope that these difficulties may be surmounted. These are a climate of racial tolerance in this state that is seldom found in other parts of the South, a close association with two great neighboring institutions, a record of past excellence, and wide-spread acceptance by the people of the state of the concept of a "free and sophisticated" university.

Dean Heard's departure will be deeply felt and deeply regretted. He will be remembered not only as a man who made great achievements while he was here, but also as one who had a vision which he left behind for his associates to follow. He has pointed the way. We hope his directions will be followed.

Suspended Student Requests Court Review Council Trial; Is Readmitted To University

The case of Anne Royal Carter took two new turns last week as Miss Carter, suspended from UNC last year on charges of an Honor Code violation, filed a petition for review of her case in Wake County Superior Court and was granted readmission to school as a summer student.

Chancellor William B. Aycock reinstated Miss Carter for admission to school last May. "Under the circumstances, I felt it more advisable to handle the case myself," he said. Miss Carter had been suspended by the Women's Council, and under normal procedure the Woman's Council would have ruled on her reinstatement.

Previous to filing her petition in court, Miss Carter had requested a review of her case from Chancellor Aycock, Consolidated University President William Friday, and the University's Board of Trustees. Her attorney, John Manning of Chapel Hill, has challenged the authority of a student body such as the Women's Council to discipline students with such penalties as suspension.

The Board of Trustees, when presented with the case, established a special committee headed by William Medford to investigate the matter.

The validity of the Women's Council authority in the matter and the fairness of Miss Carter's

Heard Resigns To Become New Vanderbilt Chancellor

Alexander Heard, Dean of the Graduate School, has resigned to become chancellor of Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn. He will take office February 1, 1963.

UNC Chancellor William B. Aycock said today that a recommendation for Heard's successor would be made to the Trustees at their July meeting.

A nationally known political scientist, Heard will become the chief executive officer of the 3,500-student university upon the retirement of the present Chancellor Harvie Branscomb next spring.

UNC President William Friday, commenting upon Heard's election, said, "We sincerely regret that we shall lose him to Vanderbilt University, but we are glad that he is to become the chancellor of a major university in the South."

UNC Grad

Dean Heard has been with the University since 1950 when he joined the faculty as professor of political science; he became head of the graduate school in 1958. A 1938 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University, Heard has also worked in the Institute for Research in Social Science.

He is the author of several books on political campaign financing, including "Democracy in America." Heard expressed the desire to continue his political science research work as chancellor of Vanderbilt.

Last fall President Kennedy named Heard to head a commission to study the problem of campaign financing. The commission reported to the President in mid-April, making several recommendations.

The President is expected to use the report in making his recommendations to Congress in the area of political campaign funds.

Ph.D. From Columbia

A native of Savannah, Ga., Heard held several Federal government jobs after graduation from UNC. A Navy officer in World War II, he took part in combat landings in the Philippines and Okinawa.

Graham Memorial Concert Wednesday

The Chapel Hill Summer Pops Band will play by candle light Wednesday night on the Graham Memorial lawn in the first of three summer session band concerts scheduled by the Graham Memorial Summer Activities Board with the cooperation of the UNC Music Department and the American Federation of Musicians.

The band, directed by Edward L. Kottick, will play a wide variety of pops, marches, and light classical selections.

The group is made up of professional musicians from the Chapel Hill-Durham-Raleigh area and is composed mainly of band directors and music students who are also professionals. It will also perform at the Community 4th of July celebration here on Emerson Field, and at the Graham Memorial Lawn concerts on July 24 and August 7.

The general public is invited to the Wednesday night concert at 8, and GMAB head Don Curtis advises that blankets should be brought for sitting on the lawn.

CAROLINA BEAUTY BONNIE HORNER smilingly awaits the return of the sun to the waters of Kessing Pool. Bonnie is a sophomore from Spruce Pine, N. C., who is majoring in Physical Therapy. Bonnie plans to stay for one session, and aside from zoology labs, she likes to spend her time swimming, playing tennis, and beaching. She likes Chapel Hill, she says, because it never rains here like it does in the mountains around Spruce Pine.

Senior Drowns In Bahamas

John Lee Atchley, a UNC Senior and holder of a Regular NROTC Scholarship, was drowned Sunday in the Bahama Islands. Atchley was reportedly free diving without a breathing lung at the time of the accident.

Atchley was a native of Rahway, N. J., and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Lee Atchley of Rahway. He was majoring in International Relations and specializing in Far Eastern studies. An official at the NROTC headquarters said that he had close to a B average.

Funeral services will be held today in Rahway.
