

Director Henry Likes Student Help

CONTEMPORARY CARD SALE

Beginning Monday, June 18, the Intimate Bookshop will begin a contemporary studio-card sale. These cards — birthdays, baby congratulations, and friendships, just to name a few — will give anyone who receives one a laugh or a shock.

Our special prices begin Monday ten cents each or three for a quarter while they last.

"If the water faucet doesn't work somebody usually comes to see me about it. Likewise for coke machines that are faulty or a pool table that breaks in half" grinned the stocky, slightly greying Director of Graham Memorial.

Howard Douglas Henry, or Mr. Henry as everybody calls him, was born in a small Wisconsin town, Viroqua, and possesses the same brand of charm and hospitality that southerners like to feel they have priority over.

For Mr. Henry, the directorship of the Graham Memorial Student Union is a multi-faceted, highly interesting job.

He arrived at the University of North Carolina four years ago delighted with the opportunity to bring forth a new and comprehensive program to the present student union facilities.

Students' Building

Since he has been here the building has been turned over almost exclusively to the students.

The Rendezvous Room located in the basement of the building which before Mr. Henry's arrival was used mainly for meetings is now always available for student enjoyment.

And the large lounge in the center of the building is now used very seldom for "private functions such as faculty teas."

"I think," drawled the transplanted mid-Westerner, "that the greatest change in the past four years is the handling of the Graham Memorial series. We have tried to expand and enlarge it and the qualities of the whole effort are good. It has expanded more into the cultural area and I think that the students appreciate it."

Mr. Henry didn't come to Carolina with a headful of needed reforms. He admitted that he wanted to improve the union but when he first arrived he "sat back and watched."

"I wanted to see the areas of the greatest interest to the students," he said. "And I noticed which programs were handled by which departments and proceeded from there."

Student Planning

Mr. Henry leaves most of the planning of programs up to the students.

"I try to make the students aware of their responsibility in relation to the campus but everything that they do does not have to be reviewed by me.

"We do operate on a budget," he added smiling, "and we could not put on a play that asks for $750 in royalties because we simply don't have the money for that sort of thing."

Mr. Henry's fondest dream is to have a new, modern student union which will have the facilities to accommodate the ever-increasing student enrollment.

"The present building is not conveniently located for the great bulk of students. Because of its limited facilities," he commented, "it doesn't have the traffic that a new building and new location would have."

He said that the proposed student union building will be conveniently located on Emerson Field which is in close proximity to the library, Lenoir Hall, and both men's and women's dormitories.

Satisfaction

When asked what he enjoyed most about his job, Mr. Henry smiled and answered saying, "It's the feeling of satisfaction you get when you know that you are bringing to the total campus worthwhile activities in the form of entertainment, culture and social activities.

"Coupled with that," he said, "there is the fact that while doing this you work with students who are directly involved in all types of work. You're sending that person into the world a little better equipped to begin service to his community after his formal education is over."

The Bureau of the Census was established as a permanent agency in 1902.
