Dey Hall Offers Air-Conditioned Language Study

By KATHERINE ALSOP

Dey (pronounced dye) Hall, which opened its doors in early June to provide air-conditioned comfort for numerous summer session classes from various departments is actually the new home for the language department.

The million dollar, completely air-conditioned building houses 60 offices, 30 classrooms and ultra-modern laboratory facilities.

The language departments will have the exclusive use of the building during the regular session. The Department of Romance Languages will occupy the second and third floors and the Department of Germanic Languages will have the fourth floor.

Both departments will have access to the seven-room laboratory on the first floor. Two hundred booths will accommodate students studying at all levels in the language program.

The tape recorders are operated by remote control. The student simply dials the lesson that he wants. He can also use the tape to record his lesson which will enable him to check his conversational progress.

Dey was named for William Morton Dey, a French professor here from 1907 until 1950. Dey was born in Norfolk, Va., and attended the University of Virginia, UNC and Harvard University.

His specialty was French literature of the 19th century. While here Dey was a Faculty Marshall, a member of numerous committees and the first chairman of the Division of Humanities. He died a year and a half ago.

INJRCCC

There will be a required meeting of the INJRCCC Saturday night at the conspiracy headquarters at Bryan Lane to consider punitive measures against Harry's Grill, which has stopped selling Ballentine beer.

Ann Queen Is Busy Woman

By KATHERINE ALSOP

Anne Queen, the genial director of the campus YWCA, has never been afraid of hard work.

Upon her graduation from high school in Heywood County, N.C., she worked for 10 and a half years at the Canton, N.C. paper mill. Then she decided to take in the benefits of higher education and enrolled in Berea College in Kentucky. There she worked her way through school handling odd jobs from washing dishes to serving as dormitory monitor.

She attended Yale Divinity School upon her graduation from Berea where she earned a B.D. in Social Ethics.

She then worked as an assistant chaplain at the University of Athens. She worked in Athens for three years before going to work for the American Friends Service Committee as college secretary.

It was this letter job that influenced many of her present views and convictions.

Student Recruiter

As the college secretary, she traveled to colleges and universities in seven states recruiting students for work projects in both this country and abroad. These projects were mainly work camps and community service projects.

Miss Queen then accepted the directorship of the "Y" in 1956 and as one of the 3 staffers she always has plenty to do. But her restless energy won't allow her to quit at five p.m.

She has become very interested in the Campus Peace Corps. When asked about her personal views on the Peace Corps, she said, "I feel the Peace Corps is the most imaginative proposal that's come out of Washington—in terms of its long range impact on American values."

No Sure Answers

"Of course," she continued, "it won't answer all of the problems and there will doubtless be a few more mistakes. But it is a start."

"Another wonderful thing about the Peace Corps," she explained, "is that it offers a wonderful opportunity for people of all ages to express their idealism. And the people who return from the field will be much better teachers, and more sensitive diplomats because of their experience in the Corps."

Another project which she hopes to get underway next year is a reading group which will study the intellectual quarterly CROSS CURRENTS. "This periodical," she explained "contains reprints of outstanding articles on philosophy and theology from all over the world."

"Many of these articles would never meet the reader of English if it weren't for this quarterly."

Informal Education

This latter project bears out her sincerity when she gave her reasons for liking Chapel Hill. "I love the opportunity," she said, "to continue to learn from the people that I come into contact with. I think that the informal approach to education imposes a different kind of necessity for discipline."

"But," she added, "at the heart of this opportunity to experiment with new ideas is a free environment in which we work."

"For me," she continued, "freedom is one of the most important concepts and realities. Here in Chapel Hill we have a free environment. We have the responsibility to help keep freedom alive by exercising it. And freedom without responsibility has no meaning."

lina Governor, Terry Sanford, in his successful 1960 campaign. He is now Co-Chairman of the North Carolina Operation Support Program.

Democratic National Chairman, John M. Bailey, joined retiring College Director Theroux in praising Hunt as "one of the outstanding College Young Democrats in America" and a person who will "do an excellent job as College Director in this vital election year."

LONG ROAD TO SAINTHOOD

The process of intensive investigation by which the Catholic Church declares a person a saint has been in force in its present form since 1634.

Before that, medieval Popes proclaimed persons saints on evidence supplied by the local bishop and on the sworn testimony of contemporary witnesses to the deceased person's saintly life and virtues.
