Playmakers Slate Ghost Play Wed.

The love affair of a benevolent ghost with a beautiful young school teacher provides the action in the next Playmakers' production, "The Enchanted," August 8 and 9. The play, a summer fantasy by Jean Giraudoux, deals with the efforts of the town inspector to rid a French town of the ghost and the efforts of the town to keep him.

Assisting leading lady Dorothy Worthy, UNC student from Charlotte, will be seven little girls, ages 9 to 12, from Chapel Hill and Durham. Some of them have never been on stage before, while others are veteran actresses.

Russell Graves, associate director of the Carolina Playmakers, will direct the play. Technical director will be Gene Lominas, from Asheville, a former UNC graduate in dramatic arts and a summer school instructor. Rhoda Blanton, a rising senior majoring in drama will be stage manager. She is from Shelby. And Sally Cook, a UNC graduate student who teaches at Virginia Intermont College in Bristol, Va., during the winter, will be assistant stage manager.

Other leading characters are Oskie Cramer of Chapel Hill and Tommy Thompson of Durham. Carl Hinrichs, Jan Langston, Edna Clark, Sally Cook, William Senkus, Ed Cathell, and Charles Finley will also appear in the play.

Tickets for "The Enchanted" are available at Ledbetter-Pickard in Chapel Hill and 292 Bynum Hall, as well as at the box office on the evenings of performance, for $1.50.

Phone Listings Now Due For Directories

The Chapel Hill Telephone Co. recently notified all UNC departments to complete their new telephone directory listings, giving the name for their department and individual names together with the address and telephone numbers.

Deadline for inclusion of such listings was announced as August 15 with the understanding that names of departments or individuals not shown on such lists would be omitted from the next issue of the directory scheduled for December 1 distribution.

Department heads who did not receive such listing requests have been asked to notify the directory office, telephone number 912-5363 immediately.

Since the current departments comprise the mailing lists, out of a total of 209 departments, 25 departments have yet to submit their departmental listings, according to a telephone spokesman.

New Club Organized At UNC Aims For Political Reform

By BILL HOBBS

A small group of undergraduate and graduate students met last Monday evening to map plans for the organization of a new political group in Chapel Hill—the Chapel Hill Progressive Labor Club.

The club is part of a national council of Marxist groups organized around the magazine Progressive Labor, a monthly publication emanating from New York.

The Chapel Hill group is one of the only two clubs in the South; the other is in Atlanta, Ga. At present there is no formal organization and no officers, although undergraduate Dennis King of Chapel Hill and graduate student Dave Bland have been designated as spokesmen for the group.

King said there were eleven members of the club but that they hope to expand in size and scope of activity this fall.

"Truly Revolutionary"

He said the national group was attempting to organize a "truly revolutionary" national party based on "improving the condition of the workers along socialist and Marxist - Leninist lines." The group feels that existing socialist and Marxist groups in this country, including the Communist Party, are not presenting a "unified vanguard to further socialist objectives."

"We are completely open and above board," said Bland; "We will not and are not engaging in any conspiratorial activities." The members feel that the tendency of many other "leftist" groups to go underground "has just fed propaganda to their enemies." They plan to publicize all their activities and hold open meetings.

Seiji Shiki Will Be UNC's Delegate

Seiji Shiki, who won the master's degree at the University of North Carolina in 1918, will be UNC's official delegate at a celebration of the 80th anniversary of Waseda University in Tokyo. Shiki's appointment to represent the University was made by President William Friday.

Publisher of a newspaper in Japan, Shiki was in the United States several years ago at which time he paid a visit to Chapel Hill.

The Chapel Hill Club began meeting around the second week of June this summer. Most of its members are former members of the New Left Club, a discussion group which disbanded this May but may be reorganized next fall.

"Political Action Group"

Nick Bateson, a graduate student in the Club, said there was a "great difference between us and the New Left. We are a political action group, where they were a discussion group. Many of our members were members of the Marxist seminar of the New Left. We did not grow out of the New Left, but would have started even if there had never been a New Left Club."

The club sent a six-man delegation to a national Progressive Labor meeting in New York in the first week of July. The Chapel Hill delegation was the largest in attendance. The purpose of the meeting, the first of its kind, was for the delegates to discuss the formation of a political party on a formal basis. The delegates decided to wait for a year before actually organizing a party.

Move Into State

They returned to their local areas to "explore the possibilities of starting such a party and broaden our activities."

The Chapel Hill group had originally planned to work only with students but has now decided to move into the integration and labor union movement in the state as a whole.

They have discussed tentative plans for the formation of integrated "Worker's Councils" in the state and are presently discussing a platform of improvements for labor conditions in the state.

King said another national conference has been scheduled for this fall. The purpose of this meeting would be to formulate a national program. "We feel that the lack of a concrete program with specific ends and steps to achieve them has been one of the chief failures of other socialist and Marxist groups in this country," he said.

King urged any students interested in socialism or Marxism to contact himself or David Bland.
