

Chuck Hiller's Grand Slam Chills Yanks, 7-3

NEW YORK (UPI) — Charlie Hiller turned from ham to hero with one swing of his bat Monday when he smashed the eighth grand slam home run in World Series history to give the San Francisco Giants a 7-3 victory over the New York Yankees.

That one dramatic drive by the man who fumbled away the Giants' desperate hopes as they lost the third game, brought 66,607 fans roaring to their feet and squared the classic at two games each.

It also brought victory to big Don Larsen who, on this same mound and for the rival Yankees, six years ago on this very day hurled the only perfect game in World Series history.

Hiller's seventh-inning blast came after catcher Tom Haller smashed a two-run homer for the Giants in the second and the Yankees bounced back to tie up in the sixth. And it was a shot which ripped a page out of the favored Yankee's own personal victory ledger.

First N L Slam

No National Leaguer ever had hit a grand slam home run in the series and, of the seven which had been struck, six of them were blasted by the Bronx Bombers.

Until Monday.

And Hiller had a lot on his mind and but little going for him to all intents and purposes as he went to the plate with the bases loaded, two men out and Marshall Bridges on the mound.

In that third game as they squared off in Yankee Stadium, Hiller played a double play ball like a man picking cherries with five thumbs. The double play failed, the Yankees got a third run which — after the Giants rallied for two in the ninth — was the margin of victory.

On The Spot

The chunky usually adept infielder from McHenry, Ill., was a man on a spot this time, too. But now, knuckles white, the sure hands that failed him briefly Sunday, swung with a fluid precision which sent the bat crashing against the ball with winning impetus.

Those Giants came right up out of the dugout and mauled him and Hiller still wasn't done. For he was part of the act in the ninth inning when they added another insurance run which completely hung the defeat on reliever Jim Coates.

But it was that seventh inning which put it away. Both starters had departed by then, veteran Whitey Ford of the Yankees seeking to extend his series record to 11 wins, and Giant Juan Marichal looking for his first.

Coates opened the gates when he walked Jim Davenport. Tom Haller fanned but then young Matty Alou, pinch-hitting for Jose Pagan, ripped a double down the left field line which sent Davenport to third.

The managerial wheels were really whirling as Al Dark of the Giants sent catcher Ed Bailey up for Larsen. Rival pilot Ralph Houk countered by removing Coates and putting in the left-handed Bridges. Dark lifted Bailey and sent Bob Nieman to the plate and Nieman was passed purposely. It looked like good strategy when Harvey Kuenn popped up, for now the Yankees needed only one out.

That's when Hiller—a man who had hit only three home runs all season—ate in spades for his fault of Sunday.

The Giants added another in the ninth, again with Hiller's help.

Matty Alou opened with a single, was sacrificed to second by reliever Billy O'Dell with one out, and scored when Hiller beat out an infield hit to Bobby Richardson and the Yankee second baseman threw it away to let the seventh run across.

The Yankees didn't roll over and play dead. For O'Dell put two away in the ninth and then ran into trouble.

Tony Kubek singled to left and took second when Bobby Richardson singled to center. Tom Trash rattled a single, to right, scoring Kubek and putting Richardson on second.

Then O'Dell looked down the lane at Mickey Mantle, a man who has made a career out of pulling the Yankees up from victory to defeat. But not this time.

He fed Mantle a pitch that the Mick grounded down to short and Ernie Bowman slick-gloved it—and fired to second for the final out.

To the guy named Chuck Hiller.

The Yankees had labeled the starting Marichal a front runner but the Giants gave him something to comfort him with two runs in the top of the second.

Felipe Alou opened with a double down the left field line. Ford doubled up his flannels and chained Alou there while he retired the next series pitching triumph.

But that's when the Giants—and Hiller roared up to bat and put it away for the afternoon. Thus they go into the fifth game at Yankee Stadium Tuesday all even—with the action then shifting back to San Francisco's Candlestick Park for a definitely necessary sixth game on Thursday after an open day for the Yankees.

travel and — if needed—seventh game on Friday.

And when they do go at it in the Yankee Stadium windup it will be the same two rivals who squared off in the second game—Jack Sanford for the Giants and Ralph Terry who dropped that 2-0 decision for the Yankees.

TAR HEEL Sportscope

By Ed Dupree

If one thing surprises me about the 1962 football season, it is this: Carolina's three opponents have played a total of seven games—they've won only three. All three wins have been against the Tar Heels.

North Carolina State topped UNC, 7-6, then fell before Clemson and Maryland—both times by one touchdown.

Ohio State romped up and down the field at Columbus in Carolina's second game, taking a 41-7 triumph. But the Buckeyes, rated first in the nation, ran into trouble at UCLA Saturday and lost a 9-7 thriller.

And Saturday Michigan State took Carolina, 38-6. For the awesome Spartans it was their first victory. The week before Stanford had upset them, 16-13.

When Saturday's game ended, a three-week era ended for the Carolina footballers. They have seven games remaining and don't have to play a team called State.

The schedule has been tough so far, and it will continue to be tough. Maryland, South Carolina, Wake Forest, Clemson, Virginia, Notre Dame and Duke are seven teams that will win their share of games.

Maryland is the only unbeaten team in the group and the Terps will be UNC's opponent this week. Tom Nugent and his M-Squad, Gangbusters and Hustlers will match three-platoon power with Jim Hickey's Blues, Tars and Rams.

Nugent won't forget last year's game at College Park very easily. His men beat SMU, 14-6, Clemson, 24-21, and Syracuse, 22-21. Then the Tar Heels came to town and erimmed the ninth-ranked nationally Terps, 14-8. That was one of only three Maryland losses that season.

If the Tar Heels do rebound and come up with anything near a 5-5 record, it will be a credit to the coaching staff and the players.

This week's game is the key game. A loss to the Terps might make this the longest football season in North Carolina history. But a win would prove something. It would prove that Carolina was the victim of one upset and two losses to a pair of the nation's best—regardless of the losses to Stanford and UCLA.

It would not surprise me if Ohio State and Michigan State went unbeaten for the rest of the season. Early losses make teams greater.

But, back to the Tar Heels. They have three straight home games. Of the three, only Wake Forest beat the Tar Heels in 1961. And all three foes were played away from Kenan Stadium last season.

Don't be surprised to see the Tar Heels with a 3-3 mark on October 27. Beaten and winless, the team is still a good team. Not great, but good. Carolina will open its new season Saturday.

Soccermen Host Davidson Today

By Joel Bulky

The varsity soccer team hosts the Davidson booters this afternoon at 3 p.m. on Fetzer Field. The UNC team holds a 1-1 record to date, including a 1-0 win over Fort Lee, Va., and a 4-0 loss to Navy last Saturday.

Coach Marvin Allen commented about Saturday's encounter saying, "The first 15 minutes really hurt us but the team played much better in the next three periods." He added that right halfback Ted Garrett played a tremendous game for the Tar Heels.

Allen also reported that he had made several changes in the starting lineup for today. Junior George Beim will replace Buddy Siegel in the goal spot and Frank Lanford will start at right inside, in place of Herman Praxke.

The lineup:

Center Forward—Jim Reston
Right Inside—Frank Lanford
Right Wing—John Schlaeter
Right Halfback—Andy McNally or Charlie Battle
Center Halfback—Bill Snyder
Right Fullback—Park McGinty
Goalie—George Beim

Ohio State's Loss Tops Grid Action

Three of the nation's top ten football powers went down to defeat last Saturday thus creating a sure shakeup in this week's wire service rankings.

UCLA's stunning 9-7 win over top-ranked Ohio State was the headline shocker of the week and most certainly will knock the Buckeyes off the top rung. The other two upsets were less surprising but may be just as consequential in the upcoming rankings.

Georgia Tech (No. 5 last week) lost to 15th-rated LSU, 10-7 while Army (No. 9) was overturned by tough Michigan, 17-7.

Five of last week's top ten came through with relatively easy victories but Southern California (No. 6) and Miami (No. 10) were hard-pressed to keep their unbeaten records intact.

The Trojans of USC edged Iowa's Hawkeyes, 7-0 while Miami's Hurricanes slipped by Florida State, 7-6.

The two most prominent pretenders to Ohio State's gridiron throne would appear to be Alabama and Texas, Second-ranked 'Bama, however, had no picnic Saturday in turning back surprising Vanderbilt, 17-7.

The Texas Longhorns (No. 3) put in their bid with a 35-3 blitz of Tulane, while out West, Washington's eighth-rated Huskies continued to make a big noise by brushing away Kansas State, 41-0.

Seventh-ranked Mississippi was impressive in a 40-7 trouncing of out-manned Houston but Alabama's status is a definite blockade to the Rebels' chances of climbing to the top of the heap.

Penn State's 18-7 win over Rice qualifies the fourth place Nittany Lions as the class of the East and a definite national power as well. A few more weeks and Rip Engle's boys may swipe that elusive number-one rating.

Playboys, Joyner Win Grid Games

The Alexander Playboys and Joyner Jocks started off the intramural football week with shut-out victories.

The Playboys used a pair of safeties to blank the Ruffin Hossers, 4-0, in an unusual football score. Joyner romped over the Old West Pacifics, 19-0.

The Teague Tots defeated the Aycock Addicts by default and the Craige Crusaders won a default game from the Graham Crackers.
