Educator Talks To Teachers

"Teachers in the South have failed for years to supply the kind of quality instruction needed by our children," said William C. Archie, director of the North Carolina state board of higher education.

Archie spoke Thursday afternoon at Carroll Hall to education majors attending the annual convocation of the school of education. The convocation was held in observance of National Education Week, November 11-17.

Archie said that the students of North Carolina do not measure up to the students from other states, especially in the fields of math and science. "North Carolina teachers are doing a totally inadequate job in the teaching of math and science," he said.

According to Archie, the average scores made by North Carolina students on national tests are below the national average for the tests.

Archie has taught in several private schools, and is a former dean of Wake Forest College and Emory University.

Archie commended the climate of freedom that is emphasized at UNC, saying, "No other public institution in the South can compare in the freedom of climate and the tolerance that exists in UNC."

He said that the best place for North Carolina to build a distinguished, tax-supported institution of higher education is at UNC.

Archie asked the students why they wanted to become teachers, suggesting that it might be because they were not certain what they wanted to do with their life.

"Most teachers are idealists, for if they didn't scorn money, they wouldn't be in teaching," he said that although great gains had been made in pay, the average $3,900 as the average North Carolina high school teacher's pay, teachers were still underpaid.

"The teaching profession is a noble one," Archie said, and he blamed the teachers themselves, by their depreciation of their profession, for the lack of good teachers.

He listed among the attributes of good teachers: (1) native ability, (2) intellectual curiosity, (3) moral and intellectual integrity, (4) sense of humor, and (5) imagination.

The theme of the 1962 American Education Week focuses attention on the role of the schools in meeting the challenge of change.

President Kennedy said in his proclamation on American Education Week that "We should examine the quality of our educational institutions and assess the degree to which our educational programs and practices served the interests of the individual and bring vitality and strength to our Nation and its culture. Every American should be committed to the advancement of education."

Thai Dancers Perform Here November 28

West meets East on November 28 when the Phakavali Dancers come to Chapel Hill.

The dance group from Thailand will appear on the stage of Memorial Hall at 8 p.m., Wednesday, November 28.

The group originated when a retiring court musician of the 19th century drew his disciples around him in order to preserve the traditional arts of Thailand, which were in danger of disappearing.

The present head of the Institute is the son of the original founder and the foremost composer in Thailand. With his wife he directs the Institute and the company, carrying on the traditions so carefully guarded by his father.

The wife of the director is the country's leading classical dancer and is the only woman in Thailand who has directed and choreographed for the stage, films and TV.

The Phakavali was chosen to perform in the U. S. by the Asia Society Performing Arts Program because of the breadth of its repertory, which ranges from the Classical Dance-Drama to Folk Dance.

"return match" with Dr. Sam Hill on Sunday evening at 5:45. Dr. Hill will continue his talk on religion in the South. The topic for this Sunday is "Christ in Protestant Religion: What we can do about it."

Interviews for class cabinet committees for the Junior Class will be held in the Grail Room of GM from 2-4 on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Law Wives Association will sponsor a Bake Sale on Saturday, Nov. 17, in front of Billy Arthur, Inc., Eastgate Shopping Center. The Bake Sale begins at 9:00.

Judy Kellett lost 3 spiral notebooks in Rathskellar at lunch. Guess why.

There will be a meeting in Howell Hall of all juniors who were interviewed for class cabinet posts Monday night at 8.

There will be a meeting of the State Affairs Committee Monday at 3 p.m. in the Grail Room. Yack pictures will be taken. Attendance required, wear coats and tie.

There will be a meeting of the elections board on Monday, Nov. 19, at 3 in Roland Parker III.

Dorm presidents must submit their list of poll tenders to the Elections Board, GM Information Office, by 6 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 18. Polls will be open 10 to 5.

Lost: Trenchcoat with initials D. C. in collar. Can otherwise be identified; if returned, no questions asked. Contact David Chambers, 10 Battle.

GM will sponsor a Combo Party tonight 8-12 in the Rendezvous Room. No admission charge.

Freshman 66 Club meets Monday night at 6:30 in Y-Court. All interested freshmen invited.

Eleven Cadets Make Solos Within Week

Things happen fast at Carolina's AFROTC Detachment.

John H. Faunce, a senior cadet who will enter pilot training when graduated, soloed. Within the next ten days, eleven of his fellow cadets enrolled in the local Flight Instruction Program, also soloed. During the same period Howard E. Adams, another FIP student, received his private license.

The Flight Instruction Program gives all senior AFROTC cadets going into Air Force Pilot training, an opportunity to learn the fundamentals of flying and receive their private license during the final college year. Following military tradition, soon after each cadet soloed, he was tossed into a swimming pool by his classmates.

Other cadets who soloed are George M. Barr, William E. Burgess, Rodney D. Collins, William D. Croom, Perino M. Dearing, Douglas E. Eury, William H. Holderness, Reginald A. Pinson, Mark G. Schnitzer, David E. Scobie and Tony W. Walker.

Y Contingent To Make Tour Of U.N. Plant

For forty YMCA members. Thanksgiving will be spent at the United Nations in New York.

This group is planning to leave Wednesday, Nov. 21, and take a planned tour of the UN in a program entitled "The Changing Role of the UN."

"We hope to attend the General Assembly and several committee meetings," said the YMCA's advisor for this trip, Miss Ann Queen.

The students have planned to have interviews with members of different UN missions. Among the members will be those from the USSR, Cuba, India, Algeria, and Mexico.

Certain qualifications were set up by the Collegiate Council of the UN which planned this tour, that had to be met by the students going.

First, all members had to be interviewed and passed by a board headed by the co-chairmen of the project, Kellis Parker and Judy Alexander.

Second, preparatory lectures had to be given by qualified people and attended by the students. These lectures were presented by Dr. Herbert Bodman, Dr. Raymond Dawkins, William Darity and Jim McCorkle.

Third, all students must attend all sessions and meetings planned during the tour.

Students making up this UN group represent all major fields of study and are from all classes, from freshman to graduate school.

Each day the tour will last from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., leaving evenings open for free time.

When the group returns, they will begin to plan a program that will enable UNC students to see what was learned on the trip.

U.S. Considers Arming Allies With N-Weapons

SL Allots $961 For Yearbook

Student Legislature Thursday night passed three bills which appropriated a total of $1,236.60 to assist campus activities.

A bill to limit resolutions which legislature can consider was tabled, by a vote of 23-7, as the thirty-third assembly concluded its last session.

SL hastily passed a bill giving the Yackety-Yack $961.60 in order to help them rectify a total error of $1,711.60 in their income.

Louis Legum, Editor of the Yack, spoke in its behalf noting that the staff had tried hard to raise the money, by charging admission to their beauty contest and by cutting the number of '63 books to be printed by 100, thus saving $760. He added that they were still very much in debt.

A bill, introduced by Rufus Edmisten (SP) for Haynes McFadden, appropriating $210 to the Asst. Attorney General in the field of legislation for the printing of a new codification of the statutes of Student Government was passed unanimously.

Cheerleaders

A bill allotting $75 from the unappropriated balance for the UNC cheerleaders was also unanimously approved. Its purpose is to assist the cheerleaders in their effort to broadcast organized cheers from the Tin Can to Notre Dame Stadium this afternoon.

George Rosenthal, (SP) who introduced the bill for head cheerleader Hannis Latham, said that since no appropriation for the cheerleaders had been made in this year's Student Government budget, that it was the duty of SL, the representative body of the students, to aid them. He added that head football coach Jim Hickey had reported to him that this year's cheerleaders were doing an excellent job. Hickey said that he and the other coaches felt that this idea to increase school spirit was a good one.

Latham noted that $110 of the $300 cost of this project had already been raised through contributions from other campus groups. He said that this innovation in raising school spirit for an away game was a necessity and therefore warranted the appropriation. Latham also stated that cheering for a school team involved a cause common to every student, whether fraternity member or a dorm resident.

Lengthy Debate

After a lengthy debate, a proposal to amend the student constitution was tabled for further consideration. This bill stated that legislature should have only the right to pass resolutions which would "directly relate to the campus" or "substantially affect higher education in America."

Ford Rowan (SP) called the wording of the bill, co-sponsored by Arthur Hays (SP) and Bo Edwards (UP) nebulous and also questioned the legality of it.

Rowan, acting in his capacity as SL Parliamentarian, reported that this bill was unnecessary because the student constitution, the by-laws and "Roberts Rules of Order" would effectively cover this measure.

Edwards replied that something concrete should be done to clarify the constitution. He cited a recent constitution conducted by the Communications Committee which showed that 62% of the students interviewed did not want SL to consider off-campus issues as an example for his side.

Charles Cooper (SP) concluded the debate by saying that "no reins on legislature were needed and that everyone should be free to speak."

All bills now in committee will have to be re-entered into the thirty-fourth assembly, which convenes November 29th, in order to be considered again.

Mooney Named First Editor Of Journalism School Paper

The establishment of a laboratory newspaper and the appointment of its editor were announced today by Dr. Norval Neil Luxon, dean of the University School of Journalism.

The UNC Journalist, to be issued several times a semester, will be edited during 1962-63 by Charles D. Mooney, senior from Statesville. Mooney, holder of the Quincy Sharpe Mills Scholarship, was chosen by a board of student and staff members. Mooney worked on the Charlotte News last summer.

First issue of the UNC Journalist will be a four-page, printed tabloid. The editor and the board will decide the format of succeeding issues.

News and feature stories, reviews and editorials written by journalism students as class assignments or assigned by the editor will make up the content of the Journalist.

Coed Gets Reprimand For Driving After Late Hours

A sophomore coed pled guilty to a breach of the Campus Code in the only case that came before the Women's Honor Council Thursday night.

The defendant was charged with the violation of a rule prohibiting a coed from driving after closing hours without the written permission of her parents.

Students Warned Of Keeping Cars Here

An official spokesman for the Office of the Dean of Men announced yesterday that all freshmen and those sophomores without "C" averages would not be allowed to keep cars on campus between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Such action would constitute a violation of University regulations and would be dealt with accordingly.

Defense Changes Proposed

PARIS (UPI)—The United States told its European allies Friday it will give serious consideration to helping them create a medium-range nuclear missile force if they want one.

But it urged that they step up their contribution to increasing the size of the Atlantic alliance's conventional forces in Europe.

The offer was made by Undersecretary of State George W. Ball in a speech to the closing session of the eighth annual North Atlantic Treaty Organization NATO parliamentary conference.

Ball made it clear that the United States still believes there is no urgent military need for a European nuclear force. But he said if the European allies really want one, "we are ready to give serious consideration to the creation of a genuinely multilateral medium range ballistic missile force fully coordinated with the other deterrent forces of NATO."

He also told the Europeans bluntly that with their present booming economies they can contribute a bigger share to maintaining NATO's conventional forces.

In Washington, U. S. officials, commenting on Ball's speech, made these points about the multilateral missile force which he discussed:

U. S. officials believe it should be a seaborn force, either on submarines or surface vessels. This, they feel, would be less vulnerable to attack than a land force and less likely to be used for the purposes of a particular nation.

The force could be a European one or joint European-U.S. one. —But it would have to be "genuinely multilateral" and "fully coordinated" with the existing NATO deterrent.

Ball's statement apparently marked a change in the Kennedy administration's previous policy of keeping the NATO nuclear deterrent as much as possible in American hands.

Peking Paper Blasts Soviet 'Revisionists'

TOKYO (UPI)—The newspaper Red Flag of Peking, theoretical journal of the central committee of the Chinese Communist party, Friday blasted Soviet "revisionists" as "scared stiff before the position of strength of U. S. imperialism."

A 3,740-word editorial from the party organ was broadcast by the New China News Agency, and monitored here. Coming just a few days before the central committee meeting of the Soviet Communist party, the editorial underscored the Peking-Moscow ideological rift.

The attack on the Soviet Union was indirect, but unmistakable. Yugoslavia was criticized directly. The editorial ripped into "modern revisionists," a category in which Chinese theoreticians have placed Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev.

Modern revisionism, the main danger to the international Communist Movement, can be recognized by its "surrender to imperialist pressure," the editorial said, in what could well be an oblique reference to the Soviet rock removal from Cuba.

Yugoslavia was scored for "relying on the good intentions of the sensible section of the imperialist circles, believing lasting world peace can be realized."

Despite the attack on Yugoslavia, whose President Tito was called "the most conspicuous exponent of revisionism," Red Flag stated that any attempt by one party or country in the Communist bloc "to impose its own views on others or substitute for comradely suggestion and criticism a method of interference in each other's international affairs will impair the unity of the international Communist movement."

Audience On Stage

New Technique Adapted To 'Worker'

with limited budgets.

One of the leading roles, that of Helen Keller, will be played by Ann Carson, a Chapel Hill girl. Although this is Miss Carson's first production, she is said to have shown considerable promise in the early rehearsals.

Miss Margaret Cathell will play the role of Anne Sullivan, the teacher of Helen Keller. Miss Cathell has studied for two years and several summers with the Neighborhood Playhouse School of the Theatre in New York City. In addition, she has appeared in a few off-Broadway productions. Presently, she is a part-time student at the University and working at a veterinary hospital.

Paul Gold, who will appear as the father of Helen Keller, is a veteran of several Playmaker and Petite Dramatique productions. His last role was as Mephistopheles in "Doctor Faustus," presented by the Playmakers last spring.

He also appeared in "The Deadly Game" and "The Renegade" and toured with "The Matchmaker" last year. Ann West, who will play the role of Helen Keller's mother, participated in summer stock theatre in Southbury, Conn., this year. She is a transfer student from Wilmington Jr. College where she appeared in "Androcles and the Lion" and played the title role in "Medea."

The role of the Doctor will be played by Larry Walz. He has appeared in another Petite Dramatique production, "The Deadly Game" and in "Doctor Faustus."

Henry Ramer will play the role of the son.

Director Wesley Van Tassel presently is working on an MA in Dramatics Arts. He came to Chapel Hill from New York, where he taught school. His undergraduate work was done at the University of Minnesota. Van Tassel recently directed "The Deadly Game" and was assistant director of "Doctor Faustus."

The assistant director of "The Miracle Worker" is Kit Ewing. Harry Callahan is designing the set.
