Debate Team Faces Oxford; Topic Is Government's Role

The UNC Debate Team will face the Oxford University debaters Monday, Dec. 10, from 4-5 p.m. in Gerrard Hall.

The resolution to be debated is "Resolved: that it is the business of the Government to give the people what they need rather than what they want."

This will be a split-team debate, and will be open to the faculty, students, and townspeople of Chapel Hill.

The UNC Debating Team will consist of Mack Armstrong and Bill Patterson.

Armstrong is a veteran of four years on the UNC team, a 1962 delegate to the National Student Congress, and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. He is from Rogersville, Tenn., and is majoring in History.

Patterson is from Bedford Hills, N. Y., and attended Phillips Andover Academy. He is director of the Southeast District of the College Young Republican Federation. His major is also History.

Debaters from Oxford University are William D. Madel and John B. W. McDonnell.

Madel attended Uppingham School and Keble College, Oxford. He is a member of the Oxford Union Society, the Oxford University Conservative Association, the Federation of University Conservative and Unionist Associations, and the Oxford hockey and cricket teams, and plans to go into the field of publishing.

McDonnell attended the City of London School and Balliol College, Oxford. He is a member of the

China Says India Violated Truce

NEW DELHI, Friday (UPI) — Communist China accused India early today of a series of violations of the nine-day-old ceasefire, raising fears Peking was sending up a smokescreen to cover new aggression before India can rebuild its shattered defenses.

The Chinese broadcasts came shortly after Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and Pakistani President Mohammed Ayub Khan agreed to meet soon to try to resolve their disputes including their rival claims to Communist-threatened Kashmir.

Agreement

Agreement between India and Pakistan on Kashmir and other problems would free thousands of Indian troops for border duty in any renewed fighting with China.

Under terms of the truce offer made unilaterally by Peking, the Communists are to withdraw from the embattled border areas Saturday, but Nehru said tonight the cease-fire proposal in its present form is not acceptable to India.

Nehru was disclosed to have received another communication from Chinese Communist premier Chou En-lai Thursday night but its contents were not disclosed.

Chou's message came after an Indian spokesman said recent "clarifications" asked from Peking earlier made it clear the Communists intend to retain the 2,000 square miles of Ladakh they have occupied since the start of border hostilities last month. He called the clarifications "quite confusing."

Holds Firm

Communist China, holding firm to its demands on India, claimed early today that Indian troops had pushed to within two miles of Chinese positions in the eastern section of the border and that Indian planes penetrated deeply behind Chinese lines in the west.

FREE FLICKS

The Graham Memorial Free Flick tonight will be "Shane," starring Alan Ladd, Jean Arthur, Van Heflin, and Brandon De Wilde. "Shane," directed by George Stevens, is the story about a former gunfighter who tries to settle down, but is forced to continue his violent life. Saturday night's movie is "Singing in the Rain," starring Gene Kelly. Showings will be at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. in Carroll Hall. I.D. cards will be required.

Shakespeare, Shaw Works Set Tonight

Tonight at 8 p.m. in the main lounge of Graham Memorial, Petite Dramatique will present "A Smattering of Shaw and Shakespeare."

The first part of the program will be a dramatized reading of Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion," with a cast of twelve. It will be directed by Dramatic Art graduate student Larry Warner, included in the cast are Garth Ferguson, Anita Phillips, George Gray, and Judy Foster.

A selected series of scenes and monologues from the works of Shakespeare will comprise the second half of the program.

Guest artist for this presentation will be Clarence Felder, an actor who appeared this summer with "The Lost Colony" in Manteo.

Felder has held starring roles in "Macbeth," "J.B.," and "Streetcar Named Desire," all at the Town Theatre in Charleston, South Carolina. He has also appeared in "The Lady's Not for Burning" at the Columbia Playhouse in Columbia, South Carolina. Felder is currently in rehearsal for "Macbeth" as a guest artist at the Goldsboro Neighborhood Playhouse, Goldsboro, North Carolina.

There will be a reception following the show, also in the main lounge. Admission is free, and I.D. cards are not required.

Seeger Tickets Still Available

Pete Seeger, internationally famous folk singer, will appear Wednesday at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall in a concert sponsored by the New Left Club. Tickets are now on sale at Kemp's and at G.M. at $1 each.

Proceeds will go to Seeger who

9 Fraternities Censured For Parade Floats

The Office of Student Affairs yesterday released the names of nine fraternities and one dormitory that will receive official "letters of censure" for sponsoring objectionable floats in the "Beat Dook" parade. The nine fraternities are Delta Kappa Epsilon, Kappa Alpha, Kappa Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Gamma Delta, Phi Kappa Sigma, and Sigma Chi. Everett Dormitory was the only dorm to be censured.

The "letters of censure" were mailed yesterday to each organization. Dean Long said that this is the first time that such official censures had been issued. He implied that the action by the Dean's office was not to be taken lightly.

When asked to comment on the critique used in determining which floats were objectionable, Dean Long noted the ones his office considered "offensive" or "in bad taste." He said that the groups singled out showed a "lack of self-discipline."

Phakavali: They Can Also Twist

"Fascinating," "spectacular," "amazing" were some of the impressions the Phakavali Dancers of Thailand made on the audience when they performed Wednesday night in Memorial Hall.

But after the performance the girls changed from their elaborate brightly-colored costumes into blue-jeans and t-shirts and the boys demonstrated that they could twist, too.

Only a few of the dancers could speak English but a couple of the boys nodded rapidly when they were asked, "Twist?"

Then to prove they understood, they performed good-naturedly.

The troupe is small but select, consisting of six girls and two men and an orchestra of six. The ages of the dancers range from 18 to 30.

The Phakavali Dancers, sponsored by Graham Memorial, is touring the United States. Before coming here, it performed in several countries in Europe.

The most exciting number Wednesday night was a "sword dance" which used real swords and eventually worked into actual combat between the "demon-giant" and the "Monkey King."

At one point in the dance, one of the dancers flings his sword toward the other, who is lying on the floor. The one on the floor rolls over just in time for the sword to stab into the floor where he was lying.

After the performance the "demon-giant" said that in one performance, the "Monkey King" had not rolled over fast enough and the sword had grabbed the back of his costume and pinned him to the floor.

Another number which seemed to be an audience favorite was a folk dance which had originated in the rice-threshing fields.

Hardwood rice poles, which are beaten together to thresh the rice, are both the "percussion accompaniment" and the hazard of the game, for the dancers must dance between the clashing poles.

When asked if they had ever got their feet caught between the beating poles, they laughed and demonstrated how long they had been doing the dance by holding their hands parallel to the floor to show three feet or "little girl."

One instrumental number was performed by the six-member Thai classical orchestra. The Ranaad, a kind of alto xylophone with bamboo keys, took the lead.

The orchestra uses two types of wind instruments, the flute type and the oboe, and a variety of percussion instruments.

The dances range from ritualistic ceremonies to folk dances. The dancers speak with their hands to ask questions, make challenges, and tell stories.

Five curtain calls and a statement by a student who saw the performance seem to sum it up. "It was one of the best things I've ever seen on this campus," he said.

FOLK CONCERT SET

Obray Ramsey, banjoist and folk singer, and Tommy Hunter, guitarist, both of Madison County in the Great Smokies, will give a recital, "Songs of the French River," in Graham Memorial Lounge Saturday, Dec. 8 at 8 p.m. Their appearance will be sponsored by GM, the North Carolina Folklore Society, and the University Folklore Council.

Ramsey and Hunter are also on the program of the North Carolina Folklore Society meeting in the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh Friday, Dec. 7 at 2 p.m.

Ramsey has made an album for Vanguard Records.

Allen Will Veto Yack Bill Because Of Clerical Error

THE LEAVES LEAVE—With the cold windy days of Fall here, the campus maintenance men struggle to clear the dead leaves that have fallen on campus. After the man in foreground removes the leaves from the sidewalks and gutters, a mulcher being pulled by the tractor is used to chew them up. (Photo by Jim Wallace)

Statutes Bill Also Incorrect, Will Get Axe

By HARRY DELUNG

Student Government President Inman Allen yesterday announced that he will veto $1161 worth of legislation, including a $951.60 appropriation to the Yackety-Yack.

The Yack bill and a $210 appropriation for the Codification of Student Government Statutes were passed by Student Legislature at their last session Nov. 15.

Allen told the DTH, "My veto of the Yack bill is not done in opposition to the appropriation. There is a numerical error in the bill the Legislature passed which should be corrected."

Allen referred to a budget deficit of $420 which should have read $465. An attempt was made to point this out in the last legislative meeting. Due to the pressure of time (five minutes before the women's curfew hour), the body passed the bill. It had been introduced by Jean Yoder of the University Party.

The vote was 14-6, with a large number of abstentions. Allen said yesterday, "I hope the legislature will learn to be more careful by having to correct this mistake, as I certainly hope they will." According to the executive, the incorrect "whereas" clause cannot be amended. It would be necessary for the Legislature to pass a new and corrected bill.

In his veto message concerning the Codification bill, the president pointed out that "nowhere . . . is it specified from where the $210 will be drawn."

Appropriations of this nature normally specify that the money will come from the unappropriated balance.

What's In A Name? Plenty, Says State

Seven State College students picketed Chancellor John Caldwell's residence Wednesday afternoon protesting the name change of the school.

Bystanders reported one sign read "Call Us Cow College, but Never UNCR." Another said "Keep Sanford's and Friday's Politics Out."

The picketing began about 1:30 p.m. The pickets carried signs denouncing the proposed change of the College to the University of North Carolina at Raleigh. The orderly picketing was being carried on in front of the Chancellor's home.

It has been proposed that State College be expanded and renamed University of North Carolina at Raleigh.

Caldwell has endorsed the change. Some students have opposed the proposed name.

Cordon Record On WUNC

WUNC-FM's "Let's Listen to Opera" will feature a recording of

Dr. Norman Cordon of the University of North Carolina Extension Division in the part of Mephistopheles in Charles Gounod's FAUST Friday, Dec. 7, at 8 p.m.

The disk, which was recorded directly from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera Company March 14, 1942, is the only one of its kind in existence.

2 UNC Professors Go "On The Road"

Two U.N.C. professors were "on the road" last week, one in Italy to receive an award and one in Washington, D. C. to address the U.S. State Department.

B. L. Ullman, Kenan Professor Emeritus of Classics at the University of North Carolina, is the recipient of an honorary degree awarded by Padua University, Padua, Italy, last week.

He received the honorary diploma for his contribution to Paduan humanist studies. Prof. Ullman discovered the author of the first history of literature ever written by a humanist, Sacco Polenton of Padua.

The Padua University Press recently published a book containing most of Prof. Ullman's notes on Polenton. The book was dedicated to Prof. Ullman.

Currently, Prof. Ullman is in Italy on a double mission. He attended a special meeting of the newly-formed International Balzan Foundation in Rome in October. Dr. Ullman is a member of the committee on prizes of this foundation, patterned after the Nobel Foundation, and also dedicated to peace and the recognition of outstanding contributors to the sciences and humanities. He is also doing research in Florence, Italy.

Dr. Ullman is currently the president of the Mediaeval Academy of America. He served as president of the Fellows of the Academy, a group of 50 of the most distinguished scholars in the fields of mediaeval art, history, language and literature. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Speaking to a meeting of the Foreign Service Institute at the Department of State in Washington, D. C. this week, Associate Professor of Political Science Robert A. Ripen said Mongolia would never attain economic self-sufficiency because she imports too many primary articles.

"The Mongol has been a poorly adapted factory worker, and practically refused to do any construction work at all . . . he . . . would rather import Chinese to dig ditches and put up buildings and bridges than do it himself," said Ripen.

But though Mongolians make use of Chinese labor, they look to Russia for leadership. The Soviet model inspired the Mongolian Party: its Academy of Sciences, its army, its secret police, its architecture, and its literature is patterned after Russia's. Even Mongolian leaders, such as Choibosan, who patterned himself after Stalin, was erased from the minds of the people, much as Stalin was purged from the Russian hearts, Ripen said.

"Development of education represents Communism's most positive accomplishment in Outer Mongolia," said Ripen. All Mongols now go to school; four year schools are most prevalent, but seven and ten-year schools also exist. Half the Mongolian population under 40 is now literate," Ripen stated.

Other performers to appear with Dr. Cordon in FAUST are: Charles Kullman in the title role; Leonard Warren as Valentine; Licia Albanese as Marguerite; Wilfred Engleman as Wagner; Lucille Browning as Siebel; and Thelma Votipka as Martha.

Dr. Cordon appeared on the concert stage for 20 years. He studied music at UNC and later at Salem College, continuing his studies at the Nashville Conservatory of Music under Gaetano de Luca and in Chicago under Hadley Outland. He received his Mus. D. in 1946 at the University of North Carolina.

His UNC contemporaries include orchestra leaders Kay Kyser, skinnay Ennis, John Scott Trotter, and Hal Kemp.

Dr. Cordon is a native of Washington, D. C.

He is presently with the Bureau of Community Adult Education of the UNC Extension Division.
