Nehru Rejects China Terms

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru Saturday rejected the Chinese Communist terms for a truce in the border war and accused Peking of trying to grab Indian territory "under cover of preliminary cease-fire arrangements."

CHINA FILM

"The Technical and Overall Development of China Under Communism" is the film presented by the Public Affairs Committee tomorrow night at 7:30 in Carroll Hall.

Following the 30-minute documentary, Dr. Yu of the Political Science department and Dr. Wang of the History department will conduct a question and answer period with the audience. The showing is open to the public.

Nehru made the accusation in a letter to Chinese Communist Premier Chou En-lai. Nehru was replying to Chou's note of Nov. 28 warning that if Indian troops did not withdraw as demanded by Peking the border fighting could flare again. Saturday's move raised the possibility of renewed warfare. Communist China has insisted it was withdrawing its troops from the battle lines in compliance with its self-proclaimed truce. But Indian troops along the northeastern frontier said there was no sign of a pullback anywhere along the front.

A UPI dispatch from Texpur, Assam, said military leaders there believed Peking's announcement of a cease-fire and a withdrawal might be some sort of a hoax for political and military reasons. It said these leaders were not surprised at lack of evidence of a withdrawal. Nehru's letter to Chou sharply questioned the Chinese truce terms which called for each side to withdraw 12 1/2 miles behind the "line of actual control" that was in effect Nov. 7, 1959. India insists the Chinese withdraw behind the control points of Sept. 8, 1962, when the Chinese launched their current attacks. Nehru listed five principles on which he said both India and Red China had agreed and said "withdrawal arrangements, however, that you propose behind what you refer as 'the line of actual control as of Nov. 7, 1959' are inconsistent" with these principles.

Nehru said the Chinese version of the line of actual control was really a cover for grabbing Indian territory.

"This is a definite attempt to retain under cover of preliminary cease-fire arrangements, physical possession over an area which China claims and to secure which a massive attack since 20 October 1962 was mounted by your forces."

He said the Nov. 27 Chinese cease-fire proposals were clearly aimed "at securing physical control of areas which were never under Chinese administrative control either on 7 November 1959 or at any time prior to 8 September 1962."

TO SPEAK MONDAY

Milt Rosen, chairman of the national Progressive Labor group, will speak on socialism at 8 Monday in Gerrard Hall.

The talk will be sponsored by the New Left Club, and will be open to the public. According to the New Left, Rosen will discuss what socialism is, the "method of achieving it," and "why it is necessary today in the United States."

Council To Hear UP Election Argument

The Constitutional Council will meet Monday at 4:30 p.m. in Graham Memorial to hear an appeal from the University Party on the ruling of the Elections Board that upheld the election of Jack Harrell as Freshman class president.

The Constitutional Council has sole jurisdiction over matters involving the legality of the Student Constitution. The Elections Board decided earlier that the Election Law governs only those elections provided for in the law itself, thereby deciding that election procedures in the law did not cover the Freshman class re-election. The University Party then decided to exercise its Constitutional privilege and appeal the decision. The chairman of the Men's Council, Walter Dellinger, is the chairman of the Constitutional Council. Three members from each of the Men's and Women's Councils comprise the remainder of the Council. Bev Haynes, Bev Griffin and Carolyn Pinion are the members representing the Women's Council. Whitney Durand, Bryan Simpson and Grant Wheeler are those from the Men's Council. These members were selected in a special joint session of the two Councils last Thursday night.

The meeting will be open to all students.

Aycock Defends Enrollment

Chancellor William B. Aycock released a report Friday in which he expressed his approval of out-of-state enrollment at UNC. In the report, which was made at the request of President Friday, he said that those who protest against the out-of-state students are "Provincial."

He said that it is fortunate that the Board of Trustees "has taken a broader view and has formulated reasonable policies consistent with the concept of a true university. More than a hundred years ago over 40 per cent of the student body came from beyond the borders of this state. In recent years the percentage of out-of-state students has varied from a high of 35 per cent in 1940 to as low as 20 per cent in 1955.

"Currently we have a student body at Chapel Hill of 9,604 students. Of this number 32.5 per cent (including graduate and professional) are classified as out-of-state students for purposes of tuition charges. This percentage is in keeping with the policies of the Board of Trustees governing the admission of out-of-state students."

The Trustees' policy that Aycock refers to is the following: "The number of entering undergraduate students that may be admitted to any campus of the University from outside the state in any semester is limited to 15 per cent of the undergraduate students admitted to that campus during the semester. Certain out-of-state applicants are expressly exempt from this limitation with the proviso that they be required to pay the regular out-of-state tuition, namely:

(a) Applicants whose place of birth was North Carolina; (b) Sons and daughters of persons born in North Carolina; (c) Sons and daughters of alumni of the University; (d) Graduate students; (e) Students from outside the United States; (f) Students admitted to schools which have been designated by the Board of Trustees to be serving a regional purpose, as follows: The Graduate School and The School of Public Health at Chapel Hill.

Aycock reported that U.N.C. admitted "412 out-of-state undergraduates this year who are subject to the quota limitation. These students constitute 15.6 per cent of the entering undergraduates."

"We were pleased to read in the 'New York Times' (July 1, 1962) that the University of North Carolina has 'moved up to a top first-choice position' for graduates of outstanding Eastern preparatory schools." The fact that the freshman class at Chapel Hill has the highest average college boards in all the public institutions of higher learning in the state is due largely to the admission of top quality out-of-state students."

"Also, we admitted 331 non-quota out-of-state students this year. Obviously, the large alumni group of the University together with a substantial number of native North Carolinians who have moved to other states provide an increasing potential for non-quota applicants. At the same time, no qualified North Carolina resident has been denied admission to our undergraduate student body."

"The Graduate School is exempt from the quota limitation. This is as it should be. Although 43.9 per cent of our graduate students come to us from states other than North Carolina, no resident of this state who was qualified has been rejected for graduate study."

"Last year the School of Public Health had a total enrollment of 149 students. Of this number, 105 were non-North Carolinians. This School has been appropriately designated by the Board of Trustees as serving a regional purpose and exempt from any quota. I might also point out that approximately 80 per cent of the support of the School of Public Health comes from non-state sources."

"I think we should be proud of the fact that we can accommodate a substantial number of outstanding students from other states and foreign countries. Without their presence we would become an institution of lesser stature overnight. Also, it is well to remember that the University from its inception to the present owes a deep debt of gratitude to other universities who have trained not only North Carolina students but also have provided this University with a great majority of its faculty members."

"Currently there are 650 faculty members who hold the rank of Assistant Professor or higher. Of these 650, 156 grew up in North Carolina. The remaining 494 come from forty states and fifteen foreign countries. Of the 650 faculty members, 117 received their highest degree (Ph.D., M.D., LL.B.) from the University at Chapel Hill. Except for sixteen faculty members who received their highest degree at Duke University, the remainder, who constitute more than three-fourths of the current faculty, were educated in institutions of higher learning outside the State of North Carolina.

"North Carolina needs to attract competent students from beyond its borders in a variety of programs if the needs for teachers and other professional personnel are to be met in the foreseeable future.

"The present policy of the Trustees not only provides for taking care of our own but also permits a cosmopolitan student body essential to a university. To limit further out-of-state students would thwart our aspirations to become a better institution measured by national standards."

College Editors Under Fire At Ole Miss, UCLA, Alabama

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (CBS)—The impending admission of a Negro, under federal court order, to the University of Alabama has precipitated an unprecedented campaign in this state to avoid the violence surrounding a similar incident at the University of Mississippi earlier this year.

Many prominent civic leaders of Alabama have joined in demanding that the state prevent any recurrence of the outbreak of violence that accompanied the university's short-lived desegregation in 1956.

As in the case at the University of Mississippi, the Governor-elect of Alabama, George C. Wallace, has pledged that he will defy federal authority in any attempt to integrate the university. Recently, however, he has made statements to the effect that he will not "encourage" violence, and this is interpreted as a reflection of the effectiveness of the anti-violence campaign.

The emotion surrounding the Mississippi affair has, however, already led to an incident at the University of Alabama.

Melvin Meyer, editor of the Alabama student newspaper, the Crimson and White, published an editorial condemning the actions of Mississippi governor Ross Barnett, saying there was no moral or legal justification for Barnett's actions. He wrote "the basis of the democratic system is equality before the law, and the system is to extend only to a portion of the citizenry."

Meyer has received anonymous telephone calls threatening his life. One warned him that if he did not leave town in 24 hours, he would "leave in a pine box." Two nights later, a cross was burned in front of the 20-year old editor's fraternity house, Zet Beta Tau.

The 131-year old school has had no Negroes in its student body since Arthurine Lucy, its first, was expelled in 1956 after attending three days of classes. She was expelled by the Board of Trustees for making "outrageous, false, and baseless accusations against the university. Her enrollment was surrounded by outbursts of violence.

In the years since, a few Negroes have applied to the school, but none have been accepted, on grounds that their applications were incomplete. A further Negro application, which the university apparently expects to be complete, was filed this year.

The university Board of Trustees has passed a resolution expressing "determination" that law and order will prevail at Alabama in such an event. Significantly, the resolution was proposed by an arch-segregationist on the board.

The real question mark in Alabama today is the tack that the Governor-elect will take. Due to take office in January, Wallace has vowed to maintain segregation at the university, in much the same fashion as Gov. Barnett of Mississippi. He has said that he will "stand in the classroom door" if necessary to preserve the system.

Spearman Elected Vice-President; Lawler Honored

RALEIGH—State Student Legislature (SSL) yesterday resolved that abortion should be legalized and passed UNC's proposed endorsement of federal aid to education.

The mock legislative body urged the abolition of the national House Committee on Un-American Activities and capital punishment within the state.

In other action, UNC's Bob Spearman was elected vice-president of the body. UNC Vice-President Mike Lawler was voted the best speaker of the session. SSL's new president is Bill Constagny from Wake Forest.

Carolina's resolution advocating the affiliation of Southern schools with the National Student Association (NSA) passed in the House but failed in the SSL's Senate. Senators late changed their minds on the NSA bill, but an attempt for reconsideration was killed on constitutional grounds.

The SSL is an annual meeting of students from all the state's colleges and universities. UNC has 12 voting delegates.

The abortion bill, introduced by Meredith College, made the act legal if:

(1) A doctor is "convinced" that the baby will be deformed; (2) The pregnancy is the result of rape or incest; (3) The woman is of sound mind; or (4) The pregnancy endangers the life of the woman.

"The greatest controversy on UNC's aid to education resolution was an amendment denying the aid to segregated school systems. The UNC delegation unanimously opposed the amendment, which failed.

Resolutions calling for the abolishment of the Internal Security Act of 1950 and the Alien Registration Act of 1940 passed the House, but failed in the Senate. These bills were introduced by East Carolina and Duke respectively.

College Editors Under Fire At Ole Miss, UCLA, Alabama

LOS ANGELES (CPS) — A motion to fire the editor of the UCLA Daily Bruin was defeated last week by the UCLA Student Legislative Council.

The motion said, in part, that the council was "disgusted with the quality of the paper and its editor's failure to improve the paper."

The motion also accused Daily Bruin editor Al Rothstein of "numerous serious mistakes" in the paper, decline in quality of the paper, and decline in the number of new staff members, "without whose support the future of the Daily Bruin is in serious jeopardy."

Rothstein charged that the accusations were "completely false" and interpreted the defeat of the motion as a vote of confidence in the paper and his editorship. The UCLA student government, unlike most schools where intermediary boards are in charge of student publications, is in direct control of the student newspaper.
