Senior Cabinet Picks Klingberg

Dr. Frank W. Klingberg, a member of the UNC History Department, was selected as Teacher of the Month at a recent meeting of the Senior Class Cabinet.

The Cabinet, speaking for the Class, made this nomination to recognize Dr. Klingberg's "outstanding qualities as a teacher and as an advisor to students." The cabinet cited Dr. Klingberg for his "very imaginative presentation and flare for communicating with students even in a large class."

"All of his students agree that he is a friendly person; it is perhaps his attitude toward his students that accounts for his success in communicating with them."

Dr. Klingberg himself, asked what he liked to see in his students, replied "intellectual curiosity," which he believes can be stimulated by the approach taken by the teacher.

In teaching history he says it is necessary to weave some thought into the subject matter in order to induce the student "to become involved" in his study.

He feels that it is unfortunate that students "must bother themselves with taking notes because it detracts from classroom discussion."

Revealing a familiarity with sports, Dr. Klingberg expressed his views on intercollegiate athletics and de-emphasized "Athletics will be de-emphasized by events as much as by a certain course policy," he said, explaining that the current de-emphasis programs are a part of a general trend and are certainly not isolated to this university community. He continued by saying that this inevitable trend is due in part to the rising standards and the fact that "students are more sophisticated in their attitude." He said he believes athletics in the South and the rest of the country will very likely follow the same patterns evolved in the Ivy League schools.

Dr. Klingberg is a staunch defender of the Honor System and personal integrity. "The Honor System works," he says, but "it works best if the faculty are committed to it as a principle." He recognizes the difficulty arising from the ever increasing number of students in classes.

80-250 Students Plan Cuba Trip

From DTH Wire Reports
NEW YORK—An estimated 80 to 250 American college students, including three from UNC, are preparing to defy the U. S. government ban on travel to Cuba and accept a Fidel Castro offer of an all-expense-paid Christmas vacation there, it was learned here Wednesday.

The students, mobilized by Anatol Isaac Schlosser, 25, a graduate New York University student identified as a Castro sympathizer, plan to slip out of the U. S. to Canada and take Cuban government air transportation from Montreal to Havana either Dec. 22 or Dec. 23.

Their expenses during 12 days in Havana will be paid by the Castro regime, according to reliable sources.

Schlosser told UPI he expected at least 80 students from the east, west, midwest and Canada to make the junket. However, Joseph A. Diodata, 21, a student interested in going to Cuba will be held tonight at 8 p.m. in Roland Parker III of G.M. at the state university of Buffalo, N. Y., said 62 students were planning to go from there alone and predicted as many as 250 students would eventually make the trip.

To Exercise "Travel Rights" Schlosser said the students recruited for the trip were from the New York City area, including City College of New York; the universities of Wisconsin, Chicago, North Carolina, California and Toronto, Boston University, Harvard, Oberline and others.

The trip organizer said the junket would be carried out "in cognizance of the fact that the U. S. government has denied us permission and does not want us to go."

He said the Castro regime was not footing the bill for the tour, but the Cuban University Students Federation in Havana, which, however, is Castro-controlled.

In Buffalo, Schlosser's trip organizer there, Cameron A. Ross, 23, said the local group had not yet received satisfactory replies from Schlosser to several "important" questions about where the money was coming from for the trip.

Ross said Schlosser had agreed to furnish the necessary answers "in a couple of days."

Canadian View Uncertain In Montreal, a Canadian government source indicated there would be no official interference with the trip. However, he said Cuban government planes must have prior authorization to carry passengers from Canada to Cuba and indicated there might be some reluctance to grant permission for such a flight if the passengers were American.

An Oberlin College Spokesman said he "doubted" any of the school's students would join the free tour to Cuba.

Schlosser, who was identified by Havana radio Nov. 29 as "organizer" of the tour to Cuba said in New York he was "only a spokesman" for the organization. He said the trip was "less of a protest than a matter of exercising our right to travel."

Witness Accuses HUAC Questioner Of Badgering Her

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Four women witnesses Wednesday defied House investigators looking into alleged Communist infiltration of peace movements and one accused them of "throwing stones" instead of asking questions.

For the second day in a row, female witnesses called by the House Committee on Un-American Activities refused to tell the panel whether they ever were members of the Community party.

A Westport, Conn., housewife, Mrs. Anna Mackenzie, heatedly objected to the questioning about her associations 25 years ago. She accused the committee of "throwing stones" instead of asking questions.

The witnesses invoked the Fifth Amendment repeatedly against possible self-incrimination. The seven witnesses in two days to balk at such questioning. The committee, under acting Chairman Clyde Doyle, D-Calif., is seeking to determine if the Women's Strike for Peace and other such groups are Communist infiltrated.

The peace groups have charged that the House inquiry is an attempt to "smear" their members and discourage their peaceful picketing and other activities. Witnesses have challenged the panel's right to question their past affiliations.

Doyle told reporters it would be up to the committee later to review the record and determine whether any witnesses should be cited for contempt of Congress for refusing to answer questions.

The committee, meanwhile, announced the main witness for the resumption of hearings Thursday will be Mrs. Damar Wilson, a local housewife and originator of the Women's Strike for Peace organization.

The hearings Wednesday were relatively orderly. Only a small crowd was on hand, compared with hundreds of women—some with babies—who enveloped the scene Tuesday with clapping and much hugging and kissing of the star witnesses.

It was announced today from The Morehead Planetarium that the annual shower of meteors known as the Geminids will reach its annual peak activity tonight. The "shower" will be observed as flashes of light in the sky. This astronomical phenomenon will continue for six days after December 13, rising to its peak and then fading away.

Meteors explained A. F. Jenzani, Director of The Morehead Planetarium, appear as streaks of light against the dark sky and background of stars, and are commonly called "Shooting Stars." The December 13 shower is called the Geminid shower because the meteors appear to radiate from constellation of Gemini.

An observer will normally be able to see an average of 50 meteors per hour, although visibility may be hampered this year due to the light of a concurrent full moon. Some meteors can be seen at any time during the night but the greatest number of meteors per hour is seen after midnight because then the observer is on the part of the earth that is moving toward the meteors and so "runs into them."

'Bad Check' Bill, Finances To Be Aired In SL Tonight

The controversial bill to establish bad checks as an offense against the student body will be considered by Student Legislature in its session tonight. Also to be acted upon are six bills, with a total outlay of $2,651.60, which were passed favorably out of the Finance Committee in its meeting Tuesday night.

The "bad check" bill, as introduced by Ford Rowan (SF), is designed to restrict the large amount of checks which return because of insufficient funds and to protect those students who now enjoy the privilege of cashing personal checks in the Chapel Hill area.

Provisions Of The Bill According to this bill if a student refuses to reimburse a merchant for a bad check he has violated the Honor Code and will be treated accordingly. If a student cashes a bad check he is immediately liable to student government action. Hopefully this will make a student think twice about bouncing a check and hopefully it will improve student-merchant relations.

This bill provides that a merchant can report those violators who he wishes to charge with passing bad checks to the Student Credit Commission, a branch of SG which notifies students that they owe money on bad checks. For a bad check, if it is less than $25, a student only gets a written warning from the SCC. This provision allows for honest mathematical mistakes. For repeated or serious offenses a person is brought before his honor council by the Attorney General.

The first offense is punishable by a written warning which will be received through the mail. On the second offense the council is empowered by this bill to give a "council reprimand" which is a verbal reprimand long used in the Women's Council for other types of offenses.

In order to punish chronic violators, the council has the power to give an official reprimand, which goes on the student's record, or probation.

Money Bills Approved Approved by the Finance Committee were the following bills: (1)—a bill to supplement the Yack Budget with $951.60 from the General Surplus; (2)—a bill to appropriate $600 from the unappropriated balance to the Carolina Forum; (3)—a bill to give $555 from the unappropriated balance to the State Affairs Committee to encourage the State Legislature to allot funds for a College Union here and an addition to Woolen Gym; (4)—a bill to appropriate $530 from the General Surplus for the purchase of one steno-mask and one autograph machine in order to insure better records for Men's and Women's Honor Councils; (5)—a bill to appropriate $15 from the unappropriated balance for the lithographing of lists (name, address, phone number, etc.) of all the SL members which would be posted around the campus; and (6)—a bill to repeal an earlier bill which requested money for the purchase of additional bulletin boards.

Student Control Desired

An amendment to the I.D.C. Court By-Laws was introduced last night which would allow dorm residents to appeal administrative disciplinary action to the student court.

Ford Rowan, who introduced the amendment, said that the purpose of the measure was in no way an attempt to intimidate any member of the administration, but rather "to insure that student government handles discipline, in fact . . . not just in word."

The Amendment would give a dorm resident the right to appeal "any dormitory discipline action by the university administration" to the I.D.C. Court. Specifically, the I.D.C. feared the growing power of the Resident Adviser, who has the power to remove a student from the dormitory arbitrarily, without a hearing or trial.

Rowan said that the I.D.C. Court could already hear student appeals on damage adjustments of the Dormitory Managers, and that "there was no reason the administration should object unless the resident advisers are doing more than just their official counseling duties."

Rowan said he doubted that an appeal would be accepted by the court unless the case involved "should obviously have gone first to the court anyway."

Party Did Not Dodge Law

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An attorney for the U. S. Communist party told a U. S. District Court jury Wednesday that he would try to prove the party did not willfully refuse to register with the attorney general.

The party is on trial under the 1950 Subversive Activities Control Act charged with defying a government order to register as a Communist-action organization.

John Abl, one of two attorneys representing the party, told the jury of eight women and four men that the party agreed with the government position that there was no attempt to register after being ordered to do so by the Subversive Activities Control Board.

The board's order became final on Oct. 20, 1961, and the party was indicted on Dec. 1, 1961, on 12 counts of failing to register. If convicted the party can be fined up to $120,000. Two officers of the party, Gus Hall and Benjamin Davis, have been indicted for failure to register but no date has been set for their trial.

The board has defined a Communist-action organization as one dominated and controlled by the world wide Communist movement based in the Soviet Union.

Kirk Maddrix, a Justice Department attorney, said the government would attempt to prove that the party was guilty simply by failing to register after the board had ordered it to do so. He told the jury that the party was ordered to register and the Supreme Court had upheld the order, partly officers called a press conference in New York on June 5, 1961, and explained their reasons for not complying.

He said Hall, general chairman of the party, and other officers told newsmen at that time that they would not cooperate with the government and "we would rather spend the rest of our lives in prison than to do that."

The board first ordered the party to register as a communist action organization in 1953, but it was delayed due to lengthy appeals.

Richard McKenna, who's recent novel won the $10,000 Harper Award and is the Book-of-the-Month Club selection for January, spoke Tuesday to the Faculty Club on his personal "quest for education."

McKenna, who came to UNC after retirement from the Navy, told of his long experience in reading books and how he emerged on a new plateau of understanding after his years in Chapel Hill.

In spite of his determination to get an education through extensive reading on his own, McKenna finally had to admit his failure in self-education because there was so much that was hard to understand. "I was forced to conclude that for me, at least, there was no substitute for a college education."

Novelist McKenna Analyzes Education At Faculty Club

English, and psychology. "I found the University of North Carolina abundantly able to supply what I lacked."

"I can now read almost any book in English that I wish to read. In addition I can tell quite soon whether any particular book is worth reading. I no longer assume that anything difficult is good for me in direct proportion to its turgid impenetrability . . ."

Even More But McKenna found even more at Chapel Hill, he told the faculty. "I discovered other lacks of mine which I had not realized until I knew them being supplied to me . . . Each new thing I learned seemed to fit between two things I already knew. I had brought to the university a great, chaotic rat hoard of miscellaneous information."

"As my studies progressed, I could appreciate how it was all being subtly rearranged into some kind of form and order. It was being made more useful and available to me and charged with renewed interest . . . From the moment I began my studies the appearance of the world began to alter for me. I mean that quite literally."

Although he himself derived much from his experiences at UNC, McKenna added that he must say something more on "the current controversy in American education."

He said while he was in Chapel Hill, he noticed that "many of the youngsters in the classes I attended were not finding it anything like the enthralling experience it was to me." Many of the students, said McKenna, were conspicuous for their "passiveness."
