

Freshman Hygiene Won't Be 'Must' Course Any More

By MICKEY BLACKWELL

Hygiene courses will no longer be required of incoming students after this year, the Faculty Council decided last week. The Council will decide Friday when this ruling will take effect.

The Council also decided to allow freshmen to substitute Logic for the two math courses now required. A combination of one math and one Logic course will also be allowed. Previously, only Latin or Greek could be substituted for math.

The decision to make all hygiene courses elective was made without the approval of the Physical Education department which teaches the courses.

Dr. O. K. Cornwell, chairman of the department, said students do not have a proper background in personal health when they enter the University, and that such a course should be required.

The action came after General College Dean J. C. Sitterson asked the faculty council to make a study of all General College courses.

All students now enrolled in the University, however, will be required to take the course.

No Previous Changes

Since its beginning as a required course in 1935, hygiene has traveled a rocky road. The General College has reviewed the course many times, but this is the first time they have taken any definite action on the matter.

The decision to put the courses on a purely elective basis came after much deliberation and study, according to Dean J. Carlyle Sitterson, who presented the report to the Faculty Council.

"The Administrative Board of the General College asked the Faculty Council to make a study of all the courses in the General College and not just Hygiene in particular," reported Sitterson.

The Dean pointed out that the Council just didn't feel that Hygiene 11 for the men and Hygiene 10-W or 12-W for the women should be labeled "required courses."

Sanford Talk To Headline Parole Meet

HUGH STEVENS

Governor Terry Sanford will address the Institute for Parole Board Members to be held at the UNC Institute of Government Monday at 11 a.m.

Gov. Sanford will speak on North Carolina's role in the juvenile delinquency program.

The state press reported last week that U. S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy would speak at the institute, but Kennedy announced this week that he is unable to attend. Governor Sanford's speech will replace Kennedy's remarks.

First Of Its Kind

The Parole Board Members Institute, which meets here February 10-16, is the first of its kind ever to be held in the United States. The parole board members will exchange information and experience as well as learning from the faculty. They will examine the forces which confront a parole board member—public opinion, parole risks, staff relationships, and similar topics.

Exploration will also be made into specific problems which each member may face in his own jurisdiction. Parole selection, prediction, prison relationships, legal considerations and executive operations will be considered.

One Of Six

The National Parole Institutes, which operate under the National Council on Crime and Delinquency, is sponsoring a series of similar parole board members institutes in selected U. S. universities.

The Training Center on Crime and Delinquency at UNC is one of six University Training Centers established with the aid of grants made under the Federal Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Offenses Act of 1961. These centers offer courses of up to one semester to a wide range of officials and workers concerned with the prevention and control of delinquency and youth crime.

Institutes such as the one next week complement the work of the University Centers by offering brief training courses to persons who cannot leave their jobs for a longer period of time.

"The main thing the council had to decide," Sitterson said, "was not whether Hygiene was a useful or desirable course, but whether it should be a required course, and they decided that it shouldn't."

Opposition

The Physical Education Dept. which administers the Hygiene courses takes a dim view of the change.

Dr. O. K. Cornwell, who started the Hygiene program when he came to UNC in 1935, doesn't believe that the students have the proper background in health education.

"In 1961 and 1962, we tested the Freshman with a standardized health examination and less than 5 per cent of those tested made above 70," Cornwell said.

He was joined in his argument by veteran Phys. Ed. Professor Dick Jamerson who said, "The students simply don't know the material when they come to college, and a course in personal and community health should be a very definite requirement."

SG SECRETARIAT

The Student Government Secretariat is being reorganized for the spring semester. Persons interested should contact Judy Clark in the Student Government office at G.M. before Feb. 13.

MBA CANDIDATES

All MBA Candidates are invited to attend the first MBA Club meeting of the Spring semester on Thursday, February 7, 1963 at 7:30 p.m. in the Faculty Seminar Room of Carroll Hall. Speaker for the evening will be Professor Barrett. Election of officers will be held.

MARJORIE HUNTER

White House Reporter Is 8 PM Speaker

Marjorie Hunter, member of the New York Times Washington Bureau, will speak at UNC tonight at 8 in the Howell Hall Auditorium. "Showplace on the Potomac" is the title of Miss Hunter's address.

Miss Hunter is the first journalism lecturer for the 1962-63 UNC Journalism Lecture Series. She is also the first woman to speak in the series.

A native North Carolinian and a graduate of Elon College, Miss Hunter has worked on the Raleigh News and Observer, the Winston-Salem Journal, and the Houston Press. While a North Carolina newspaper-woman, she covered seven sessions of the General Assembly.

Miss Hunter has been with the New York Times since 1961. Her primary responsibilities are women's activities, including Mrs. Kennedy; cultural activities; and the education and welfare agencies in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The lecture is open to the public.

Leadership Is Called 'Stagnant'

Eight Student Legislators, including the chairman of all four SL committees, renounced their Student Party endorsement and became independents last night.

In a statement they said, "The Student Party no longer stands for progress on this campus. Its leadership is stagnant and the SP legislators have become obstructionists."

The now-independent legislators are Dick Ellis, chairman of the Ways and Means committee; George Rosenthal, chairman of the Finance committee; Bob Smith, chairman of the Rules committee; Charles Cooper, chairman of the Judicial committee; Anne Lupton, clerk of the legislature; Margaret Ann Rhymes, file clerk; Ford Rowan, Parliamentarian; and Bill Bowerman, town representative.

The statement continues, "The SP has ceased to represent the dorm residents. It is becoming a clique of students who are part of a special interest group."

"No Active Programs"

"This year, the SP has failed to live up to its tradition of active programs, regular meetings, and close participation in the functions of student government."

Dick Ellis said, "The SP just doesn't truly represent the campus. It has lost its traditional goals and doesn't measure up as an efficient political force in Student Government."

Rosenthal, also president of the dorm, said, "The SP has stopped representing the dorm man, and with this, has lost its dynamic character. I hope we can get student government to consider more dorm problems."

Charles Cooper said, "This year, the SP has not risen above trivial and petty subjects. It has failed to meet the challenges of a growing university."

Many of the new independents expressed disappointment that the SP has "failed to stimulate the campus as it once did." They indicated that, as independents, they would work to provide student government with "the leadership the SP once gave it."

Suicide Note Said Found By Police

By BILL WUAMETT

A graduate French instructor has been reported missing and Chapel Hill police say what they interpret as a suicide note has been found.

The instructor, Richard Lee Brand, 27, was last seen about 5:45 p.m. Tuesday. A search of University buildings and wooded areas around Chapel Hill revealed no traces of his whereabouts.

Police said a friend of Brand's told them Brand had seemed depressed earlier Tuesday afternoon. The police did not reveal the contents of the suicide note, saying they felt it would hinder the investigation.

The suicide note was found about 6 p.m. Tuesday in a friend's apartment. Brand was reported missing at 8:33 p.m.

He was last seen walking on N. Columbia St. toward Franklin St. by the Police station. He was wearing a tan jacket and slacks. He is six feet, slender built, with dark, thinning hair.

Police detective Pendergraph said Brand's car had been found in a garage where it had been for about two months. Chapel Hill transportation facilities have been checked, but have yielded no information.

A part-time instructor in French, he was described as an excellent student and teacher. He is a former Fulbright Scholar at the University of Rennes, Germany and was an honorary Woodrow Wilson Fellow. He was born in Shawnee, Oklahoma, September 18, 1935; attended Oklahoma Baptist University in Shawnee; received the M. A. degree at Tulane University in 1959. He taught at Winthrop College in 1959-60, and came to UNC in 1960.

He is the son of Mrs. L. W. Scott of 107 Silver Meadow, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Cuban Arms Gone, McNamara Claims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration Wednesday laid before the American people aerial photographs and summarized intelligence reports to back up its assertion that Cuba is free of offensive Soviet weapons.

In an extraordinary public report, Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Central Intelligence Agency Director John A. McCone declared they were convinced beyond reasonable doubt that all offensive weapons were removed from the island — and had not been reintroduced.

To support this statement, McNamara and his Defense Department aides appeared at a nationally televised news conference to display aerial photographs so sharp that trucks could be observed on highways and workers could be seen on the ground.

McNamara said U. S. military planes had flown 400 reconnaissance flights over Cuba since the October missile crisis — an average of more than four a day — and had found no sign of any such weapons. McCone said all intelligence reports bore this out.

The McNamara-McCone report charges, chiefly by Republicans, that the Soviets have engaged in a continuous military buildup in Cuba since the missile showdown last fall.

McNamara, summing up the administration's case, declared to the American people: "I believe beyond any reasonable doubt that all such offensive weapons systems have been removed from the island and none have been reintroduced."

Keating Renews Charge

Shortly before the administration presentation, Sen. Kenneth B. Keating, R-N.Y., renewed his charge that the buildup was continuing. He also said he would eat his hat on the steps of the Senate

Office Building if he was wrong about his contention that medium range missile sites remain intact on Cuba.

But Keating said he had no suggestions of his own for countering the alleged buildup. "I don't want to talk about invasion of Cuba. There are alternatives. That is up to the President . . ."

Ehle To Talk Monday Night

John Ehle, Associate Professor of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures, novelist and biographer, will speak to the UNC Press Club Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Howell Hall student lounge.

Ehle, who is a UNC graduate, began writing for the University Communications Center while he worked on a graduate degree. He wrote 26 plays under the series title "American Adventure." 15 of which were broadcast nationally by NBC. The series received six national awards.

The Asheville native has since divided his time between writing and teaching scriptwriting. He has written two biographies and three novels. His most recent novel, "Lion on the Hearth," was a contender for the National Book Award.

Ehle is now on a year's leave of absence from the University to work on a fourth novel. He is also doing some work as a special assistant to the Governor.

Flying Club Offers Free Air Rides

By MARTIN KRUMING

Like to view Chapel Hill and vicinity from the air for fifteen minutes? Then come out to Horace Williams Airport on Saturday or Sunday from 1-6 p.m., and take a free flight in a Taylor Craft plane piloted by a member of the Chapel Hill Flying Club.

Organized in 1961 by Tom Patterson, a physics graduate student and three other amateur flyers, the club has grown to 12 members. The club is a non-profit organization and is in no way affiliated with the University. "Our aim, in addition to promoting aviation interest and safety, is to provide flying as cheaply as possible," said Patterson.

When a student joins the club, he is charged a $50 initiation fee which is refundable. There are dues of $9 per month and a charge of $4 an hour for flying.

The Chapel Hill Flying Club owns a 1946 Taylor Craft single engine craft. The plane is a two seater and is operated by a wheel rather than a stick. In order to purchase the craft, Patterson had to borrow $800 from the bank. But with increasing membership and an active interest in flying, the loan has been reduced to $250.

Although the Taylor Craft has been as far south as Florida and Louisiana, most of the trips are to Raleigh, Charlotte, Greensboro and Durham.

Since there is no two-way radio aboard the plane, the Chapel Hill Flying club has to receive special permission and inform the commercial airports in advance when it will land.

Weeklong Flying

A typical day at the airport would be spent practicing touch and go landings and cross country flying. Although most of the aviation is done on the weekends, the club encourages its members to fly during the week.

In order to obtain a private license, one must solo and dual a total of forty hours. After eight or ten hours one may solo but it is necessary to carry a flying passenger before obtaining a license.

The engine in the Taylor Craft was just recently given a major overhaul and it is completely rebuilt every 1000 hours. This is done by a licensed mechanic in Burlington.

The invitation to go up in the club's plane this Saturday or Sunday is open to the public at no charge.
