24 Girls May Enter As Freshmen In Fall

For the first time at UNC, girls majoring in Art, Music, and Dramatic Art will be admitted next fall into the freshman class.

Of the twenty-four freshmen, ten students will be screened by appropriate art, music and dramatic art departments to ascertain whether the applicants possess talent, experience and promise of future proficiency in one or more of these three areas of study.

Of the twenty-four freshmen, ten will be music majors, six in art, and six in dramatic art. The trustee ruling that no more than 15 per cent of the entering student body may come from out of the state will apply to the admission of the 24 undergraduate freshmen women.

Chancellor William B. Aycock stated that the University's first priority in student growth at Chapel Hill will be in accepting increasing numbers of graduate and professional students, and after that, transfers in the junior and senior year. Third priority in growth will be in the freshman class.

Fall enrollment at Chapel Hill in 1962 was 9604 students. Of these 2,070 were women, the largest number of whom were juniors and seniors. The only girls up to now admitted as freshmen are those in schools of nursing, pharmacy, dentistry, public health, or are daughters of residents of the Chapel Hill community and live at home and attend classes with permission to enroll in the General College.

Boone Writer Will Address Meeting Here

John Corey of Boone, one of North Carolina's outstanding news feature writers, will address the American College Public Relations Association regional meeting here Thursday.

His topic will be "Writing College and Educational Facts: News Releases, Features, Columns." The speech, in 08 Peabody Hall at 3 p.m., will be open to the public.

Mr. Corey will be addressing college and university public relations officers from five states. Robert J. Saistad, Davidson College public relations director will preside at the three-day meeting in Chapel Hill, Feb. 14, 15, 16.

Corey is a member of the faculty at Appalachian State Teachers College in Boone. He is a former newspaper reporter and editor, and his column on public school children and teachers appears in daily newspapers all over the United States.

He won the American College Public Relations citation in 1960 for his column, entitled "School and Your Child." Besides teaching educational psychology at Boone, Corey is alumni secretary, head of the news bureau, and a Danforth Fellow.

Halting Crime Is Your Goal, Parolers Told

Recounting the old proverb that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, Gov. Terry Sanford yesterday told a gathering of parole board officials from across the nation that the best way to prevent crime is to bring the proper influences to bear on school children.

"The public school may well be the place where we can first discover and correct criminal tendencies before their manifestation multiplies the problem of correction," Sanford said. "We must use scientific knowledge to rip up the roots of crime before they sink deep and spread into the developing personality of a schoolboy or girl."

"We seem to be spinning in an inflationary spiral of institutional failures," Sanford told the officials in a meeting here preliminary to the First Institute for Parole Board Members, which will last through next week.

"Too many delinquents pass uncorrected through the juvenile courts and correctional agencies into the courts and correctional services for adult offenders and out again with their criminality confirmed," the Governor added. "We should place the greatest stress upon programs designed to stop the growth of criminality as close to the seed stage as we can get."

Sanford emphasized the importance of paroles in the rehabilitation of criminals. "Parole is a sensible way of retaining needed controls and providing rehabilitative assistance to persons released from prison during the period required for them to complete the difficult change from inmate to parolee to useful citizen," he said.

The Governor placed on parole officials such as those assembled the responsibility for cultivating public opinion favorable to the parole programs.

"Unfortunately," Sanford said, "parole has too often been confused with sentimental approach toward the offender." He pointed out that "there is a compelling logic for a wisely operated parole program as part of a system of justice which seeks to protect the public while maximizing concern for individual dignity. This is not sentimentality."

"Public attention should be called to the fact that tens of thousands of parolees are living in the free community and making an acceptable adjustment," he added. Sanford explained North Carolina's work release program to the parole official, and said that its rapid growth and remarkable success has attracted national and international attention.

He pointed out that in addition to the advantage of having inmates "earn their own keep" while in prison, their self-respect and confidence is increased, and they have a running start on final rehabilitation when they are released.

Radio Station Needs Summer Staffers

Don Schain, manager of WUNC radio, announced today that the station is looking for interested persons to fill staff positions for the spring semester.

"We can find a job for almost anyone who is interested in broadcasting," he said.

WUNC, "The Voice of the University," operates on a FM frequency of 91.5 megacycles. Broadcasting nightly from 6-11 p.m., the station depends upon students interested in broadcasting for its staff. WUNC features programs of music, information, and special events.

Last spring, the station increased its power to 50,000 watts, and its signal can now be received within a 100-mile radius of Chapel Hill.

Students interested in working at WUNC are invited to come to the studios and offices in Swain Hall and apply. Positions are open in announcing, engineering, programming, news, public relations, promotion, and production.

WUNC will be on the air nightly from now until April 9, when the station will sign off for spring vacation. The daily program schedule is available at the station in pamphlet form.

Some programs of interest this year on WUNC include "Carolina Roundtable," a discussion program in which listeners' comments and questions are aired; "Spectrum," featuring outstanding broadcasts of music and unusual events; and regular broadcasts of ACC basketball games.

How far can your ideas take you in the new world of opportunity in data processing at IBM?

Growth and discovery: The development and application of data processing at IBM open a new world of exciting opportunities for individual career growth. Data processing is producing some of the most far-reaching developments of our age. Each basic advance in technology and application requires new concepts. Ideas—new thinking and new ways to approach problems—are needed. For the individual who likes to discard conventional solutions and find new ideas, there's room to grow in IBM.

A wide range of positions: Rewarding opportunities will exist in more than 190 IBM Sales and Service Offices, located in major cities throughout the United States. Positions open include: Marketing/Sales: The IBM Data Processing Representative is a consultant to his customers. He calls on customer executives, giving timely information, presentations, and demonstrations for better business management and controls through data processing.

Opportunities for advancement: IBM offers you extensive initial training, both in the classroom and on the job, in the area of your special interest. This training continues as you advance along a planned career path leading to professional or managerial positions. IBM also offers company-sponsored education programs to keep you abreast of developments in your field, and a tuition-refund plan to give you financial assistance for graduate study.

IBM offers graduates with Bachelor's or advanced degrees in Engineering, the Sciences, Business Administration, Economics, or Liberal Arts challenging assignments in the marketing of information systems and equipment. These opportunities increase with each new system that is designed to meet the growing needs of business, industry, government, research, education, and space. Each technological advance and each new application can enlarge the scope of your own career at IBM.

Systems Engineering: IBM Data Processing Systems Engineers are men and women who study customer requirements in depth, devise the best approach, define a preferred machine and operational solution, and assist in the implementation of this solution. Customer Engineering: The IBM Customer Engineer is a specialist in precision data processing machines and systems. He is responsible for the installation, maintenance, and functioning of IBM's vast line of electronic and electromechanical equipment.

See your college placement director to determine when IBM will interview on campus, and make an appointment to see our representative. We will be glad to discuss openings and opportunities at IBM, including our training and education programs, financial rewards, and company benefits. IBM is an Equal Opportunity Employer.
