Man's Council Tries Five; 1 Suspended, 4 Not Guilty

The Men's Council delivered one guilty and four not guilty verdicts in proceedings during the past eight days. A sixth case was sent back to the IDC Court and a final trial was postponed on technical grounds.

A freshman was suspended from school until June 1st for plagiarism upon two assigned themes, one of which was an almost verbatim transcript of a magazine article. The normal suspension penalty of one full academic semester, which would mean dismissal until February 1, 1964, was waived because the violations occurred during the past semester. In addition, the Council stated that it felt that the student should be allowed to return to summer school; normally the term "a full academic semester" may not be construed to include summer sessions.

Three Archæology 85 cases resulted in not guilty verdicts. Two students were tried together for remarkable similarities upon the objective portion of the final examination, but evidence tended to substantiate their claim that intensive study of old quizzes led to the same results. Both students stated that upon a first glance at the test they thought that they had uncovered a rhyme scheme which had been used by the teacher in other years.

Their papers evidenced a definite pattern of answers — with one exception — upon which both made exactly the same mistake. Otherwise the results did not appear to be similar.

The third student completed his examination in a dormitory room in which two others were present. The two admitted collaborator but stated that the defendant did not participate. Examination of the papers revealed somewhat similar answers on a portion of the quiz, but the results were inconclusive. The defendant was absolved of an honor code violation and the other two students were dismissed from school during the semester break.

"Not guilty" was the judgment of the Council concerning an alleged theft of a coat from Lenoir Hall. The defendant was able to prove that he owned a coat almost identical to that of his accuser, and although there was a size differential, it did not appear to be unusual.

The Council referred a charge of fighting back to the IDC Court which had previously declined to rule upon it. The alleged Code violation occurred in a dormitory room, and the Council, while not denying that punishment might be merited, decided that this case fell most appropriately within the jurisdiction of the other court.

The failure of the accuser to appear at the trial caused the postponement of an Honor Code proceeding. The right of the defendant to face his accuser is an enumerated right in the Constitution and is grounds for appeal and retrial.

'Junior College Bowl' Initiated

The Junior Class will sponsor a "Junior College Bowl" on the UNC campus during the spring semester. Woody Harrison, adviser to the Junior Class Scholarship Committee, announced yesterday that the series of academic contests should start in about three weeks. The competition will be based on the concept of the "GE College Bowl," seen on CBS-TV.

Each week, two teams of four individuals will compete for points by answering questions stressing a quick recall of specific facts on virtually every subject. Any campus organization, such as a dorm, fraternity, or club may sponsor a team in the competition. The class is hopeful for enough entries to allow for a single elimination tournament. Awards will be given to the winning teams.

Present plans call for the contests to be held on Sunday afternoons in Gerrard Hall. A member of the faculty will act as master of ceremonies.

Each contest will last approximately one hour, with a ten-minute halftime break. Questions based on those used on the television show will be used. The team that first answers a ten-point "toss up" question will have the opportunity to answer a bonus question worth a stated number of points.

Any organization interested in sponsoring a team in the contests should contact Woody Harrison at 407 E. Rosemary St., or call 988-9215. Entries should include the names of the individual team members, as well as the sponsoring organization.

Seat Belt Sale At Eastgate

Merchants in the Eastgate Shopping Center have undertaken a seat-belt sale project. Member merchants have purchased more than a thousand belts which will be sold and installed at cost.

The seat belts cost $2.85 and will be sold to the general public at that price, according to Billy Arthur, president of the merchant group. "Actually," said Arthur, "the freight and handling charges make the belts cost us more than $2.85, but if we can get the belts in use we'll gladly absorb the cost."

Sale of the belts will probably continue for a few weeks, or until "satisfactory saturation of the belts through the area" can be achieved.

"Let me point out also that these belts are first quality in every respect," Arthur continued. "They are 6,000 pound belts (the National Safety Council recommends at least 5,000 pounds) and are made of nylon with the metal-on-metal buckle everybody wants."

Mock Assembly Starts Wednesday With 63 Nations

UNC will host the United Nations Model General Assembly Feb. 21-23. Sponsored by the UN Educational Committee of the YM-YWCA, the purpose of the Assembly is "to enable the delegates to better understand the operations of the UN and the problems it faces."

Secretary-General for this session is Hugo Spechar of UNC.

Sixty-one nations will be represented by 43 colleges ranging from Maryland to Florida and as far west as Colorado, including the ACC's Big Four, the University of Florida, the Naval and Air Force Academies, and a number of girls' schools and small colleges.

The Assembly will consist of five permanent committees: the Ad Hoc Committee, which will consider such matters as the reorganization of the Secretariat, and means of insuring the payment of dues and assessments; the Economic Committee, which will consider the effect of the regional economic groupings of the industrial nations on the developing ones, and study the recommendation of a land reform program for the benefit of nations desiring it; the Legal Committee, which will attempt to settle claims disputes in Antarctica, and decide the question of national claims in outer space. Also the Political Committee, which will discuss Portuguese colonial policies in Angola and Mozambique, on the basis of whether they should be colonies and on the basis of the racial discrimination revealed by UN investigation, and will also discuss the settlement of the border dispute between Red China and India; and the Social Committee, which will discuss the settlement of refugees in Hong Kong, Angola, the Republic of South Africa, the Gaza Strip, and Algeria, and study the excess population problem with the view towards setting up a UN agency to combat it.

All these committees are set up (as is the entire Assembly) as realistically as possible, and the delegates are encouraged to be as much like the nationals they are representing as they wish. In addition to participating in committee meetings and plenary sessions, the delegates will have a banquet luncheon Thursday, where they will be addressed by William M. Jordan, the UN Director of Political Affairs. Thursday night, Edward P. Morgan of ABC will speak to them in Memorial Hall at eight and Friday they will hear Dr. Taylor of the UNC History Dept. in Hill Hall, also at eight. The general public is invited to attend the last two speeches.

Interviews will be held for the selection of the Editor and Business Manager of the Carolina Handbook on Tuesday, Feb. 19, from 3:30-5:30 at Graham Memorial.

First printed in 1891 by the YMCA in an edition of 16 pages, The Carolina Handbook is one of the oldest publications on the University campus. Today, as an official publication of the Student Government, it contains some 150 pages and involves a budget of $3,500. The purpose of the handbook is to give the prospective student a close survey of the life at Carolina.

The Business Manager is in control of the finances, solicits advertising and enter reports to the Publications Board concerning the expenses of the handbook. The Editor is responsible for planning the publication and overseeing its development. Both positions receive paid salaries.

Six Places Available On Europe Tour

Seminars Abroad, a European tour for Carolina students, will be making its final organizational plans within the next two weeks. Six places for men students remain open.

"This tour is not simply a sight-seeing tour," Claude Shotts, head of Seminars Abroad, said yesterday. "It is primarily an effort to give our students a chance to talk with students, political leaders, and European people in the countries we visit."

Upon arriving in each country or city, the tour is met by native students who act as hosts and hostesses for the duration of the stay in that city.

The tour, which includes 12 countries and 17 major cities, is focused on the political, social, and cultural aspects of Europe. A highlight of the tour is a visit to East Berlin. Last summer Carolina students discussed and debated political issues with Communist officials in Berlin.

In Ireland, the Lord Mayor of Dublin will hold a reception for the students on tour. French students meet with the tour in the Four Winds Club in Paris and a banquet with Italian students is held in Rome.

Seminars Abroad is limited to 30 students and a balance is maintained between men and women. All transportation to and from Europe and between countries is by plane. "This gives us more time in each country," Judy Bryant, chairman of Seminars Abroad and a member of last summer's tour, said.

"This tour is geared to the desires of the independent person. There is ample free time for individual excursions, free days in every week, and a very flexible schedule," she said. "Last year on the free day, some of the group rented motor cycles and toured the country-side."

Application blanks are available in the YMCA office. Interested students may contact Judy Bryant at the Kappa Delta house.

Friday Opposes Dorm Rent Hike

Consolidated University President, William C. Friday yesterday appealed to the Joint Appropriations Committee of the State Legislature in Raleigh, stating that requiring students to pay the complete cost of constructing new dormitories at higher educational institutions could put college beyond the reach of students from low-income families.

Friday, Leo Jenkins of East Carolina and William Plemmons of Appalachian requested that the state continue to pay half the cost of the new dormitory construction. The three asked the committee to add approximately $14 million to the construction fund outlined in the capital outlay budget for the institutions.

The governor and the Advisory Budget Commission had recommended dormitories be constructed on a 100 per cent self-liquidating basis in the new budget.

Friday said such a proposal would increase dorm rents $30 per year to all resident students at the University.

"I doubt that anyone can say what share ought to be borne by the parent and the student, but we should not ever get into a situation where entrance to the University is based on financial capability," Friday said.

He said by unduly increasing costs, "we are working against ourselves" since an educational institution, to perform its function, must keep its doors open to all students.

He said he is afraid some students already look at the fees and decide the state university is a "privileged affair."

No Action Taken On Bill To Pay DTH Reporters

By JOEL BULKLEY

Student Legislature Thursday night overwhelmingly endorsed an amended version of a resolution supporting the recommendations of the Pearsall Committee for North Carolina higher education.

Legislature failed to act on a bill to appropriate $360 for the Publications Board to pay three DTH reporters ten dollars a week for twelve weeks when a quorum of the legislators was not present.

The resolution, introduced by Bob Spearman (UP-SP), strongly supports the Pearsall Committee's recommendations in the definition of the University purpose, co-education on all campuses, a broader undergraduate education, a plan for future expansion of the University, and one name for the University.

Included in the resolution was an amendment, drawn up by Arthur Hays, which stated that SL "feels that if new branches are admitted to the Greater University, efforts should be made to continue and stimulate the tradition of a strong, independent, self-governing, student community as it exists at the University at Chapel Hill."

Copies of the resolution are to be sent to Governor Terry Sanford, both houses of the N. C. Legislature, university officials and the editors of the Greensboro Daily News, the Raleigh News and Observer and the Charlotte Observer.

Also receiving Legislative approval was a resolution, introduced by Ford Rowan, which requested that major athletic events with Big Four opponents not be scheduled during student vacations. SL also went on record as supporting UNC's athletic teams in their efforts.

A bill to establish a physical development committee was withdrawn and the penalties, which the Women's Honor Council can impose, were approved in other business.

Student Body President, Inman Allen will address SL next week at the "State of the Campus."

Dormitory Spotlight: Ruffin

(This is the fifth in a series of articles on UNC dorms. It is sponsored jointly by the dorm presidents and the Communications Committee.)

A program of speakers and a lively social schedule highlight the activities of Ruffin this year.

The dorm had Chancellor House and Dr. Sam Hill as speakers during the fall in a program that was initiated last year by Dr. Ransom Taylor.

Under Social Chairman Charles Coble, Ruffin held a party with the nurses dorm this fall, and a pizza party for the dorm at La Pizze.

A party is being planned with a dorm at Women's College for the spring, Coble said.

The football and basketball teams have been particularly successful in intramurals this year. Ruffin has entered teams in almost every sport.

A dorm newspaper, the Ram-Page, has been appearing regularly, edited by Arthur Hays.

Ruffin plans to continue and increase its activities in the spring.

MASQUERADE BALL

The Masquerade Ball sponsored by the Alliance Francaise of Chapel Hill is set for Saturday February 23 at 9:00 p.m. at the American Legion Clubhouse.

Music will be by Jim Crisp and his orchestra. Other entertainment will include a "Can-Can" dance.

The theme of this year's decoration is the 1st Napoleonic Empire. The six costume judges are President and Mrs. William C. Friday, Prof. and Mrs. Joseph C. Sloan, Prof. and Mrs. John A. Parker. They will select the prize-winning costumes.

Tickets at $5 per person are now on sale at the Intimate Bookshop or Graham Memorial. No tickets will be sold at the door. Table reservations can be made by calling 942-1120.

2 Coeds Campused For Late Return

Two co-eds were tried and convicted by the Women's Council in Open Trials Thursday night for violation of the Campus Code. They were accused of having improperly signed out for their return to Chapel Hill from the semester break. Both were campused, one for three days, the other for eight.

In the first case the defendant pleaded "indefinitely," arguing that extenuating circumstances had caused her to forget the time at which she was supposed to return. The defendant presented evidence to the effect that she had had two teeth removed a couple of days before her return and was at home in bed under sedation at the time she was scheduled to return.

When she was notified by a phone call on Saturday evening from her graduate counselor that she was late, she testified that she asked to be rescheduled for return the next day.

The defendant stated that she had originally planned to return on Saturday in order to pick up her class tickets, but that when she found it unnecessary, she had forgotten about it under the pressure of circumstances.

The Council found the defendant guilty and sentenced her to be campused for eight days, beginning Feb. 15. The Council said that it was the responsibility of the student to get her sign-out slip changed if necessary.

In the second trial, the defendant was accused of having signed out to return on Sunday, Feb. 3, but did not return until the following Tuesday. The defendant pleaded guilty as charged. Evidence was presented by the defendant in which she stated that she had called her parents and her roommate to the effect that she would not return from her term break until Tuesday, Feb. 5. The defendant was spending her vacation in Florida. She stated that she expected her roommate to notify her house-mother of the change in plans.

The Council sentenced the defendant to be campused for a period of three days, beginning Feb. 15. The Council charged that it is the responsibility of the student to notify the dormitory administration explicitly in order to change a sign-out slip.

A Review By Neill Clark

'Rhino' O.K. — Relatively

By NEILL CLARK

REVIEW: RHINOCEROS, by Eugene Loneseo; designed and directed by Tommy Rezzuto; costumes by Irene Smart Rains; lighting by Ralph Swanson. The last performance is Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at the Playmaker Theatre.

The boards sagged under the weight of the Rhinoceros presently galumphing in the Playmaker Theatre, and except for a few light-footed moments, what should have been as exciting as a circus was little more amusing than a trip to the zoo. It is understandable, however, that the Playmakers were unable to achieve a highly polished performance in a brief three-week rehearsal period, and after all, they are only students, not professionals, and somebody ought to tell that snotty critic that Chapel Hill is not Broadway. These factors being duly noted, it is also understandable that the production is a failure, unless relative standards are observed. Very well, let relative standards be observed.

Relative Standards

The first relative standard is the difficulty of the play. Considering that "Rhinoceros" is the most difficult play attempted thus far by The Playmakers, it is the outstanding production of the year. The first scene of the second act had more life, more polish, more downright stageworthiness than anything seen here for quite a while. Performances such as those of Anne West as Mrs. Beouf and Harry Callahan as Botard crackled with vitality and lifted the pace of the whole show which had comparatively dawdled through the first act.

It was disappointing that the dual conversation between Berengere (the hero) and Jean (his priggish pal) and the one between the Logician, played by Wesley Van Tassel and The Old Man, played by Arnold Wengrow, did not synchronize, for it is one of the most brilliantly written sequences in recent drama. As Jean is urging Berengere to improve his mind, the Logician is instructing the old man in the intricacies of the syllogism. The dialogues play off and against each other creating a bitter counterpoint of hilarity and absurdity.

John Crockett turned in the best performance I have seen him give, playing a difficult role with polish and poise (if one can be said to maintain poise while changing from maintain poise while changing into a rhinoceros). Berengere Larry Warner presented a characterization that was promising in outline (tail. Rather than developing the part he seemed to rely too heavily on the momentum his natural ability gave him, leaving Berengere stranded somewhere between the quixotic idealism of a schoolboy liberal and the apathy of a rather pathetic alcoholic.

One of the most effective moments of the play belongs to Juanes Hatten, who, as Daisy, addresses the audience directly as rhinoceroses: thick-skinned, brutish, stupid animals and then proceeds to turn into one herself. This speech was given with an almost quivering edge to her voice that made the speech quite credible. Others worthy of mention were Mary Watson as the grocer's hardened wife and especially Robert Malone whose transfiguration from rationalist to rhinoceros was as subtle (and also as funny) as only a rationalist could make it.

The settings sacrificed originality to functionality but the exigencies of touring make this understandable.

Tommy Rezzuto has handled a difficult play admirably, neither making it too burlesque nor too artsy-craftsy. The outlines are drawn and by the end of the tour the picture should be well shaded and toned.

And now that I have completed my relative criticism I shall return to the cool, muddy river in the jungle to bathe.
