SP Selects Big Four At Meeting Tonight

The Student Party will name its big four candidates and legislators tonight at the second half of its nominating convention in Howell Hall at 8. Sunday night, the SP nominated the first Negro to run for a campus-wide position. Kellis Parker, currently chairman of the United Nations Education Committee—an appointive position in the YMCA—is running along with Neal Jackson, Vance Barron and Phil Baddour as delegates for the National Student Association convention to be held this summer.

On the recommendation of the SP Advisory Board party members voted unanimously that "the Student Party not endorse candidates for editorship of the Daily Tar Heel or for the president of the Carolina Athletic Association and the Woman's Athletic Association."

Only one candidate now appears certain for the offices of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the student body. It is probable that Mike Lawler, now vice-president, will be a unanimous choice for the presidential nomination.

Rufus Edmiston, now legislative floor leader of the S. P., has been mentioned as a candidate for vice-president, but he has as yet given no positive indication he will run.

The positions of secretary and treasurer are wide open. A party official said yesterday that candidates would be screened last night by the SP Advisory Board.

All candidates nominated for positions Sunday night were chosen by acclamation. Three senior class officers received SP endorsement: Charlie Shaffer, presidential nominee; Woody Harrison, vice president; and Mal Lesavoy, treasurer. Secretary and Social Chairman nominations will be made Tuesday night.

Rioting Strikers Battle In France

PARIS (UPI) — Tough Lorraine coal miners traded punches with steel-helmeted riot police at Merlebach Monday in the first violence of the 11-day-old strike which has idled 200,000 French miners.

The miners ignored President Charles de Gaulle's "work-or-else" edict and paid no heed to his 48-hour ultimatum to return to the pits.

No injuries were reported in the brawl outside the mining administration offices at Merlebach, which is near the German border.

The scuffling ended in a few minutes. Some administration workers walked off to join the strikers.

Auction Starts Campus Chest Campaign Tonight In Carroll

The Campus Chest will kick off its annual fund-raising campaign tonight with its traditional auction at seven o'clock in Carroll Hall. A concert by the Migrants will precede the auction. Chuck Wrye and Lee Ferrell, this year's auctioneers, will try to sell items of all sizes and shapes for the benefit of the Campus Chest. All the items to be auctioned tonight have been donated by students and Chapel Hill merchants.

Some of the items to be auctioned to the highest bidder include: an ice cream party (Chi O's); a date with a "pig" (DKE fraternity); King For A Day (KD's); 23 theatre passes (Carolina Theatre); a bottle of champagne (Fowlers); waitresses (Kappa's).

Also to be auctioned tonight are: a puppy dog; six barmaids; a dozen pairs of panties with "Tar Heels" printed on them; several cases of beer, eight blouses and other clothing items.

Proceeds from the auction will go into the Campus Chest fund which benefits four charities — the Children's Mental Health Clinic at Butler, the American Friends Service Committee, the World University Service, and the Panama Student Exchange.

Greek Week Begins Today With Athletic Competition

Pledge classes from Carolina's 24 social fraternities begin competition today in the first of the IFC sponsored Greek Week activities. A field day, featuring a series of relays and athletic events, will be held this afternoon at four o'clock on the Intramural Fields adjacent to Woolen Gym. In case of rain it will be conducted in the gym.

Greek Week was instituted as a substitute for hazing and "Hell Week" in order to improve relations between UNC fraternities and as an aid to the community.

The Stanley Sturm trophy for the "best pledge class of the year" will be awarded Monday night to the pledge class scoring the highest number of points in the five areas of activities. These areas include scholastic (35%); Field Day Competition (20%); participation in the Campus Chest Carnival (20%); Work Day (10%) and extracurricular activities (15%).

"Up-down", "Shuttle", "jump-tick" and "obstacle" relay races and a tug of war will highlight this afternoon's contests as eight-man teams compete.

Exchange dinners were held last night and are scheduled for Wednesday night. Each fraternity sends one-half of its pledge class to eat at another fraternity house each night.

On Wednesday afternoon, all the pledge classes will participate in an assigned work project. The projects will be judged on the quality of the work and on the percentage of the pledges in attendance.

On Saturday afternoon, pledge classes will enter booths in the Campus Chest Carnival to be staged on the Intramural Field. Booths will be judged on both originality and participation of pledges.

A Greek Week Convocation Monday night, March 18 will be the final event of the week. Dean of Men William G. Long will be the guest speaker in this 8 p.m. Memorial Hall meeting. Individual trophies will be presented to the pledge class with the best Carnival booth, highest scholastic average, the winner of field day and the overall Greek Week winner.

Co-Chairman Dave Van Pelt, of the Delta Upsilon fraternity, said yesterday, "We are looking forward to the spirited competition this year and are sure that Greek Week provides an excellent opportunity for the pledge classes to get to know each other and to help out members of the community."

Bobby Gray, of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity, is the other co-chairman. Last year's winner was the Delta Upsilon pledge class.

Press Women Meet Here Next Week

The North Carolina Press Women will hold their annual meeting and receive prize awards for the year here Saturday, March 23rd.

Bonnie Angelo Levy, of Newsday, the Long Island community newspaper, will be the main speaker at the Carolina Inn. Mrs. Levy, former woman's editor of the Winston-Salem Journal, is a Washington, D. C. representative of Newsday.

A workshop session for woman's page editors will be conducted by a panel including Sunday feature editors Gene Roberts, Raleigh News and Observer; Garland Atkins of the Gastonia Gazette, and Ed Hodges of the Durham Herald.

Mrs. Bette Elliott of the News and Observer will preside. She is president of the Press women.

The contest awards will be made after the dinner meeting on Saturday night.

WORLD FEDERALISTS

Denis Lovelace will address the Durham-Chapel Hill chapter of the United World Federalists tonight at 8 p.m. at the Presbyterian Student Center at Duke. Lovelace, executive secretary of student development for the World Federalists, will speak on "A Need for World Government," with a discussion period to follow.

Only one Negro showed up during the early hours of the library's re-opening on a 30-day trial basis. He was Dr. W. G. Anderson, president of the integrationist Albany movement. Library officials accepted a membership application from him but he was informed that no membership cards were being issued during the trial period.

Anderson earlier termed the library re-opening "a great moral victory."

Oil Fires Set In Venezuela By Terrorists

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI) — Terrorist saboteurs dynamited two major oil pipelines late Sunday, knocking out one-sixth of Venezuela's production and triggering a vast fire that raged out of control, authorities said Monday.

Police blamed the blasts on "extremists," the name used here to identify the Communists and pro-Castro terrorist groups responsible for previous anti-government outbreaks.

Creole Petroleum Corp., the free world's largest single oil-producing company, said the explosions occurred in virtually uninhabited scrubland country adjoining the Ule pumping stations. Creole was not able immediately to estimate damages but said tanker schedules were being rearranged to meet foreign commitments from the Amuay refinery.

The dynamited pipelines carry $1.1 million worth of crude oil daily. The blasts totally halted the flow in one pipeline carrying 225,000 barrels a day and sharply reduced the flow in a second pipeline carrying 300,000 barrels a day.

The sabotage was the second major blow in six months to the oil industry, backbone of the Venezuelan economy. Last October terrorists dynamited Creole power substations in Lake Maracaibo, temporarily halting production of 525,000 barrels a day.

The latest explosions not only touched off a fire of huge proportions but dumped an estimated 15,000 barrels of crude oil into an area roughly 600 yards by 750 yards before the flow could be cut off.

The Ule pumping stations are at the mouth of 140-mile-long pipelines linking the Lake Maracaibo fields in the west and the huge Amuay refinery in northwestern Venezuela. Creole pumps nearly one-half its total lake output through the pipelines. It ships the remaining 600,000 barrels a day in tankers directly from the lake.

Creole is a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey.

Meet May Be Start Of 2nd Symposium

The students of the University of North Carolina may have an annual symposium program instead of the present bi-annual one if present hopes and plans work out.

Kellis Parker, chairman of the International Student Affairs Symposium which will be held here on March 30, has expressed hopes that his program will become a long-term symposium to alternate with the Carolina Symposium's regular bi-annual program.

The present plans, although including a number of outstanding student leaders from all over the globe, can be improved and enlarged greatly, according to Parker.

"Plans started a little late this year," said Parker, and because we didn't have enough time to get things started, we lost a number of people who would have added greatly."

The program currently calls for an all-day symposium on International Student Affairs. It is probably the first of its kind.

Parker believes that it could be enlarged to perhaps a five-day symposium — the length of the current Carolina Symposium.

"With two years to plan, I believe that this could be built into a stimulating and valuable project, and that it could fill in for the Carolina Symposium in the off years," Parker said.

The program will serve as an experiment to test student interest and will feature all-student leaders from various countries who will participate in a full day of speeches and discussions.

New DTH Outlook Required --- Farran

Chris Farran, candidate for the Daily Tar Heel editorship, said yesterday, "The change in the Daily Tar Heel must be a complete one."

"Staff members must see campus events from new angles and the editorial page must reflect new campus trends and needs."

Farran, president of Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism fraternity, has been news editor of the DTH this year and has worked as a reporter for the Winston-Salem Journal for three summers.

"More than anything else," he said, "the Daily Tar Heel needs new ideas, new staff leadership, new interest in and from the campus. This change must reach all areas of the newspaper; accurate campus news, responsible editorials, many more features and increased sports coverage."

"All these changes involve making the tone and personality of the newspaper more dynamic," Farran said.

"Some of these changes involve the staff — experienced people who have expressed an interest in a Tar Heel changed and expanded in scope. Some of the changes involve the way the Tar Heel would cover the campus — by reporting activities in each dorm, in fraternities and sororities, in clubs and organizations as well as in South Building and Student Government."

"I believe I can attract enthusiastic staff members with new ideas," Farran said. "We must mirror the campus's wish for a completely revamped Tar Heel in order to have a truly representative student newspaper, edited by students for students."

Cheap Reading Course Grows Swiftly At Testing Service

By Bob Samsol

The course with the fastest growing rate of student popularity, the non-credit, strictly voluntary reading course is in its sixth year here.

Sponsored by the University Testing Service, the program is probably the most inexpensive course of its kind, requiring only a two-dollar entrance fee. Most other programs of this type are offered for about $150 for the thirty-hour course.

Mrs. D. W. Campbell, a member of the reading program staff, said that the purpose of the course is not so much to increase speed and comprehension but is to increase reading flexibility, or the ability to adjust the rate of reading to different types of material.

Bennett To Address Young Republicans

North Carolina Legislator Thomas S. Bennett will speak to the UNC Young Republicans Club at 7 p.m. tonight in Gerrard Hall.

Carteret County native Bennett graduated from UNC in 1956 with an A.B. and received his LL.D. in 1958. While a student at UNC, Bennett was a member of Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity, was on the Men's Honor Council, in the Di-Phi and in the Order of the Old Well.

The meeting is open to the public.

The course is run on a rating and placement basis. The student is placed at a level which is determined by a series of four tests which include comprehension, vocabulary, and ability range tests, and a reading-comprehension test. These are followed by an eye test to make sure the student has no visual difficulties.

The student also has a conference with an instructor to determine the problems he may want to work on.

Most students take this course voluntarily, although some are referred to it by their advisors. Varying reasons serve as motivation although all students have improved reading skill as their common objective.

The number of students taking the course to improve speed and the number wanting to improve comprehension is evenly divided at first, but later they may decide to concentrate most on some other area where they discover difficulty.

Students are introduced to a wealth of material and have a chance to find out what they really

"Labor mobility," people moving in and out and up along the economic wage scale, is noted in the Piedmont Crescent region of North and South Carolina, according to a group of University of North Carolina researchers.

Candidates Chosen By Acclamation

By JOEL BULKLEY

Larry McDevitt and Bob Spearman were nominated by acclamation Monday night to head the University Party's spring slate as President and Vice-President of the Student Body, respectively.

Sara Broadhurst defeated Punkin Houston, by a vote of 153-76, for the UP nomination for Student Body Secretary while Gerald Thornton was endorsed by acclamation for the position of Treasurer.

Senior Class officers — Charlie Shaffer for President, Sue Drennan for Secretary, Mickey Blackwell for Treasurer and Jean Haley for Social Chairman — were nominated by acclamation. Endorsement of a senior class vice-presidential candidate was postponed until Wednesday night's UP meeting.

McDevitt, a resident of Raleigh and member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, stated that since student government plays a major role in the education of a student a special effort should be made to improve certain areas of it here at Carolina.

McDevitt outlined a three-point program which will strengthen and improve certain areas of student responsibilities. He said (1)—Student government needs to be reorganized. Committees should be placed under a "chain of responsibility," with some committees being deleted and others being combined; (2)—A bi-cameral branch of student government should be established. Another body should be created to consider resolutions and thus alleviate some of the problems of Student Legislature; (3) The Honor System and Campus Code need to be revised, with special attention paid to the punishments each body can administer.

McDevitt noted that "strong student government was necessary to maintain student autonomy rights." He included the abolition of the apartment rule as one of the steps necessary to allow student responsibility to be maintained.

Spearman, a sophomore from Chapel Hill and member of Chi Psi Lodge, had been nominated for the position of Student Body President, but withdrew because of academic reasons.

Spearman cited a lack of student interest and responsibility as the reasons that students are often excluded by the University administration from assisting in making important decisions on campus affairs, such as the location of new dormitories and future enrollment plans for UNC.

He said that "Student government must be emancipated from facinations of itself," and added that "improving the organization of student government and improving communications were two fields in which student government could easily afford to move ahead in."

The University Party will consider whether or not it should endorse a candidate for the DTH editorship, National Student Association candidates, Carolina Athletic Association and Women's Athletic Association endorsements in its convention meeting Wednesday night. Also to be considered will be UP endorsements for the fifty seats in Student Legislature.

Debate Team Wins At Duke

The number one UNC debate team, composed of Mack Armstrong and Haywood Clayton, took first place at the First Annual Duke Invitational Debate Tournament held on the Duke campus last week-end.

Debating on both sides of the question: "Resolved that the Non-Communist Nations of the World Should Establish an Economic Community," the Armstrong-Clayton team lost only to Duke which was ineligible to receive a place in the tournament. The losses to Duke were controversial ones.

When debating affirmative against Duke, the UNC team received 37 points to Duke's 35, but did not get the decision in the debate. When debating negative against Duke, the UNC team tied at 39 all. Ordinarily, a tie goes to the negative team, but in this instance the decision went to the Duke affirmative team.

AUCTION — The Migrants warm up to provide the entertainment tonight when auctioneers Lee Ferrell and Chuck Wrye start the bidding at the Campus Chest Auction. The auction, in Carroll Hall at 7, will feature such items as 62 straw hats, a bottle of champagne and steak dinners.
