Max Gardner Award Goes To Brauer

Dr. John Charles Brauer, Dean of the UNC School of Dentistry and "one of the most creative and influential national spokesmen in the field of dentistry," is the recipient of the 1963 O. Max Gardner Award.

The award was made at a banquet in Lenoir Hall last night at which Fred M. Hechinger, Education Editor of the New York Times, was the principal speaker.

Dr. Brauer, who has headed the UNC School of Dentistry from its founding, in 1950, was cited for his achievements by Mrs. George Wilson of Fayetteville, chairman of the Board of Trustees' Committee for the O. Max Gardner Award. The citation read:

"John Charles Brauer: by successive achievements as student, practitioner, teacher, and administrator, and as accepted spokesman for dental education in America, you have attained a place of high distinction in your profession. By creative and indefatigable leadership within the faculties of the University of North Carolina and among your professional colleagues, you have established the foundation of lasting reputation for the School of Dentistry. By innovating measures of professional practice you have improved the benefits of dental science and made them accessible to ever larger numbers of people.

"In recognition of your academic and professional leadership; in acknowledgement of the contribution that you are making to the better health of North Carolinians and of future generations everywhere; and with appreciation for the value of your personal dedication to humane endeavors, the trustees have adjudged you to be the member of the faculties of the University of North Carolina who in the current scholastic year has made the greatest contribution to the welfare of the human race, and, therefore, the recipient of the O. Max Gardner Award for 1963."

The O. Max Gardner Award was established by provisions in the will of the late Governor Gardner, who is known as the "father of consolidation," and was first awarded in 1949.

Freshman Grades Show No Change Over Last Year's

By VANCE BARRON, Jr.
There seems to be no significant change in the academic performance of this year's freshman class in comparison to last year's class. Dean Carlyle Sitterson of the College of Arts and Sciences reported yesterday.

Sitterson dispelled rumors that the freshman class had done extremely poorly last semester by saying "It is extremely difficult to demonstrate any increase or decrease in the academic performance of freshman."

"The only trend that can be shown beyond any question is that the academic quality of entering freshmen is improving. There is no data available which can demonstrate conclusively that there is any trend to the contrary."

The grade average of freshmen has improved slightly, with the past semester, though such an indication is not statistically significant, Sitterson noted. At the end of the fall semester of 1961, the grade average of 1,601 freshman was 1.932.

At the end of the fall semester of this year, the average of 1,824 freshmen was computed at 1.952. However, in 1961, 82.6 per cent had an average of 1.25 or higher, while last semester 77 per cent of the freshmen made this average. Dean Sitterson made the point that the figures for the fall semester of 1961 did not include withdrawals during the semester, while the figures for this year did. There are some 30 to 50 freshmen withdrawals each year during the fall semester which would account for some bias in the figures, he said.

The one distinguishable trend that is evident from figures available is that the academic ability of entering freshmen is improving Sitterson said. In 1958 the average total College Board score for entering freshmen was 961. In 1961 this average had risen to 1027. The minimum College Board score for admission to the University was raised from 700 to 750 in 1961, so that "we haven't had any class graduate under the existing admission requirements yet," according to Dean Sitterson.

In comparing grade distribution for the same period, it was found that there was a decrease in the percentage of students receiving D's and F's.

In 1958, in 29 freshman courses 8.6 per cent of the grades given were A's, while in 1961 6.5 per cent of the grades given were A's. Also in 1958, 18.97 per cent of the grades given were D's and 10.2 per cent were F's. In 1961, for the same courses 20.27 per cent were D's and 12.967 F's.

Dean Sitterson suggested, in a report to the advisers in Arts and Sciences, that the students are not studying as hard or that grade requirements are stiffening.

There was also little difference in the performance of the freshman class and fraternity pledges, for the fall semester. While not all fraternity pledges are freshmen, the large majority are, and the figures are roughly comparable for the two groups.

The percentage of the freshman class making a C-average or better was 49.6 per cent while 46.9 per cent of fraternity pledges made this average.

Men's Council Suspend One, Probates One

One student was suspended and another placed on definite probation for violations of the Honor Code in cases tried by the Men's Council Thursday night.

A student was found guilty of lying to an instructor in order to look through instructor's desk. He received a sentence of definite suspension for one full academic semester.

In the second case, a student was accused of stealing Cokes from a broken soda machine in a dormitory and of lying to a student advisor when questioned about it. He was found guilty and placed on definite probation for one full academic semester.

Tom Wicker To Talk At Editor's Confab

Tom Wicker, former editorial writer for the Winston-Salem Journal-Sentinel and currently a member of the Washington Bureau of the New York Times will be the dinner speaker for the 14th annual North Carolina editorial writers conference to be held here March 29-30.

Wicker, a native of Hamlet who is also a novelist, will address the editorial writers on Saturday March 30, at a 6 p.m. banquet dinner to be held at the Carolina Inn.

Consolidated University President William C. Friday will be the Saturday luncheon speaker for the conference. President Friday will speak on "The Future of the University."

"North Carolina's Political Future" is the title of a discussion which will open the conference at 3 p.m., Friday, March 29, in the Howell Hall auditorium. Bert Bennett, State Democratic Chairman, and Bill Osteen, Guilford County Republican legislator, will serve on the panel.

$1,500 Increase Over Last Year's Expenditures

By JOEL BULKLEY

A proposed Student Government budget of $155,799.64 for the 1963-64 school year was submitted to Student Legislature for its approval Thursday night. SL will begin consideration of the budget at next week's session.

The proposed budget, as drawn up by the SL Budget and Finance Committees, calls for increases of approximately $1,500 in expenditures and $3,000 in anticipated income over last year.

Estimated Income

The figure for anticipated income is derived by calculating the average estimated enrollment for 1963-64 and multiplying that times the appropriate student fee collected by SG. The estimated enrollment includes 6,899 undergraduates and 2,832 graduate students for a total of 9,731. Each undergraduate pays $18 of his student fees to SG for $124,182.00 while each graduate pays $14.56 (for $41,233.92) to SG for its total anticipated income of $165,415.92. Last year's anticipated figure was $162,400.00.

Still under consideration are budget requests for the SG Executive Branch: General Administration and Communications Committee.

Estimated Expenses

Estimated expenses for next year as they stand now, include $55,138.64 for Graham Memorial; $36,423.00 for the Yackety-Yack; $30,610.00 for the DTH; $5,828.00 for the International Students Board; $3,540.00 for the Inter-dormitory Council; and $2600.00 for the Carolina Forum.

Also $2,483.50 for the Carolina Handbook; $2,300 for the UNC Debate team; $1,900.00 for the Executive Secretary; $1,262 for NSA; $1,230.00 for the UNC Band; $1,510 for the UNC Glee Club; $1,905.00 for the Carolina Quarterly; $1,500 for the Symposium; $1,680 for SG Year's space; $31,200.00 for the SG-Executive Branch; $1,200 for the Senior Class; $540.00 for the Toronto Exchange; and $700 for the Victory Village Board of Aldermen.

Requests must include the reason for absence, campus address and class.

FOUND

An engraved cigarette lighter was found yesterday in Lenoir Hall. The owner may claim it by calling John Davis, 213 Mangum, at 968-9110 and identifying it.

MEN'S ORIENTATION

Interviews for Men Orientation Counselors will be held next Monday-Friday from 2-6 p.m. in GM. Interested students must sign up for interviews at the GM information desk and fill out application blanks, which should be brought to the interviews. These blanks are available at GM, the Scutebuit, the Reserve Reading Room and Y-Court.

VP Candidates Give Views

Bob Spearman, UP

Dick Ellis, SP

In the next few years student government at Carolina will face two major problems. The first concerns its power and its responsibility. Secondly, student government needs to stop worrying about itself and start worrying about the student body.

If student government is to be of any consequence, it must reassert the prerogative of students to govern themselves. If self-government can exist at all, it can and must exist within the academic community.

In the next few weeks this issue will come to a head in debate over the apartment rule and the right of the Women's Residence Council to establish rules of conduct for women students. If this right is not affirmed, student government and the entire student body will have suffered a great defeat.

Student Responsibility

At the same time, it is impossible to speak of student autonomy without speaking of student responsibility. For example, there is now no student representation on many important faculty planning committees. These committees plan such matters as the location of new dormitories and changes in the academic curriculum. Formerly, students were included in these decisions, but they were dropped from the committees when they failed to show sufficient interest to attend the meetings. If students are to assert student rights, they must also accept responsibility for this autonomy.

But the problems which student government faces do not lie just with the administration. The greatest task exists within student government itself. There is an alarming tendency for student government to become preoccupied with its own inner workings and to lose contact with the campus. It is sometimes forgotten that student government receives its sanction from the Carolina student body and that it exists to serve the Carolina student.

New Programs

There are many examples of programs having direct affect on student welfare which student government can and should undertake. One important problem is the social life and social conditions in dormitories. The University Party is proposing a program of matching funds for dorm social improvements whereby the University administration and student government would provide the bulk of dorm social improvements, and the residents of each dorm would make a small contribution themselves.

On a larger scale we are strongly supporting the plans concerning the establishment of a student cooperative at Chapel Hill. At such a store students could buy text books, clothes and other items for considerably less than present prevailing prices. At the University of Texas, for example, such a co-op saves each student an average of $250 over a four year period.

Student government needs to redirect itself and to devote more of its attention to programs such as these. It needs to worry less about long debate, less about petty issues, and more about the academic, cultural and social welfare of the Carolina student.

On April 2 an election will decide the direction of Student Government for the next year. This direction will in turn decide the role Student Government will play in the future. Will this role be one of positive action with specific goals in mind, or will it be one with scattered and often unrealistic interests? This is up to you — the voters! The office of the Vice Presidency must continue to be conceived, as it has this past year, as an executive office. The Vice President must make every effort to implement, the legislative program which the people mandate by electing him and his party to office.

Here are a few of the things I think the legislature should be concerned with, under the direction of the Vice President. For example, some system of uniform procedures should be worked out at the living unit level of student government (IDC, IFC, WRC, Pan Hellenic Council) via an informed legislative program and Vice Presidential communication between the judicial systems, the Student Legislature, and the student body.

The proposals made by some members of the opposition party concerning the establishment of Dorm Councils in which men would try residents for their own dormitory rules infractions is impractical. This was tried in 1958, and it was found that an objective trial was extremely difficult, due to the fact that too many of the boys knew the defendants personally. However, uniform procedures for the present IDC court could be established, which would improve this judicial body, already established for the purpose of trying violators of dormitory regulations.

Continued legislative investigation of the feasibility of establishing some form of co-operative on this campus to combat the high up-town clothes prices and the unreasonable resale value of books at the Book-Ex should be initiated by the Vice President. The results of this investigation should be communicated to both the Legislature and the student body via the Tar Heel.

Investigation by a legislative committee of the campus radio station and the possibility of carrier current, initiated by the Student Party two years ago, should be renewed. Investigations carried out by legislative committees of this sort would both take some pressure off of the Executive branch of Student Government, and bring these problems and their solutions closer to the Student body through elected legislative representatives. The opposition party's platform contains a proposal to establish an extensive Presidential Communications Staff to talk with individual students on the campus about proposed programs and ideas. Dormitory Spotlight: Old West

(This is the nineteenth in a series of articles on UNC dorms and is sponsored jointly by the dorm presidents of the Communications Committee.)

"We think that we've got the best dorm on campus this year."

This was the comment of Rex Savery, president of Old West, when interviewed by the Communications Committee.

The dorm, comprised mainly of juniors and seniors, has made an annual affair of the scholarship trophy, given each year to the dorm with the highest average. Study conditions are excellent, and the suite-like arrangement of rooms has lent itself well to strong unity. Residents can claim an unusual intramural record—they have entered every point-system competition for the past two years and have yet to forfeit a single match! Participation is outstanding, and the teams have been doing well. Savery has served as president for two years, and is doing an outstanding job. Pete Fowler is vice-president and Buzz Cole is secretary-treasurer. The IDC Representative is John Morgan. Old West claims many campus leaders among its residents, and both campus political parties are well represented. Social life is not neglected, with a pizza party scheduled for April. The residents will also have a page in the Yack-

New Dorms Won't Get Extra Time For Balloting

The Elections Board ruled Thursday that it would not extend the voting hours for Craige and Ehringhaus dormitories for the spring elections due to its previous ruling to place polls in Y-Court for residents of these two dorms.

Chairman Polly Hastings said, "The Board felt that there would be ample chance for residents of these dorms to vote in the election without this concession."

A petition, signed by more than three hundred Craige and Ehringhaus residents, had requested that the polling hours be extended until seven o'clock.
