Rebellion Art Now On Display At Art Center

ALICE WELSH
A collection of creative art in a spirit of thunder and rebellion is currently on exhibit in the North Gallery at Ackland Art Center. Forty-two prints — etchings, woodcuts, drypoints and lithographs — by German printmakers who were identified with the Expressionist movement of the early 20th century and its two affiliates, Die Bruecke and Der Blaue Reiter, were selected from the Ackland print collection by Professors Kenneth Ness and John Alcott of the Art Department. Printmakers Erich Heckel, Wassily Kandinsky, Karl Hofer, Max Beckmann, Emil Nolde, Ernst Kirchner, Kaethe Kollwitz Franz Marc, Otto Dix and Karl Schmidt-Rottluff are represented in the show.

The popularity of engraving as a major art form extends from the Middle Ages into the 20th century. It was natural, therefore, that the Expressionists, a group of artists who were dissatisfied with "skin-deep impressionism" of the 19th century, used graphic arts as a means of conveying protests.

This exhibit of engravings is exceptional not only for the excellence of the graphic works as art media but also for the emotional impact expressed in the style and subject matter. All of the prints are emotionally evocative and almost all describe social and political turbulence that is at once horrible and fascinating.

The gallery is open Tuesday through Friday, 2 to 5 p.m. and 8 to 10 p.m.; Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. Closed Monday. The show will continue through April 3.

Legislature OKs $723 For Panama Exchange

LAUGHTER — After a week's delay, the weatherman finally cooperated with the Campus Carnival, and yesterday's bright sunshine brought over 3,000 people to the intramural field looking for fun, like these students enjoying one of the fraternity booths. —Photo by Jim Wallace

Part Will Be Given By Chest

By JOEL BULKLEY
Student Legislature Thursday night unanimously approved a bill appropriating $723.50 to the International Students' Board to partially cover the expenses of a Panamanian student here next fall. SL also increased the number of graduate students serving on the Honor Council cases involving graduate students, to three, and passed a resolution urging more student participation in the future development of the University. The Panamanian exchange bill, introduced by Rufus Edmisten (SP) and George Rosental (SP) for Jim Scott, International Students' Board chairman, cites a deplorable lack of exchange of ideas between the U. S. and Panama as a cause of misunderstanding between the two countries. It also stresses the importance of having a student exchange program with the University of Panama.

The Panamanian Exchange Program is one of the four recipients of the proceeds raised by the Campus Chest this year. The Honor Council bill, introduced by Dick Ellis (SP) for Mike Lawler, adds one graduate student to either Honor Council when they are acting on a case involving a graduate student. These council members have voting rights on all cases except those arising because of an alleged procedural error.

A resolution, presented by John Uffelder (UP), urges the administration to adopt a policy of increased student participation in the future development of the University. The resolution states that the student body needs a voice in guiding the future expansion of the University and that students can make a valuable contribution in this area through responsible student representation on administrative programs.

Action a bill to provide for a referendum in the April 2 campus elections, on two constitutional amendments, which create an Interfraternity Council Court, was postponed until next week. SL referred a resolution supporting Senator Thomas Dodd's (D-Conn.) proposal for an additional income tax exemption of $1,200 for students at institutions of higher learning.

FOUND

An engraved cigarette lighter was found yesterday in Lenoir Hall. The owner may claim it by calling John Davis, 213 Mangum, at 988-9110 and identifying it.

Know-Nothings Vie With TEP In Bowl

Two undefeated teams will clash today in the fourth round of the Junior Class College Bowl. The match between the "Know-Nothing" and TEP fraternity teams, slated for the Howell Hall auditorium at four, will be open to the public.

The "Know-Nothing" team, composed of Bob Spearman, Mickey Simmons, Walter Dellinger and Henry Mayer have scored two consecutive victories, defeating the Pi Lambda Phi fraternity, 360-330, and triumphing over Ruffin Dorm, 440-200. The TEP team, which includes Louis Legum, Ken Toppell, Alan Ganderon and Ira Berlin has defeated the Delta Upsilon four some 325-315 two weeks ago.

Dr. John S. Clayton, Associate

Professor of Radio, Television, and Motion Pictures will act as moderator of the match. The series, based on the "GE College Bowl", seen on CBS-TV, features academic competition based on quick recall of facts on almost every subject. The teams will compete for points by attempting to answer ten-point "tossup" questions, which in turn allows them to answer bonus questions worth a stated number of points. All questions used in the matches are supplied by CBS-TV.

The series is being sponsored by the Junior Class Scholarship Committee, and is expected to run from now until late spring. Awards will be given to members of the outstanding team at the conclusion of the series.

PARENTS DAY AT UNC

"Parents Day" will be held at UNC on Sunday afternoon, May 5, 1963. It was announced today by the local chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, which sponsors the annual event as a service to the student body. The program will include an address by consolidated University President William C. Friday an Air Force ROTC parade and review, with a reception at the unit headquarters; a band concert; a joint performance by the UNC Men's Glee Club and the Woman's College Chorus; a faculty reception on the Graham Memorial Student Union lawn; open house at all dormitories; and campus tours if desired.

RIZZO NAMED TO FACULTY
Gino Lorenzo Rizzo was appointed today an associate professor of romance languages at the University of North Carolina and will assume duties in September, according to Dr. S. A. Stouder, Chairman of the Department of Romance Languages at UNC.

Rizzo is presently serving on the faculty of Tulane University, after having taught at the University of California for four years. He was born in Venice, Italy, and was educated at Italian universities. He is married and has three children. Publications by Rizzo include eight articles in professional journals, two translations, and four book reviews.

Chest Carnival Successful; Loads Of Fun -- And Funds

All in all it was quite successful. Water-filled balloons broke everywhere, coeds were dunked, pledges plucked and the '63 Campus Chest Carnival began and ended with a smile, a laugh and a good time.

Rides and booths dotted the field as a crowd of 3,000 rode the Ferris wheel, bowled, gambled and threw balloons. There were adults, children and a wild combination of both that invested in tickets and a good time during the Saturday afternoon hours. Apparently the cancellation last week because of rain did not hurt the Carnival in the least.

However, peace-loving observers and sometimes nonparticipants were not free to stand around. Kappa Kappa Gamma's pistol packin' girls collected innocent bystanders and slapped them in jail — it cost a ticket to get out.

Gambling was quite prominent. The Young Republicans let you gamble on the New Frontier roulette wheel, Saint Anthony's Hall and the Tri Delt's operated the Whiskey Hill Casino.

One boy came out of the Casino with a bottle of Royall Lime, a table lamp, a six pack and a pair of Gold Cup socks after parlaying a 10-cent ticket into $10 worth of chips. "It was easy," he said with a smile. The booths that drew the biggest crowds were intriguing and aggressive. The "Strike Back" booth operated by Phi Delta Theta let the throng release aggression and water filled balloons on campus "characters" in the form of Art Heyman, an SPU member, the campus police, the Tokens and others in the rank of the notorious. The Beta Theta Pi gentlemen stepped aside and let the Chi Omegas get dunked in icy water at the mercy and accuracy of the customers.

The most unique device was designed by the house of Chi Psi. By bowling a ball which knocks over the pin that knocks over a stick (and so on) through a maze of cans filled with water, broken balloons, numerous weights until the whole spontaneous action results in some poor pledge getting doused with water.

The ATO's had another complicated device — in the form of four pledge teams that ran an obstacle course — and the customers had to bet on the winner. No reflection on the pledges, but it was called "Idiot's Delight."

On a less aggressive note there were chicken races, greased pig contests and basketball throws. A cute brunette coed matched basketball shots with Bryan McSweeney and Billy Cunningham at the Senior Class booth. She gave them fits with the foul shots — which goes to show you can be pretty and play basketball. The Phi Kappa Sigmas had their problems too. "We originally planned on having a real live greased pig. But the pig went to market last week, so we had to make a substitute, a barrel on a greased pole." The substitute was just as difficult as the real thing, needless to say.

The Beanbirds had a chicken race, of course. Baby chicks were the prize and now the campus will be plagued with live chickens.

The little'uns had as much fun as the bigger little'uns. The grammar school children had as much fun competing successfully with their elders as the elders had fun. They looked, stared and listened to the older generation screaming, yelling, singing and throwing shaving cream.

And when a six-year-old was asked what he would do if he won a six pack of beer, he looked his audience straight in the eye and said, "No comment."

GM INTERVIEWS
Interviews for the new GMAB chairman and officers, who will take over in May, will be held Wednesday-Friday, from 3-5 p.m. in the GMAB office. Application blanks and a sign-up sheet are available at the information desk in GM.

Editor Hopefuls Issue Statements

Lloyd

Harry Lloyd, candidate for Daily Tar Heel editor in the April 2 elections, charged yesterday that his opponents are "trying to cover up the real facts that the voters should know."

"The 'co-editor candidates' are trying to derive my experience on the paper, and thereby avoid the issue of their own responsibility," he said. "Mr. Blanchard, whose appearances at the DTH office have been timed just so that he could borrow a typewriter to write a story for another paper, evidently does not know or does not want to admit what the real structure of the Tar Heel organization is."

"He says that this year's DTH has been a failure. Does he also admit that it was a failure under a co-editor system?"

Now he wants to impose another co-editor system on DTH readers. "But he is stretching his point to the ridiculous when he tries to blame what he calls the 'failure' of the paper on me, a 3-day-a-week managing editor. He accuses me of doing a part-time job. I think the voters should know who would be doing a part-time job."

"As managing editor, my policy-making chores are nil. My duties were simply to lay out the news pages. If Mr. Blanchard wants to criticize my makeup and headlines, then let him. That is what I was responsible for. But I didn't hire and fire people. I didn't decide editorial policy. Perhaps I did put in a lot of overtime doing the jobs of people who wouldn't or couldn't do them, but is he blaming me for that?"

"I have experience in all phases of this newspaper's operation. Mr. Blanchard is apparently ignorant that some parts of the paper even exist. Does he know that if there was a lack of campus news, then the blame for that lies with the news editor, and not the managing editor? If he wants to raise that issue, why doesn't he raise it with Mr. Farran, who seems to have filled in the absences of a capable news editor in the last two months?"

"Why doesn't Mr. Blanchard admit that he will not be able to put the necessary time on the paper next year, and that he is running as co-editor for that reason? He says he wants to reorganize the Tar Heel (Continued on page 3)

Blanchard & Ethridge

DTH co-editor candidates Dave Ethridge and Gary Blanchard said yesterday they are "pleased to endorse" the action of four UNC student leaders in forming an independent "Students for Ethridge-Blanchard" committee to mobilize support for the candidates' "Four Point Program."

The four students—Walter Dellinger, Diane Blanton, Rufus Edmisten and Donna Bailey — said that "after examining the qualifications of the candidates running, studying their platforms, and seeing how well they have done in the past, we feel that of all those in the field, only Dave Ethridge and Gary Blanchard . . . can and will provide the leadership necessary to put out the kind of DTH we want to see."

Ethridge and Blanchard called the support of the four students "most welcome" and expressed the hope that other students interested in a better DTH will contact them or anyone on the committee.

"This action underlines what we have been finding in our visits and speeches around the campus," the co-editor candidates said in a statement. "That is, not simply a strong desire for a good campus newspaper, but a willingness to get out and work for it."

"This in a way sums up our position. We not only want a better Tar Heel, we're determined to apply our experience, ideas and energy to achieve that goal."

"We think students should know about decisions before they are made, so that we have an opportunity to influence those decisions, not merely live with them. That's the reason for our idea to break the campus down into three areas and assign at least one well-qualified reporter to each area. This way he develops contacts who can keep him continually informed on what's going on."

"The Tar Heel also has a responsibility to report on the world and the state—but not at the expense of campus news. This is why we want to organize the use of wire copy by boiling wire stories down and running them in a World News Briefs column."

Farran

"The Daily Tar Heel owes the students of this campus a number of things," Chris Farran, candidate for the editorship of the Daily Tar Heel, said yesterday.

"Most of all, the DTH owes them its undivided attention, and a focus of a student staff on student activities."

"Next, it owes them some mention of how the University is run. The Administration can, when it wants, tell the students several things that concern us directly: where the tremendous income from the Monogram club snack bar and dining room goes, and how the income from the Scuttlebutt and the dorm snack bars is used; why prices on books at the Book Exchange are so high when students can get the books for less downtown, from other students, or in Durham; if the trend of campus expansion is to larger dorms, what measures are being taken to make sure residents of these dorms don't just get 'lost in the crowd'—how can they participate in the University and be made to feel a part of all student activities; what about a progress report on the effectiveness of these larger dorms as compared to smaller dormitories?"

Farran, a junior from Winston-Salem, said, "In addition, I've had many students in dorms tell me that they don't care what goes on in student government. I think this is because they don't KNOW what goes on in student government, and if the Daily Tar Heel took the trouble to tell them, they would take an increased interest in what is happening to their money and their student government."

"Carolina has four different student courts—the Mens' and Women's Councils, the IFC and IDC courts. Is there any danger of their jurisdiction overlapping? Can a student be tried by two or three different courts? What about a detailed report of the financial set-up of student government? Student government is budgeted for $155,000 next year—where will it come from and where will it go?"

Farran said, "In 2½ years at Carolina I've lived in Everett and Manley dorms, off-campus in an apartment, and for three semesters in a fraternity. These are some of the problems that have occurred to me—and these are some of the questions I hope to answer as editor of the Daily Tar Heel."
