GM Combined Two Shows To Produce $4000 Jubilee

By VANCE BARRON, JR.
Graham Memorial's "Jubilee" weekend this Friday, Saturday and Sunday is expected to cost over $4,000, according to Rob Rearden, chairman of GMAB.

The idea behind the project was to schedule two performances of the regular GM Series back-to-back in order to make it a special weekend. The program was built around the scheduled performance of The Four Preps this Friday, and from there the project mushroomed.

Planning for the program began about this time last year, Rearden said yesterday. "We wanted to do something that would be free and would involve the whole student body. There has been the need for this sort of program for a long time at Carolina," he commented. "The problem was that even a big attraction is always in Memorial Hall, which only seats 1600 people." The committee first planned for some of the activities to take place on the lawn, the inspiration for this arising from the IFC-sponsored jazz concert in front of GM last spring.

Then they thought of having five combos playing at spots on the campus within walking distance of each other, until finally the project became "one big open-air party," as Rearden put it. "We like the idea of having everything in the open so that everyone can attend," he said. "We are hoping that people will mill around from one party to the other and from one activity to the other."

The Saturday afternoon program will be a jazz and folk festival, not a concert but an "afternoon of entertainment." The Migrants, The Duke Ambassadors, The Harlequins and the UNC Men's Glee Club will be featured at this program.

Rearden said that the Friday night and Sunday afternoon affairs would be more like concerts with a planned format. The Four Preps will be seen on Friday evening and The Chad Mitchell Trio on Sunday afternoon.

"It was decided to move the Four Preps' concert from Memorial Hall onto the lawn in order to be able to seat the entire student body," Rearden continued. "The lighting will present a problem, but we think it will be worth it."

In case of rain all the concerts will be moved back into Memorial Hall, where attendance will be on the regular first-come, first-served basis.

Rearden noted that there would be a wide array of entertainment to suit every taste. In addition to the outdoor events there will be "Free Flicks" of unusual interest and a Petite Musicale presentation on Sunday night, he said.

Rearden has received many comments on the eye-catching posters that the Publicity Committee has distributed over the campus. The unusual art work was done by Bill Campbell, a member of the "salute to spring" art, quite appropriately, birds and bees.

The poster for the Sunday afternoon concert shows a very tired "Jubilee" bird with rings around his eyes. No doubt everyone who attends the many events of the weekend will feel the same way by then also.

Holman Asks Use Of Care In Selections

Communications Needed, Dean Says

By HUGH STEVENS

A warning that care should be used in the application of graduate research grants was voiced Monday night by Kenan Professor C. Hugh Holman, dean of the UNC Graduate School. He addressed the UNC chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Dean Holman also discussed other problems of the graduate school, including communication to the public and within the department, admissions standards, and the work loads of graduate instructors.

He stressed the fact government and private research grants should not interfere with the main tasks of research by graduate professors. The danger, he said, lies in "yielding far too many of the decisions about the special work we undertake to outside agencies in order to gain support for it."

He urged faculty members to "preserve our integrity as scholars" while grants are secured to make possible the acquisition of equipment.

"Government agencies and private corporations sometimes tantalizingly dangle before us the probabilities of large scale support, and divert our attention from our immediate goals," he said.

Dean Holman continued, "the ultimate protection against perversion of purposes and undue influence on research is the integrity of the individual and his sense of commitment to his basic discipline."

He encouraged the professors to know and communicate their specialties, but he cautioned against slipping into narrow and exclusive specialization. He said that research and development funds should go primarily to support basic research, and that applied research should be secondary. Only to a limited degree, he said, should such money go into highly specialized developmental work.

Dean Holman also spoke about the problem of communication, saying that better understanding of the graduate program by the public is necessary, as well as better communication between departments. He said that we need more interdisciplinary programs and better exchange of ideas in order to break down some of the "high walls" between departments and schools.

As to public communication, he said, "We have a serious and important public relations job. Graduate education demands of us commitments different from those demanded by undergraduate education." He referred to the greater expense of graduate education as an example of the problems.

Tuttle Gets Award

Donald L. Tuttle, a second year graduate student in the University of North Carolina School of Business Administration, has been awarded a Ford Foundation Doctoral Fellowship in Business Administration for the academic year 1963-64.

The fellowships are awarded annually to some 30 students throughout the United States who are in graduate schools of business administration. Recipients of these fellowships must have completed at least one year of graduate work in business administration. The fellowships are awarded on the basis of academic achievement.

Tuttle received the only fellowship of this kind awarded in North Carolina this year.

A native of Florida, Tuttle is the son of William O. Tuttle of 2280 Southwest Fifth St., Miami. Tuttle did his undergraduate work at the University of Florida where he received a B.S. degree in Business Administration in 1958 and an M.B.A. degree in 1961.

Tuttle's special area of study at UNC is in finance.

College Integrated

Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, Va.—the oldest women's college of the Southern Presbyterian Church—has opened its doors to Negro applicants.

The change in policy will have no effect on the fall enrollment because admissions have already been completed, said college president Dr. Samuel Ried Prester Jr.

The Board of Trustees took the action last weekend, changing the policy so that applicants would be considered "without regard to race or creed."

Amendment Is Backed By Alumni

By MICKEY BLACKWELL

RALEIGH — The squabble over the new name for N. C. State College popped up again yesterday in the House of Representatives as they began deliberations on the Higher Education Bill.

Only one amendment has been proposed for the bill and it is to rename N. C. State, "North Carolina State University of the University of North Carolina" instead of the committee proposal of "North Carolina State, the University of North Carolina at Raleigh."

The proposed amendment is being backed strongly by the State College alumni who also backed it when the bill was brought up in the Senate last week.

The amendment was defeated, but the bill as a whole received unanimous Senate approval.

Except for this proposed amendment, the Higher Education Bill now before the House is identical to that passed by the Senate last week. Several representatives said they thought the education bill would easily pass the House once the name change controversy was resolved.

Also concerning the greater University, new legislation was introduced in the Senate and House which authorizes the trustees of the Consolidated University to issue revenue bonds to raise money for construction of a new football stadium at N. C. State.

In other legislative action yesterday, the Senate passed into law a bill requiring seat belts on new automobiles in North Carolina.

The bill, which passed the House three weeks ago, requires that new cars registered after Jan. 1, 1964 be fitted with seat belts in the front seat.

The Senate also approved and sent to the House a proposed bill which would declare all women living on relief rolls who have mothered three illegitimate children to be declared unfit mothers. The bill says these children will be taken from their mothers and placed in foster homes.

Publishers To Cooperate With Wirtz

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Newspaper Publishers Association ANPA said Tuesday it would cooperate with Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz in exploring "new approaches" to prevent a breakdown of collective bargaining in labor disputes.

Wirtz proposed last week in a speech to the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington that newspaper management and labor get together in an effort to find new ways to solve mutual problems and ease labor tensions.

Irwin Maier, publisher of the Milwaukee Journal and Sentinel and president of the ANPA, sent a telegram to Wirtz saying the organization was always ready to cooperate in such suggestions.

Wirtz replied he believed industry leaders should take the first step toward such approaches themselves without government or public participation. However, he added that he would be available at any time to meet with ANPA representatives and help if requested.

The ANPA Special Labor Committee will meet during the four-day convention in New York, which ends Thursday, to consider the exchange of telegrams between Wirtz and Maier.

A workshop panel discussion Tuesday for executives of newspapers with a circulation of more than 50,000 daily devoted its time to use of electronic computers in typesetting, classified advertisement programming and billing.

The Minneapolis Star and Tribune was awarded a prize by the panel for the "best idea of the year." It was for a 25-week science information series written by nationally known experts. The series later was distributed in a package to 2,000 science classrooms.

The Four Preps

Relations Meet Here May 2-5

Approximately 100 student leaders from colleges and universities throughout 13 Southern states are expected to participate in a conference on Human Relations in the South here May 2-5.

The conference is sponsored by the University and the Young Adult Council, which represents 32 youth organizations in the U. S. ranging from the Young Democrats to 4-H Club.

Its theme will be "The South in the Mainstream," providing an open forum for the exchange of ideas concerning Southern issues. In addition to panel discussions, there will be four keynote addresses.

The first will be given by Professor J. Clayton Fever, chairman of the Religion department at the University of Oklahoma, Thursday May 2 at 8:30 p.m.

Professor Richard Bardolph, chairman of the History department at Woman's College and author of The Negro Vanguard will speak Friday May 3.

Saturday the speaker will be Mrs. Constance Baker Motley, member of the NAACP legal staff for Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina. She argued cases involving James Meredith, Harvey Gant and the University of Georgia.

The final keynote address will be given 9:30 Sunday night by the Reverend Will Campbell, past YMCA secretary at the University of Mississippi and now executive director of race relations in the South for the National Council of Churches.

All keynote addresses will be given in Howell Hall auditorium. The participants will arrive Thursday, May 2, and will be served meals at the Carolina Inn.

Infirmary

Councils Distribute Rule Change Letter

By JOEL BULKLEY

The Women's Council and the Women's Residence Council have issued a joint letter clarifying recent rule changes made by these groups, the DTH learned yesterday.

Copies of the letter, as co-authored by Bev Haynes, chairman of the Women's Council and Diane Blanton, chairman of the WRC, have been sent to 130 leaders throughout the state, including Gov. Terry Sanford, members of the Visiting Committee of the Board of Trustees and the state press. Copies were also mailed to present and past members of the Faculty Committee on Student Discipline, the University administration and student leaders.

"The letter is informative in nature and is an attempt to provide specific background material, by presenting the facts and rationale behind the actions of the councils," Miss Blanton reported Tuesday.

The text of the letter follows: "On March 12, the WRC made several changes in its constitution. These changes were made in an effort to make its constitution of the more consistent with the long tradition of student responsibility in the area of student conduct. The constitution formerly stated that the WRC could make the rules only with the approval of the Dean of Women. It now states that the WRC possesses the sole authority to formulate the social rules governing women students; however, the council will continue to confer with the Dean of Women's office before making any rule changes. The changes in the constitution were effective immediately and met with no objection from the administration.

On March 19, the WRC approved a revised version of the women's rules and put these changes into effect immediately. One of the changes made was a redefinition of the apartment rule. The original version of this rule, passed by the WRC in 1956, stated that all women students were required to have a minimum of two couples present before they could visit in a man's apartment. The rule was changed so that it applies only to freshmen women.

For many years students have been dissatisfied with the apartment rule. It has failed to face the social situation realistically. Therefore, it cannot be respected by the students; and it has seriously weakened the foundation of the Honor System.

This rule has been actively debated by the WRC and the Women's Council throughout the years. Both councils have sought information and advice from the students whom they represent, the administration, and other colleges and universities before deciding upon a specific change for this rule.

There has been opposition voiced concerning the immediacy of the rule's effectiveness. In 1960 and 1961 the WRC changed rules and put them into effect in the middle of the year. Therefore the WRC feels that it has acted in good faith according to accepted procedure.

Having clear precedent, the WRC declared the rule changes of March 19, 1963, immediately effective. In addition, this action would prevent the Women's Council from being placed in the awkward and hypocritical position of enforcing a rule previously declared unjust. Students cannot be expected to support an Honor System which is devoid of consistency, reason, and justice.

The Women's Council concurs with the rule changes made by the WRC and will therefore continue to enforce the rules as legislated by that council. In regard to the apartment rule, we would like to reiterate the fact that the Women's Council will maintain its jurisdiction over conduct in accordance with the Campus Code; therefore, it intends to handle any question of breach of lady-like conduct."

Two pages of rule changes instituted by the WRC were enclosed in the letters sent out.

YAF Sponsors Film Showing

"A Generation Awakes"—a film showing the activities of Young Americans for Freedom across the nation—will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday in Gerrard Hall by the local YAF group.

Conservative leaders Sen. Barry Goldwater and William F. Buckley Jr. will be among the speakers in the film.

A discussion on the Goldwater petition campaign for the Presidency will follow the showing. Anyone interested in working on the local petition campaign is asked to contact Mike Jaffe, 108 Carr.
