Peace Corps On Recruiting Drive

Eight Peace Corps officials will be on campus through tomorrow interviewing and testing students and other North Carolinians who might be interested in joining the corps.

The North Carolina drive, which has been going on here all week, is part of an all-out national recruiting campaign to increase the number of annual volunteers, according to recruiter Mike Edwards of the national Peace Corps offices in Washington.

Edwards said the campaign has been extremely successful so far this week "with a great number of people signing up to take the placement tests and many more showing sincere interest in the Peace Corps and what we are trying to do."

The recruiters have set up an information center in the "Y," which will be open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and tomorrow.

Douglas Kiker, information officer for the recruiters, emphasized the campaign will not be confined to students. "Anyone may apply," he said. A Peace Corps Volunteer must be an American citizen, aged 18 years or older, and possess a skill which may be used overseas. There is no minimum educational requirement or maximum age limit.

A Durham native, Rex B. Jarrell Jr., who just completed two years service in Sierra Leone, is one of the recruiters. He attended UNC and later graduated from Atlantic Christian College. Jarrell has accepted a job in the Peace Corps Washington office. With him are Shannon Harper, Winston-Salem native, Elizabeth Johnston of Columbia, S. C., Mike Edwards, a Georgia native, Leonard Fink of New York, and Mary Churnetski of Pennsylvania.

The 47 nations to which Peace Corpsmen have been assigned have requested double, triple, and in some cases, quadruple the present supply. There are now 6,000 Corpsmen at work or in training, and the number is expected to rise to 9,000 by the end of the year.

Ellis Reports Openings For SG Positions

The appointment of Dick Ellis as acting student body president and Peter Harkness as secretary-treasurer for the second session of summer school were confirmed this week by Student Body President Mike Lawler.

Ellis, a rising senior and political science major from Fuquay Springs, was a candidate for student body vice-president this spring.

Harkness, a rising sophomore from Washington, D. C. is a former vice-chairman of the Student Party.

Ellis announced this week that interviews for the remaining summer school student government positions will be held today, Friday and Monday afternoons, from 2-6 p.m. in the student government offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial.

According to Ellis, positions are open to both visiting and regular-term students, and "no previous student government experience is required."

Merchants To Drop Charges From Sit-Ins

By JOEL BULKLEY

A temporary easing of racial tension is apparent in Chapel Hill this week following the arrest of 34 persons Friday in anti-segregation protests.

Acting Mayor Roland Giduz Tuesday night announced terms of an agreement drawn up by four local groups in an effort to create a suitable climate for negotiations while a private committee seeks the desegregation of the 13 remaining segregated establishments. A progress report is expected this weekend.

Giduz, speaking in behalf of the Chapel Hill Committee For Open Business (COB), the Chapel Hill-Carrboro Merchants Association, the Mayor's Committee on Human Relations and the Police Department, told the Board of Aldermen this week that protest demonstrations had been suspended for at least ten days and recommendations had been made for dropping of charges against the 27 Negroes and 7 whites jailed last Friday in the first acts of civil disobedience here in three years.

Jr. Players To Do 'Spring For Sure'

The Junior Carolina Playmakers will present the musical comedy, "Spring For Sure," Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 p.m. in the Playmakers Theatre.

The play, written by Catherine McDonald, features music by Wilton Mason of Chapel Hill.

A story about three New York sophisticates who drop from the sky to find fun and romance in them Tar Hills, "Spring For Sure" is the first musical play to be presented by the Junior Playmakers since their first summer session in 1938.

Selected from high schools ranging over fourteen states, 50 Junior Playmakers have been studying acting, dancing, scenery, lighting, costuming and make-up here for the past four weeks.

This year's production features forty Junior Playmakers headed by Virginia Gilbertson from Smoke Rise N. J., as Cindy Higgins, and Frederick Heitman from Plymouth Meeting, Pa., as Jeremiah Jones.

Board Resolves To Seek Repeal Of Speaker Ban

The North Carolina Board of Higher Education resolved last week to seek repeal or amendment of the anti-Communist speaker act passed in the closing hours of the General Assembly last month.

The board was joined in the resolution by the presidents of most of the state's public and private colleges and the University.

The resolution said the act "represents a departure from the traditional freedom and responsibility delegated to the trustees, administrators and faculties to manage the educational affairs of our institutions."

"It limits the freedom of the University and the colleges to encourage their students and faculties to pursue truth in the atmosphere traditionally characteristic of colleges and universities worthy of the name," the resolution said.

The board unanimously endorsed a second resolution to send copies of the anti-gag law resolution to every member of the legislature.

Passage of the first resolution was preceded by 12 speeches, all (Continued on Page 6)

Replacing Aycock; UNC's Biggest Job

By CORA KEMP
In The Raleigh Times

One of the biggest problems facing the University is finding a replacement for Chancellor William B. Aycock.

Aycock will step down from the chancellorship next summer to resume a teaching position in the Law School. He has been chancellor here since 1956.

President William C. Friday is tentatively planning to appoint a committee to find the man to fill the position. Friday was out of town this week and unavailable for comment.

But what should a chancellor be? Friday's committee will inevitably set its own criteria, but several educators have their opinions on the subject.

"He has to be a man who cherishes excellence and freedom for everyone," said William Archie of the Board of Higher Education. "His first responsibility is to secure the finest faculty available."

Friday's own opinion on the matter is direct:

"A person who serves as chancellor should have had experience in university affairs and a deep understanding of the importance of good teaching on the university level. He must understand the services a university should perform for the state."

"Most likely a person will be educated in one field, but a chancellor should have an overall view of the sciences and liberal arts," Archie went on to say.

"If he is to be chancellor for a private college, I think his re- (Continued on Page 3)

Two Acquitted By CH Court

Cases against two anti-segregation demonstrators were finally disposed of in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court Tuesday after each had been continued twice.

An assault charge against Robert V. N. Brown was dismissed on motion of the defense attorney after evidence failed to show intent to commit assault.

Brown had been charged by John Carswell with simple assault on 13-year-old John Carswell, Jr., with a cardboard sign Brown was (Continued on Page 7)

Tar Heel Staff Positions Open

Students interested in writing news or feature stories for the Tar Heel are invited to apply in the newspaper offices on the second floor of Graham Memorial, according to editor Mike Putzel.

Staff members will be in every week-day afternoon to talk with those who apply, Putzel said.

No experience in journalism is required, although those who have written for a newspaper before are particularly encouraged to come by.
