Men's Council Gives Minataurs Probation

One Minataur was acquitted and 18 were put on definite probation of one full academic semester in trials by the Men's Council Thursday night.

All 19 were charged with:

- 1) Abusive language in Y-Court the morning of the Georgia game.
- 2) Ungentlemanly conduct during the game.

All 19 were acquitted of the second charge because of insufficient evidence.

On the first charge, only 18 were found guilty. One of the boys was not present when the Y-Court incident occurred.

The boys were treated as individuals in the deliberation of the case, according to Chairman Whitney Durand. The Council was not trying the Minataurs as a group.

The 18 involved in the Y-Court incident were considered guilty of a very serious violation of the Campus Code, Durand said.

The action itself was serious apart from the attention it drew, he said.

The defendants called attention to the fact that their actions have been carried on annually without reprimand from Student Government or Administration officials.

Many felt that Student Government had clamped down on them without sufficient warning.

The Council felt, however, that this did not absolve the Minataurs of their actions.

In two other cases before the Council, two students were put on definite probation for lying offenses.

A senior pleaded guilty to lying when charged with writing a false sign-out slip for his date.

The couple drove with another couple to Virginia Beach in the middle of the week after signing out for Durham.

The girls were reported missing from their residence that night and called in later from Virginia Beach.

The two girls were suspended for one full academic semester by the Women's Council in a separate trial Wednesday night.

They had been charged with falsifying their sign-out slips, driving in an automobile after closing hours without special permission and drinking to the extent that their judgment was impaired.

The other boy, a graduate student, was not charged.

In the last Men's Council trial, a sophomore was placed on probation for the rest of this semester after being found guilty of lying to a police officer while drunk.

The student turned himself in without prompting from the police officer or anyone else.

The Council considered this an extenuating circumstance and gave the probation sentence instead of suspension.

Coppers Chase Paper Pullers

Campus Safety Officer Arthur J. Beaumont said yesterday his office is investigating recent reports of newspaper thefts from campus racks. He warned that persons guilty of such thefts are subject to Honor Council and criminal court proceedings.

Beaumont said the investigation was prompted by reports from area newspaper distributors that newspapers have been disappearing from racks in Lenoir Hall, Ehringhaus and several other campus residence halls.

Distributors said that the loss of several papers a day from several locations rapidly mounts to losses of a hundred dollars a month or more.

A PARKING PROBLEM in Chapel Hill, well not exactly, only a five-car accident. Police said an estimated $12000 damage was done yesterday afternoon when a car driven by Mary Moon, 41, of Route 1, Snow Camp apparently swerved out of control on E. Franklin St. and struck a parked car starting a chain reaction. Her car struck a parked car owned by Joe Dorsett of Chapel Hill, striking one owned by Lavan Tyson Betty, hitting another owned by Herman M. Parker of Charlottesville, Va., colliding with another owned by Harold Lancaster of Goldsboro. Moon was released from Memorial Hospital after being treated for abrasions on the head which required about 10 stitches. Police said no charges had been brought against Moon.

Dook Parade Clean-Up Committee Ready To Go

By JIM NEAL
Preparations for student review of the "Beat Dook Parade" have been completed, it was announced this week.

Celeste Holm Comes Tues.

Celeste Holm, Academy Award winner, will appear in the musical, "With Love and Laughter," Tuesday night at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall. The program, sponsored by GM, is free to UNC students. Spouse tickets are one dollar each and the general public will be admitted for $1.50 at 7:45 p.m. if space is available. In the musical Miss Holm will pursue the answer to "Has the relationship between men and women changed." It will contain writings of Saroyan, Shaw, Shakespeare, O'Neill, Laurens, Tennessee Williams and Rodgers and Hammerstein. She will appear in scenes containing song and comment relevant to the question with Wesley Addy.

Miss Holm has appeared in such films as "Tender Trap," "All About Eve," and "High Society." She appeared in the stage production "Invitation to a March" last season.

Student Body President Mike Lawler said a review procedure, brought on by state-wide protests which followed last year's parade, has been set up by Tom Harris, chairman of the sponsoring PiKA fraternity's parade committee.

Review of the floats by a student committee before the parade begins is designed to head off "some aspects" of previous parades which have "reflected adversely" on the University, Lawler said.

Last year's parade drew heavy criticism from across the state. The University administration received phone calls and letters complaining that some floats in the parade went beyond the bounds of good taste.

When students returned from Thanksgiving vacation last year, the administration announced that this year's floats would be subject to review by a faculty committee.

The student review procedure set up for this year would remove the need for faculty supervision.

The floats for the parade will be reviewed twice, according to Harris — once Friday morning and again just before the parade begins. Any floats the committee considers objectionable will be asked to leave the parade.

If an objectionable float does parade after having been asked whether dormitory fraternity or sorority, will face "judicial action" by the proper council," Lawler said.

Harris said in a note to Lawler on the reviewing procedure that letters would be sent to the president of each living unit warning, "Ungentlemanly - like actions by individuals would be campus code offenses and dealt with by the Honor Council."

The reviewing committee will consist of Charles Battle, of the IFC; Jerry Good, MRC; Peggy Anne Harris, Pan-Hellenic Council; the president of a girl's dormitory, to be chosen; and Harris.

Phipps Confirms One But Nixes The Other

By MICKEY BLACKWELL
L. J. Phipps, state commander of the N. C. Dept. of the American Legion yesterday confirmed one quotation attributed to him but disavowed another. Phipps confirmed reports of a speech in Lillington Thursday in which he reportedly said that UNC officials are not enforcing the so-called gag-law. However, Phipps disavowed as "incorrect" a report in yesterday's Raleigh News and Observer quoting him as saying that retired Army Colonel Henry Royall was the real "father" of the controversial law. "I did not make that statement," Phipps said. "I stated that Colonel Royall of Chapel Hill Post No. 6 of the American Legion, was the author of the resolution passed on June 22, 1963, by the State Convention of the American Legion requesting an investigation by the State Legislature of certain activities on the campus of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, particularly the New Left Club and the Progressive Labor Club. It is my understanding that Secretary of State Thad Eure has since stated that he would release the law, Phipps said. "I would not want to take any credit away from him." To substantiate his charge that UNC officials are not enforcing the gag-law, Phipps cited the appearance of Larry Phelps, a spring graduate of UNC, who spoke in Everett dormitory Oct. 30 as the basis for his allegation. Phelps was among 59 Americans who went to Cuba during the summer. He later appeared before a House Committee on Un-American Activities (HUAC) where he took the Fifth Amendment four times. Phelps took the Fifth in answer to questions concerning his association with Jacob Rosen and John Salter.

Thus whether Phelps is covered under the Fifth Amendment section depends on a legal decision as to whether Phelps' refusal to answer any HUAC questions about his associations is the same thing as "refusing to answer any question, with respect to communist or subversive connections, or activities," which the law specifies. Phipps thinks the law covers Phelps. "By permitting Larry Phelps to speak after they (University officials) had been advised that he would speak, was a violation of this particular act," Phipps said. "This talk by Phelps went beyond an informal bull session," Phipps charged especially since it was advertised on the same afternoon that Phelps spoke. Phelps spoke along with John Salter, who also made the summer Cuban visit. Phipps charged that the two spoke with the approval of the University administration, which held that Phelps' visit was of an informal nature. UNC chancellor William Aycock has repeatedly said that the University is enforcing the law, but he adds the law is so full of ambiguities that it is hard to interpret.

Sophs Plan Info Booklet

Sophomore class officers are planning a booklet of information on major courses of study for junior and senior years. The booklet will be designed to give an insight into the various fields available and what careers they might lead to, according to class president Larry Ehrhart. "Freshmen and sophomores will be able to use the booklet to plan their majors in terms of what work will be expected of them and what qualifications are required," Ehrhart said. "It will also emphasize the necessity of planning a major." The booklet is not intended to be an evaluation of the courses in a major, but an attempt to find the purpose behind these courses, Ehrhart said. "By presenting an outline of the various majors, it is hoped that the students will follow through on their own to seek answers to any personal questions from department instructors. "Hopefully the students will choose a major in which they are interested and which is suitable for them. "This would cut down on the changing of majors because of lack of pre-knowledge." Members of the sophomore class will conduct interviews from a questionnaire of faculty members and students who have done well in the various departments. A report will be drawn up and published around February, Ehrhart said. "We will need full support and cooperation from the faculty as well as the sophomores in these interviews."

FOOTBALL DANCE

The Mens' Residence Council is sponsoring its last football dance of the year today from 8 to 12:30 p.m. at the American Legion Hut, next to Eastgate Shopping Center. Admission will be free to students and friends and refreshments will be available. The Continentals combo will provide the music and a large turn-out is expected, according to MRC Vice-President Gordon Appell.

Hickey Is Hopeful After Tiger Loss

By JIM HICKEY
UNC Head Coach
Once again we are on the spot. We know we have a good football team. We've known that all year. Yet, after last week's loss to Clemson, we are in the position where we have to come back today against Miami in order to convince a lot of people. You know, after losing to Clemson, I was worried. I worried all Saturday night and all Sunday. I wondered just how the team would do in these last two games. I saw how hard the boys took that loss, and I wondered whether or not they'd be able to snap out of it and play football like they're capable of playing it. I'm not worried any more. When we held practice Monday, team spirit was as high as it's been since I've been here. We had two of the best practice sessions we've ever had this week, and I know we are ready, in more ways than one, for the game today. I'd have to say that we are in great physical condition for Miami. Of course we lost second-team center Glenn Ogburn in the Clemson game, but his replacement, Ed Stringer, will do a good job. Everyone else is ready to go, with the exception of those

Big Crowd Turns Out For Pep Rally

SCREAMING for a Carolina victory in this afternoon's UNC-Miami contest, a torch-lit pep rally surrounds a bus carrying the Heel football team. The rally was held in front of the Varsity Theater after a march through the campus from Craige and Ehringhaus. Head cheerleader Tom Gruen urged students to "bring anything to make noise, from a garbage can to your roommate's head."

Discriminatory Practices Committee Formed In SL

A special committee to investigate discriminatory practices involving the use of student funds was set up by Bob Spearman, vice-president of the student body, in Thursday night's session of Student Legislature. The committee, composed of Neal Jackson, Judy Freider, Linda Simpson and Mal King, will investigate possible discriminatory practices in any field where student activities funds may be involved. "The committee will take testimony from anyone on the matter," said Spearman. "Before Student Legislature considers its budget for next year, we must be sure that no student funds, which are paid by every student, are used to finance banquets or parties in establishments which will not serve every student." He added that he would release a full statement next week. SL passed four bills and saw four more introduced. The University Abroad Committee received a $550 appropriation to finance the transportation and living expenses of a University representative to finalize arrangements for a junior years abroad. Pete Range, chairman of the committee, said that further details would be released later. In other action the body voted $20 to the Co-op Committee for expenses, passed a resolution commending the Playmakers for the Student Night performance and urging the student body to support the program and passed a bill making it illegal for a member of the Men's or Women's Council to act as defense counsel. Bills introduced included an appropriation of $2,460 for additional Yackety-Yacks, an appropriation of $150 for the Carolina Quarterly to improve circulation, a bill to release all graduate students, except medical, dental and law, from compulsory purchase of yearbooks and a bill to establish a revolving television fund, which would allow for the replacement of all dorm TV sets within four years.

Football Horrorscope

Katherine Carmichael, the Kitty that keeps the cats away, could not get out of it this week. Though she tried hard enough, the Dean of Women could not escape the clutches of the Horrorscope of which she gets its man, er Woman, er Kitty. First she wanted Director of Admission Charlie Bernard to do it; then she wanted Mrs. Hickey to do it. (Who?). Then she started talking, and talking, and talking and talking. But Kitty finally came around after (1) going to a concert the night before and thinking of ways to get out of the "poll," (2) Crying "unfair" about the whole thing and comparing it to her asking the Horrorscope about Far Eastern affairs (But we know all about Christine Keeler, Kitty); and (3) saying she'd fall flat on her face with something like this but she'd try it anyway. By the looks of her picks, Kitty isn't going to fall as flat as Kemp did last week (9-11), but the Apartment Rule was never like this as she went at it with some help on a few of the selections. Kitty was sure of the first three games, but the Georgia-Auburn game was a guess and the West Virginia-VPI one might as well have been. "I hear from the men folk around here that Notre Dame isn't as strong as it used to be," she said as she marked the Irish off quickly. She also said Oklahoma and Ohio State usually have good football teams and that she'd stick with the Big Ten on the Indiana-Oregon contest.

As for Texas. "They're usually pretty good, too," she said. We'll go along with that. Horrorscope had, percentage-wise, one of their finest weeks last time. As a group, the five regulars and Kemp came out 83-37 for .692 as four men tied for the top with 15-5. The record for eight weeks now totals 589-309 with 42 ties. That percentage is .655. Curry Kirkpatrick retained his two-up margin on Al Kaplan for the top spot, and is now at 107-41-7. Kaplan (105-43-7) and Ron Logan (103-45-7) are also over the 100-win mark while Friedman is on down at 99-49-7 and John Montague is at 97-53-7. The guest list is now at 78-70-7 with only four of the eight having hit over half the games—Journalism Dean Luxon, Chief Beaumont, Billy Cunningham and Spero Dorton.
