Aycock Tells Lawyers: 'Bomb The Ban'

By JOEL BULKLEY
Chancellor William B. Aycock Thursday night called on North Carolina lawyers to remove "the false sense of security" generated by the controversial state Speaker Ban law.

Speaking as a lawyer, he challenged the belief that the so-called Gag Law was a remedy to any supposed evil in Chapel Hill saying, "if there is an evil, be assured that this legislation is highly ineffective in meeting it. It is not good to deceive our people into a false sense of security by extolling a remedy which is no remedy at all."

Aycock's remarks came in an address to a meeting of the Greensboro Bar Assn. last night in Greensboro.

He said the University "has produced as a student the founder of the John Birch Society and, also as a student a one-time leader of the Communist Party in North Carolina. . . . If we were in the business of producing John Birchers, or Communists or Progressive Labor Party members, we have failed. For each one of these strange individuals we produce 10,000 solid American citizens who provide sound leadership in all walks of life."

He commented that the law was posing serious problems to the University. "We are being deprived of the opportunity to learn from visiting scientists who have something worthy to offer us in the areas in which we need to catch up. We are in the process of losing our reputation as being a great institution, unafraid of the free flow of ideas."

"There are equally troublesome questions which have not yet occurred to those persons who are prone to make charges but at the same time are quite unwilling to follow through."

"For instance, Channel 4, the television station of the University is a facility. Is it a facility within the meaning of the 1963 Act? If so, is it legal to let a member of the Communist Party say a single word on any subject on Channel 4? What about news programs?"

"Would it make any difference if the programs were live or taped? Would it be all right to telecast Communist speakers over Channel 4 so long as all the sets on the campus were off?"

"Another question presents itself in connection with telecasting Communist speakers or Fifth Amendment takers over a University-owned television receiving set in the Carolina Inn, for example, even though the program originated on a commercial station. Would this violate the 1963 Act?"

"Quite apart from the difficulties involved in trying in good faith to enforce the 1963 law is the purpose of the law. Why such legislation in the first place? No one really knows—the usual hearings and debate which normally provide essential information about legislative intent was totally lacking. Certainly, any legislation which both meets our constitutional requirements and combats communism is desirable."

"If this legislation meets these tests why isn't it good for all of North Carolina? I have been wondering why the few radio, television stations and newspapers who proclaim the virtues of the 1963 legislation do not voluntarily bring their operations under the ban now and also start a campaign to get the law repealed. Do they dare? Obviously not."

"In the first place, they would not know how to apply the law. They would find it impracticable to enforce it, and moreover, they would be the first to scream that they should not be required by law to deprive their audiences, listeners and readers of a fundamental right to hear all sides of all questions."

"At the same time, they could not seriously assume that their audiences have more education and more capacity to discriminate between democracy and communism than the audiences who hear speakers on college and university campuses."

"There is no evidence that any speaker on the campus ever influenced any of the handful of students who either went astray or continued the path they had chosen before enrolling to adopt or to continue their extreme positions."

"The fact of the matter is that the overwhelming majority of speakers on the campus are conservative in their views and in general students today are more conservative than their predecessors of the 1930's. To be other than conservative is news and a few students deliberately seize this opportunity to make news. So it is with speakers who are not conservative."

"Two years ago there was a Progressive Labor Group organized in Chapel Hill. The organizer lives in North Carolina but he does not have any connection with the University. He has never made a speech on the campus."

"Leaders have a duty to inform a sufficient number of people that the 1963 Visiting Speakers Law is a departure in every respect from our traditional practice of freedom. . . ." Aycock said.

"It is important to recall that over two centuries ago Montesquieu said that 'in a republican government . . . the whole power of education is required.'"

"It may take years for the whole power of education to exert itself. It will require much time and great effort on the part of many people," he said.

Toronto Exchange Starts Here Today

Twenty-six students from the University of Toronto will arrive on campus this morning at 9 a.m. in the first phase of this year's Toronto Exchange.

Twenty-six UNC students will visit the Toronto campus during semester break, the latter part of January and the first part of February.

This year's exchange theme is "North Carolina, Microcosm of the Changing South."

The Canadians will be treated to lunch at the Villa Tempesta today. Afterwards, they and their UNC hosts will visit the State Capitol Building in Raleigh.

The group will receive a personal tour of the Capitol from Tom Lambeth, administrative assistant to the Governor, Hugh Cannon, director of the Department of Administration, and George Stephens, special assistant to the Governor.

The Canadians will receive an official UNC welcome from Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathey at a banquet which will be held at the Morehead Planetarium. They will also see the Playmaker's production of "Long Day's Journey Into Night" Friday evening.

On Saturday, the exchanges will attend various classes, participate in a discussion of student government and attend the UNC-Dook football encounter.

Consolidated University Secretary Fred Weaver will address the group later Saturday afternoon and that night the group will attend the German's concert.

9-5 Vote

By BOB SOTSAM
The Di-Pi senate voted 9 to 5 against a resolution urging student endorsement of teaching professorships this week.

The bill provided that the holders of these professorships would not be under institutional pressure to publish, would not be required to have a Ph.D. degree or be subject to "other encumbrances, nonessential to good teaching."

Supporters of the bill said that a precedent was established in the writer-in-residence program because the professor for that post is chosen by the students.

Opponents of the bill replied that the expense was unnecessary because the present professors are satisfactory. They argued that the students were no more competent in choosing professors than are the trustees.

A vote of the senate and guests also defeated the bill, 8-7.

Soph Committees Named By Ehrhart

Some 56 sophomores have been named to the class cabinet and committees, President Larry Ehrhart announced yesterday.

CURED

Citizens United For Racial Equality and Dignity (CURED) will launch a local voter registration campaign at an open meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in the First Baptist Church on Roberson St.

Professor Donald R. Matthews of the Political Science Department will speak on "Negro Voter Registration in the South."

Order Of Old Beanbirds Selects 11 Fledglings

To compensate for the seasonal losses of its wild turkey friends, the Order of the Old Beanbirds pecked 11 new fledglings today at dawn. Although it caused a momentary delay in their Southern freedom fight, the Beanbirds felt they could not fly over the birdlike qualities of these 11.

Such qualities are often indefinable and aesthetic, though the fledglings must all have certain distinguishing characteristics:

1. A BeanBird must be able to perch . . .
2. To go out on a limb and then not fall off, even if pushed.
3. To give a worthy demonstration of the BeanBird shuffle.
4. To fly alone even with a broken wing.
5. To twitter-tweet.
6. To control squawks on the ground and in the air.
7. And to use its claws to cling to the strong and sturdy limbs of educational ideals.

The new fledglings are: Dan "Sleek-Headed Grease Bird" Batten, Ned "Thunder-Pumping Mudlark" Martin, Howdy "Hog-Headed Moose-Bird" Manning, Ann "Bay-Breasted Waterthrush" Branch, Becky "Silktailed Mouse Wren" Peeler, Frammie "Lizard Coo-Coo" McLain, Tom "Red-Bellied Bush Bird" Brodyhill, Suzanne "Squating Snipe" Smith, Judy "Buffle-Headed Boy-Bird" Butler, and Doug "Shining Fly-Snapper" Foster.

Also given an honorary pecking was George "Skunk-Headed Blackbird" Barclay.

Following the ceremony, the Beanbirds, with fluttering wings and typical birdlike gaiety, feasted on bird seed. They will continue their avian activities throughout the day.

Playmakers Hold Tryouts

The Carolina Playmakers will hold tryouts for a bill of three new one-act plays written and directed by students today at 4 p.m. in the Playmakers Theatre.

The plays will be presented on December 7 and 8.

The new one-acts, written by students in Prof. Thomas M. Patterson's playwriting class, are: "The Button" by George Gray of Gastonia; "Sydney" by Richard N. Philp of Vero Beach, Fla.; and "A Matter of Distinction" by Tom Benenson of New York City.

A total of eight men and three women are needed for the casts of the three plays, which will be directed by Dramatic Art graduate students Susie Gordon, Tom Hull, and John Whitty.

The directors have announced that anyone in the Chapel Hill area, as well as any University student, is eligible to audition.

24 Pledge NROTC Unit

The local unit of the Scabard and Blade has named 24 Midshipmen and Cadets as pledges for fall semester.

NROTC pledges are seniors T. M. Cribbin, W. D. King, H. G. Roser, D. C. Runney, R. G. Segrest, C. M. Vollmer and juniors J. S. Fluet, K. R. Furr, A. V. Monette, R. T. Oliver, W. M. Farham, and J. L. Peddicord.

AFROTC cadet pledges are seniors C. P. Dunnegan, Jr., D. W. Howe, B. R. Matthews, J. J. McDonald, J. R. Poole, R. D. Skees, C. E. Stull and juniors J. P. Hoybach, H. L. Jones, W. J. Nelson, C. M. Tate, and B. F. Warlick.

William Poteat represented the local unit, Company L, 8th Regiment, at the 31st National Convention of the National Society of Scabard and Blade in Philadelphia on Nov. 15 and 16.

Top military leaders of the armed forces addressed the delegates at the two-day convention.

Membership in the Scabard and Blade consists of outstanding juniors and seniors in ROTC at more than 170 colleges and universities who successfully complete training. It was established at the University of Wisconsin in 1904-05.

DENY TO HELP AWARD

Floyd W. Denny, Jr., M.D., Department of Pediatrics at UNC, has been named to a three-year term on an awards committee of the American Academy of Pediatrics, according to E. H. Christopherson, M.D., executive director.

He is a member of the committee which selects the recipients of the E. Mead Johnson Awards, given annually for outstanding research in the field of pediatrics. The Academy makes the awards from money given by the Mead Johnson Laboratories.

Frosh Committee Interviews Set

Interviews for the Freshman Class cabinet will be held today in Roland Parker 2 of GM from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m.

Chairmen will be selected for the Finance, Publicity, Talent Show and Social Committees of the freshman class. Several sub-committees will also function under each committee. All interested freshmen are urged to apply for cabinet positions.

Jim Brame, freshman president, announced yesterday that a calendar of activities for the class is currently being drawn up by the class officers. Among the scheduled projects is a Merchant's Sale during the first week of December, when freshmen will work as salesmen with their commissions going to the class treasury.

LARSH ELECTED V.P.
Dr. John E. Larsh Jr., chairman of the Department of Parasitology in the School of Public Health at the University of North Carolina, has been elected vice president of the American Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene.

Committee Makes Study Of Book-X

By PAIT BETTS
Proposals for raising refund values on used texts and lowering prices at the UNC Book Exchange and improving the choice of dormitory furniture were discussed by the Campus Affairs Board Tuesday night.

Ken Simon, chairman of a sub-committee investigating the Book Ex. price procedures, reported that texts are marked 20% above publishers' prices. Used books are re-bought for 50% of the retail price and resold at 75% of the retail price, according to Elmer Oakley and Tom Shetley, present management.

Simon said he was told that the 25% difference went to "repair of damaged texts." He said no progress was made in negotiating a change in pricing because the manager resigned last spring and at present there is no official manager. He said he was told that the manager was the only person with authority to act on price rates.

The Board also proposed establishing a "furniture pool" by the university in which students might be able to rent extra lamps, book cases, lounge chairs, rugs etc. during the academic year.

The sub-committee on housing reported that high student living expenses are due in large part to the university's self-liquidation program, which is still increasing because of inflation. It reported that the Lenoir Hall bond was paid off in 1959 and the gym was also paid off but that self-liquidation continued.

"The state makes all colleges and universities self-liquidating, but UNC as a state university has to self-liquidate more because it is growing more and faster. Costs have gone up over a 5-year period approximately 18%, and dorm rent has gone up 20% and will probably go up again next year for the new dorm which will be ready by 1965," a student said.

The Campus Affairs Board also outlined plans for an off-campus housing survey which would investigate heating, water, food, furniture, size and type of available accommodations during registration. The Board reported that of approximately 10,884 students, 5,500 live on campus and the remainder live in private housing, fraternities or sororities, or are commuters.

DTH Fire Editor Igor Hotbox

came by the office yesterday to give us a detailed report on the fire (if you can call it that) at Memorial Hospital Tuesday night.

Igor says there were over 200 students milling around the hospital and he says there were a large number of nurses literally hanging out of the windows.

One enterprising young nurse who couldn't get a clear view of the scene decided to unlatch the window screen and push it open.

But when she did, Igor reports, she found that it was not hung to the top of the window and the screen almost fell on the house-mother who was standing below.

Several other young lassies came to the damsel's rescue and by combining their efforts, they were able to get the screen back on its hinges before it fell to the ground, two floors below.

Football Horrorscope

T. D. Gridley scratched his bushy hair and shouted "Hey, How You?" to the five horrorscopes who had been invited to dinner among the trees.

Laid out on the table of leaves and bark were banana cream, banana cream sandwiches, banana stew, bananas and turnips, banana pudding, banana jello, banana ice cream, and bananas — fried, baked, mashed, hot-buttered, kosher, fricasseed and a la (Wayne) king.

T. D., who has rated the top 60 teams in the country for us for the past three weeks, kept up a running chatter ("Have A Banana") while we gave him the selection sheet.

"Umba, umba. Erksh, erksh. Eosshy, easshy. Umba, umba, umba, burp, burp. Have a Banana," said T. D. We did (it was yellow) and he picked immediately. Choosing upsets by Yale, Oregon Stat and Student Government.

"Uh, about this Student Government selection, T. D.?" we said. "What is the meaning of this Why have you gone against us to pick the no-goods at the other end of GM?"

"Have a banana," he said. "I figured with Johnsyve Massemburg at tailback the DTH won't be in the game after the first half."

"But T. D.," we said, "we have Swivel Hips Simonds and Fan Jet Riggs at the tight ends.

There's no way anybody can cover them."

The distinguished prognosticator looked puzzled. "Hmrm, that may be a problem," said Gridley. "But those passes to the flats, uh, I mean in the flats, are only short gainers. Student Government will stop the long thrusts."

Last week the Horrorscope took a dreadful beating — its worst of the season. Guest star Kitty Carmichael did finish over .500 at 10-9-1, but the group together was only 67-47-6 with .567. Mat Friedman led at 13-6-1 with Curry Kirkpatrick second at 12-7-1.

With one week left, the mark is 656-356-48 for .648. Kirkpatrick is now four games ahead of the pack at 119-48-8 while Al Kaplan retains second (115-52-8) despite a 10-9-1 last time.
