

New Year Brings Race Violence To Chapel Hill

By JOEL BULKLEY

Quinton Baker is comforted after being doused with ammonia solution along with several other demonstrators in sit-in at the Rock Pile variety store last week. Baker, state NAACP youth leader and student at North Carolina College in Durham, was treated for burns at Memorial Hospital after being arrested.

Racial violence greeted the New Year in Chapel Hill, sending 12 persons to the hospital following two "ammonia incidents" as anti-segregation protests continued. Police have reported five separate incidents of violence, occurring at three segregated businesses, since demonstrations resumed here Dec. 13. Only one arrest has been made in connection with the five incidents. Some 239 whites and Negroes, including 25 juveniles, have been arrested to date, most of them on charges of trespass and obstructing the sidewalk. Seven persons were treated for first-degree burns at Memorial Hospital after being doused with ammonia and bleach water during a sit-in. Four were arrested at Carleton's Rock Pile, a segregated grocery on the Durham Road, while the others left before the police arrived. The following day 13 more were arrested there, with five requiring treatment for minor burns. A group of about 25 persons had gathered in front with only five getting inside. When police arrived only John Dunne, chairman of the local Congress of Racial Equality chapter, remained inside with proprietor Carlton Mize. Dunne was in the back of the store, police said, with his coat over his head, coughing and the floor wet with ammonia.

Mize told police he had attempted to keep the demonstrators out, however, they had nearly torn loose a screen door before forcing their way in.

CORE officials have not pressed charges in connection with any of the incidents. Police Capt. W. D. Blake said last week he did not expect any more "ammonia incidents."

Watts Restaurant on Pittsboro Road outside Chapel Hill was the scene of two incidents, resulting in the arrest of 16 persons. Thursday night one white demonstrator was urinated on by a white waitress while a photographer was jostled by another waitress.

Friday night Orange County Deputy Sheriffs arrested five Duke University faculty members and one from UNC along with four others were arrested at Watts.

University faculty member, Albert Amon of the psychology department, who was not arrested, suffered head cuts and bruises when an unidentified waitress from the restaurant struck some of the demonstrators with a broom handle. Demonstrators, as well as spectators, were sprayed with water from a nearby garden hose.

Police identified the Duke faculty members as Peter H. Klopfer, zoology department; David Smith, mathematics; Frederick Herzog, Robert Osborn and Harmon Smith, all of the religion department. The UNC faculty member arrested was identified as Bill Wynn of the psychology department.

Amon was treated at Memorial Hospital and released. The others arrested included, police said, Quinton Baker, Negro, North Carolina College and president of the state NAACP Youth Council; Tom Bynum and Ben Spaulding, both Negro UNC students and Dunne.

They were taken to Orange County jail in Hillsboro and held under $100 bond each. All have been released.

Eleven more were arrested at the Rock Pile Saturday night, including seven whites and four Negroes. No violence was reported. Seven University students were among those jailed including John Shively, 20; Van Cornelius, 19; Jo Ann Johnston, 20; Ralph Mitchell, 19; Timothy Perkins, 19; Arthur Simons, 20, and Henry Sanford, 20, a Negro.

Police Chief William D. Blake estimated Friday his men had put in about 400 hours of overtime handling the current wave of demonstrations. He said he was preparing a report to be submitted to the Board of Aldermen Jan. 13 to seek some compensation for his men. Last fall the department received cash bonuses for handling the summer protests.

A report on a proposed public accommodations law for Chapel Hill is also expected to be presented at the meeting. The report, from the Institute of Government, is expected to support an opinion from the State Attorney General's office that the town does not have the legal authority to enact such a law.

John Dunne, chairman of the CORE chapter, has stated that protests will continue until employment discrimination and accommodations segregation have been removed.

Two Duke University students and three others were arrested during a sit-in at Watts Restaurant Sunday night. They were charged with trespass and resisting arrest and taken to Hillsboro jail.

The demonstrators had ice water poured on them by a waitress during the sit-in, part of a continuing protest against segregation here. They were also "stepped on" and dragged outside by customers in the restaurant.

Later Sunday, Brady's Restaurant was picketed by 15 persons representing CORE.

A Chapel Hill painting contractor, Howard Pendergraft, has been charged with assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a Dec. 19 incident at the Tar Heel Sandwich Shop.

Police said Pendergraft allegedly kicked Negro Donald Davis who was sitting outside the store.

Davis was treated for minor injuries at Memorial Hospital. Pendergraft was released on $200 bond and is scheduled to appear in Recorder's Court today.

Trial is also scheduled today for 28 demonstrators involved in 55 cases.

The trials of 144 other cases involving 101 demonstrators were transferred last Thursday to Orange County Superior Court after a motion to dismiss the charges against them was denied in Recorder's Court.

Judge William S. Stewart granted Defense Attorney Floyd McKissick's request for a jury trial in each case, but he ordered each of the demonstrators to execute new bond of $175.

About 15 of the defendants, including Negroes and whites, refused to post bond and will remain in jail. The trials are expected to come up at the criminal term of Orange County Superior Court beginning the third week in February.

McKissick, a Durham attorney who serves as national chairman of the Congress of Racial Equality, asked for a dismissal of the charges on grounds that the defendants' rights under the 14th Amendment were violated. He also contended that clauses of the Constitution guaranteeing equal protection and the right to protest were violated.

Stewart also denied McKissick's request to continue bonds, some of the demonstrators posted upon arrest. Bond of $175 was required on the combined charges of trespassing and resisting arrest.

McKissick said many of the 144 demonstrators had been arrested more than once.

One demonstrator, charged with trespassing, forfeited a $75 bond when he failed to appear in court.

Another was convicted of trespassing and resisting arrest and fined $75 and $16 court costs.

Warrants were served during the court session on six persons charged with assault and battery during a sit-in demonstration at the Pines Restaurant Dec. 16.

Drugstore owner John Carswell said Sunday he has brought forcible trespass charges against 11 demonstrators who entered his store Dec. 31. The charges were added to the trespass and resisting arrest warrants already served by police. All 11 are scheduled for court today.

A recount of arrests in recent racial demonstrations follows: Dec. 19, 18 at Brady's and Tar Heel Sandwich Shop; Dec. 20, 11 at Tar Heel Sandwich Shop, charged with blocking the sidewalk and resisting arrest; Dec. 22, 17 at Brady's; Dec. 23, 4 at University Motel; Dec. 29, 6 at the Pines Restaurant; Dec. 31, 17 at Colonial Drug and the Rock Pile; Jan. 2, 6 at Watts Restaurant; Jan. 3, 10 at Watts Restaurant; Jan. 4, 11 at Rock Pile; Jan. 5, 5 at Rock Pile.

Kirkpatrick Wins Top Hearst Prize

By FRED SEELY
One of America's top collegiate journalism prizes has been awarded to Curry Kirkpatrick. The DTH Sports Editor won the $750 scholarship given monthly by the William Randolph Hearst Journalism Foundation for his story on the impact on Chapel Hill of President Kennedy's death. It appeared in the Daily Tar Heel on November 23. A 20-year-old junior from Lewiston, N. Y., Kirkpatrick maintains a 3.0 average and is in the top 10 per cent of his class. He ranks third in his class in the School of Journalism. A member of the DTH sports staff since his freshman year, Kirkpatrick also holds the Jake Wade Memorial Scholarship for sports writing at UNC. The School of Journalism receives $750 for its general fund from the Hearst Foundation, which will award $40,600 in scholarships this year. In competition with stories submitted by journalism majors from 46 schools, the prize-winning article elevated the UNC School of Journalism to fourth place in the overall contest, trailing only Florida, Stanford and Nebraska. Kirkpatrick's award is the second time a UNC student has won first place in a Hearst monthly contest. Larry K. Smith, '61, gained that honor in November, 1960, and later placed fifth overall in the yearly competition. His prize-winnings totaled $1300. Last year Wayne King, former DTH Editor, won eighth place in the October contest and second place in April. His total award was $500. Jim Coltfooter won $400 in the March, 1963 competition. Kirkpatrick also placed eleventh in November, 1962. The entries were judged by Hubbard Keavy, Associated Press bureau chief in Los Angeles; Roger Tatarian, Executive Editor of United Press International; and Lawrence Martin, former Associate Editor of the Denver Post.

Dr. Hardre Re-elected To Top Post

Dr. Jacques Hardre, professor of French here, has been re-elected to serve as president of the American Association of Teachers of French for another two-year period, September, 1964, to September, 1966. A member of the UNC faculty since 1945, Prof. Hardre has served as a regional representative of the AATF, a member of its executive council, and as vice president. Born in Dinan, France, Dr. Hardre received a baccalaureate degree in France, a B.A. degree from Guilford College, and M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from UNC. His research areas are surrealism, existentialism, and contemporary French theater. His teaching specialties are contemporary French literature and civilization. Publications of Dr. Hardre's include a book entitled "Letters of Louvois," published by the UNC Studies in Romance Languages and Literatures; and articles entitled "The Existentialism of Jean-Paul Sartre," and "Sartre's Existentialism and Humanism," among others.

No New Leads In Rinaldi Murder

By GARY BLANCHARD
No new leads have been reported in the continuing probe into the Christmas Eve murder of Mrs. Lucille Rinaldi, 32-year-old wife of a graduate student and part-time English instructor, Frank Rinaldi, 34. Mrs. Rinaldi was visiting her husband for the holidays from their hometown of Waterbury, Conn., where she worked as a high school English teacher. The couple was married last July 31. Mrs. Rinaldi was found brutally murdered in Rinaldi's apartment at 105 North Street by Rinaldi and John Sipp, a friend, when they returned from a shopping trip to Durham and Chapel Hill about 1:45 p.m. Dec. 24. Rinaldi was charged with the crime late Christmas Eve. He was released a week later following a preliminary hearing in Chapel Hill Recorder's Court. Judge William Stewart found no probable cause that Rinaldi murdered his wife. The decision did not completely clear Rinaldi, however. He can still be taken before the grand jury for indictment proceedings next month in Hillsboro. If indicted, he would face a jury trial. District Solicitor Thomas Cooper said further legal action against Rinaldi depends upon whether the continuing investigation turns up any new evidence against him. Clinging testimony at the 5½-hour preliminary hearing came from Dr. Nathaniel Rodman, a Pathologist at N. C. Memorial Hospital, and Sipp, a local insurance agent and friend of Rinaldi's for the past seven years. Dr. Rodman testified that a private autopsy he performed on Mrs. Rinaldi's body showed that death occurred about 11 a.m. due to suffocation. Sipp testified that he picked Rinaldi up by pre-arrangement about 8:45 a.m. outside Rinaldi's apartment, and that Rinaldi was out of his sight for only a few brief periods between then and the time he and Rinaldi returned to the apartment and found Mrs. Rinaldi. Rinaldi has avowed his innocence throughout the investigation. After being freed, he left for Waterbury to visit his wife's grave. He returned to Chapel Hill Sunday afternoon. Rinaldi was graduated from Georgetown University in 1951. Then he went to work in the CIA. He enlisted in the Army during the Korean conflict in 1953, and came to Chapel Hill when he got out in 1956. A year later he left to teach at the University of Missouri, then he worked for an advertising agency in New York. In 1960 he returned to UNC to get his Ph.D. in English and is scheduled to complete his course work next semester.

Mercy Petition Being Passed

A petition requesting Gov. Sanford to commute the death sentence given a Winston-Salem Negro to life imprisonment is being circulated on the campus, it was announced yesterday afternoon. Charles Heatherly said he is circulating the petition on the behalf of Marion Frank Crawford, 25, convicted of raping and killing an 8-year old Negro girl in Winston-Salem. Heatherly said the prisoner can't afford an appeal to Federal Courts which might reverse the decision of the trial court on the basis of "inflammatory" evidence presented by the prosecution. The State Supreme Court found no error in the original trial. Heatherly said the petition is being circulated by himself and other individuals who are "opposed to capital punishment."

By HUGH STEVENS
Mike Lawler, student body president, said yesterday the Student Government statement of Dec. 20 regarding students arrested in local sit-in demonstrations "has been greatly misunderstood." The student Attorney General will investigate each situation and will dispose of these cases as prescribed by legislative statute," he said. "It is his (the Attorney General's) responsibility to decide whether there is sufficient cause for a hearing." Buzzy Stubbs, student Attorney General, said investigations are being conducted, and indicated that results would be announced "later this week." Lawler said that state papers have used phrases such as "possible penalties as high as expulsion" in connection with the original statement. The Honor Councils do not have the power of expulsion. "These cases will be handled through the normal judicial machinery for investigating an "off-campus" action which may be a violation of the student Campus Code," Lawler said. "This code of conduct has long been applied to both on campus and off-campus student actions." The original statement said that the Attorney General would handle the individual cases after their final disposition by the North Carolina Courts. Stubbs said this would "probably" mean that students with appeals pending would not be considered by the student judiciary. Dean of Student Affairs C. O. Cathey agreed with Lawler's statement, saying "the students will handle the cases as they see fit." "I think they will do a good job," he concluded. The current investigations by the Attorney General's staff will decide whether the cases merit a trial by the appropriate councils. It so, the Men's and Women's Councils will assume their normal responsibilities in trying the students. The original statement, widely misinterpreted in state papers, came from a meeting of student leaders and administration. Lawler said there was general accord on the statement between the two groups. The statement said that cases would go to the student judiciary because the University "cannot condone the willful disobedience of the laws, aside from the merits, demerits, or employment of particular laws."
