CHARLOTTEVILLE, Va.—All the king's horses and all the king's men couldn't put the Tar Heels back together again. At least not when Billy Cunningham fouls out with 12:45 remaining and with only six points and eight rebounds to his name.

That's exactly what happened here last night as lowly Virginia rose up to sink the drowning Tar Heel basketball team, 79-64. It was the third straight time UNC has gone under to an underdog opponent. And it was the fifth defeat in the team's last six games. And it was the seventh ACC loss in what is considered a bad year for the conference. And it wasn't even close.

The Cavaliers, playing without their star forward Chip Conner, all but ran the visiting Carolinians out of the ancient field house. With Mac Caldwell (21), Richard Katstra (16) and Jay Lambiotte (12) taking up the scoring slack, UVA came up with one of its better games and UNC came up with one of its worst.

Virginia shot well and worked the ball well. The Tar Heel did so poorly in these categories that Dean Smith finished the game with a line-up of Pud Hassel, Johnny Yokley, Bill Harrison, Bob Bennett and Artie Katz. The UNC team was beaten even before Cunningham left the game. At the time, the score was 49-38. The rest of the game played itself out.

Charlie Shaffer's jump shots from the corner got the otherwise ragged Tar Heels off to an early lead which was short lived. The Virginians came on strong in the latter part of the first half and held a 38-29 lead at the intermission.

While the Cavalier's 1-2-2 zone was causing Cunningham all kinds of trouble, Shaffer (23 for the game) was hot. He reeled off nine of the first 11 UNC points and 13 of the first 20.

48 Per Cent Of Students Say 'Moderately Liberal'

By PETE WALES

Some 48 per cent of UNC Students consider themselves "moderately liberal" according to a recent student government poll of 133 sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Fall Orientation Chairman To Be Perry McCarty

Perry McCarty, a rising senior from Atlanta, Ga., has been appointed Orientation Chairman for next fall.

A Morehead Scholar from the Westminster Schools, McCarty participated in freshman and sophomore honors programs, is a member of Phi Delta Theta, Phi Eta Sigma, the Men's Honor Council and is a pre-med student.

Thursday night's session of Student Legislature confirmed the appointment. President Lawler remarked, "We are indeed gratified that someone of McCarty's high academic caliber will direct Orientation next fall," said student body president Mike Lawler. "We are confident he will continue the splendid job managed jointly by Archie Davis and Diana Teasdale this past fall."

Tommy Baysden, a member of last year's Orientation Committee, and Bob Wilson, who handled second semester Orientation, will work closely with McCarty.

Interviews for Woman's Orientation Coordinator will be held Wednesday, Feb. 26, from 4-6 p.m. and Thursday Feb. 27, 3-6. Those interested women students should sign up for a time at GM information desk. If, for one reason or another, an applicant cannot be available at these times, please leave name and number on the sign-up sheet.

Interviews for the Orientation Committee will begin March 4; Times will be printed in the DTH.

Another 34 per cent described themselves as "moderately conservative." The remaining 18 per cent were split between liberal and conservative.

The poll, conducted by the State Affairs and Communications Committees, began last fall. Results were tabulated this month. The study, distributed to students all over campus, was designed to poll student opinions on selected campus and political issues.

One-third of those polled said that their political views had changed "from conservative to more liberal" since they entered college. About 30 per cent said their views had not changed at all and 17 per cent said their views had gone "from liberal to more conservative."

Half the students said they were affiliated with the Democratic Party and 29 per cent, the Republican Party. Another 18 per cent said they had no party affiliation.

Asked to give three factors that have influenced their political thinking, 62 per cent answered "increased thinking about political questions." About 34 per cent said "increased independent reading in courses" and "influence of friends."

Only six per cent gave "personal contact with faculty members" as an influence.

On the national scene, six out of ten said they would not favor a federal "public accommodations" law.

On the state gubernatorial race, 52 per cent favored L. Richardson Preyer, 17 per cent were for Dan K. Moore, 14 per cent for I. Beverly Lake and 17 per cent did not answer. No other candidates were listed in the possible answers.

The vast majority of students were unfamiliar with the activities of the UNC chapter of the National Student Association and omitted opinions about it.

About 68 per cent said they thought that Student Legislature should not pass "resolutions concerning political issues not directly related to the campus." The poll was finished before the resolution on the boycott was passed.

Some 57 per cent said they considered the DTH editorial policy more liberal than their own views. About 23 per cent said they agreed with the DTH while six per cent said they were more liberal.

Half the students said the DTH's coverage of student government and campus affairs was "fair" and 23 per cent said it was "very good." Another 17 per cent said the coverage was "poor."

Old, Old Flicks To Be Featured By Film Society

By HENRY McINNIS

Old-time film classics are coming on campus beginning Wednesday night at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall.

The series is presented by the University Film Society and tickets for the spring season cost $4. They are on sale today at Graham Memorial and the "Y" Court.

The list of stars in the series include Gloria Swanson, Jean Harlow, Douglas Fairbanks, Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Anna May Wong and Coleen Moore.

These flicks are rarely seen in today's movie houses.

For tomorrow night, "Gold Diggers of '33" will flood the screen with a famous old Warner musical and exuberant spectacle starring Ginger Rogers, Joan Blondell and Ruby Keeler as chorus cuties who know the Depression score. The New York Times called it "an imaginatively staged, breezy show."

A short subject will also round out the evening. It is entitled "Paris Weekend" and is a delightful satire on the flight of Parisians to the country for an "idyllic" August Sunday. There is no conversation, but none is needed, for montage, music and sound are entertaining in a universal language.

On March 16 "Hell's Angels" is scheduled, directed by the enigmatic Howard Hughes who also guided "The Bosom." Jane Russell, in his daring sex-in-the-barn epic "The Outlaw." The film boasts the Marilyn Monroe of the 1930's, Jean Harlow, who later followed the poison path of death like Monroe, from sun radiation. This is considered her finest and most incandescent screen appearance.

Fulbright To Keynote Carolina Symposium

Cooper Accepts Invitation

By HARRY DELUNG

Senator William Fulbright, generally accepted as Capitol Hill's most influential authority on foreign affairs, will speak here on the first night of the Carolina Symposium.

Fulbright's acceptance for Sunday evening, April 5, was announced yesterday by Chairman Dick Hesse.

The topic of the speech will be "Individual Freedom and Collective Security." The Arkansas Democratic attracted national attention in this area in 1950 when he attacked the "witch hunting" of Sen. Joseph McCarthy.

Senator John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) will speak the following afternoon on the related topic of "Civil Liberties and National Security."

Fulbright stood alone in 1951 as the only Senator voting against the appropriation for McCarthy's investigatory committee.

"Politics U.S.A.," a text used here in introductory political science, identifies him as "one of the leaders in the successful Senate battle to censure Sen. McCarthy." During this period, Fulbright was attacked nationally as a traitor, a "Red skunk," and other abuse.

He now serves a chairman of the highly respected Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and as the senior Senator from Arkansas.

Although in agreement with the United Nations goals for world peace, Fulbright is sometimes pessimistic about its capacity to deal with Cold War problems. He looks to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to take an increased role in economic and cultural unity.

The Senator is noted for his statement that the West is as much to blame for the Berlin problem as the East. Two weeks following this the Berlin Wall was erected.

Rights Stand At UP Meet

The University Party will meet tonight to discuss the position of the party on the civil rights issue.

A panel discussion featuring four party leaders will highlight the program. Harry, DeLung, Don Carson, Don Curtis and Buzzy Stubbs comprise the panel, to be moderated by Jeff Adams, party chairman.

The meeting will be at 8 in Carroll Hall.

"All party members are urged to attend to express their views on this issue," commented Adams. "We must have the opinion of all concerned members before the party can take a stand on this issue."

Playmakers Offer Tickets For Play

Approximately 1500 student tickets for the Carolina Playmakers production of Archibald MacLeish's "J.B." will go on sale in Y-Court tomorrow morning.

These tickets, being released to freshman and sophomore students who are studying the play in English 2 and English 21, are being offered at half price ($1.00). The sale will be continued for a limited time only, and students are urged to purchase their tickets as early as possible.

Students have a choice of the following performances: March 10, 11, 12, 15 (2 performances), and 16. In the event that there is a large demand for these reserved seat tickets, an extra performance will be scheduled for March 17. The March 10 performance is the regular "Student Night" performance, with all seats on a general admission basis, but all other performances offer reserved seats.

"J.B." is being directed by Harry Davis, chairman of the Department of Dramatic Art, and the production will feature David Hooks, a prominent Broadway actor and UNC alumnus, in the title role. Other performers in leading parts are

CHAD MITCHELL TRIO

Court Fails To Docket Sit-In Cases

Persons appearing before this term of Orange County Superior Court in Hillsboro will be required to be present every day of court until their specific case is called, the DTH learned yesterday.

The absence of a specific timetable of cases was confirmed yesterday by the Chapel Hill Police Dept.

These factors place members of the Student body arraigned before the court in somewhat of a quandary.

The University has established attendance requirements which could not be met if, for example, a student of the University had to appear every day of the three-week session before his case was called.

If students choose not to appear, and their case is called, the law requires forfeiture of bond and a possible citation for contempt of court.

A total of 450 cases resulting from recent demonstration incidents here have been transferred from Chapel Hill Recorder's Court to Orange County for jury trial.

Calendared for grand jury action in the regular session are 60 cases involving charges of trespassing, resisting arrest, assault on a female, obstructing traffic, and blocking the sidewalk.

In addition to the 450 cases transferred, transfer is not yet completed on over 500 other sit-in cases.

Of the 450 cases already sent to Superior Court, 197 are charged with resisting arrest, 35 are charged with obstructing the sidewalk, 174 are charged with disorderly conduct, six are charged with assault and battery, 11 are charged with forcible trespass, five charged with obstructing traffic and ten are charged with assault on a female.

Art Fellowships To Be Offered

The UNC Department of Art will award two fellowships in art history at $2,000 each and one $1,000 travelling fellowship in art to departmental students, it was announced Thursday by Dr. Joseph C. Sloane, professor and chairman of the Department of Art.

The fellowships, to start in September, are made possible by a grant awarded to UNC by the Samuel H. Kress Foundation of New York City. The University was the only Southern institution to receive a grant of $10,000 per year for a period of five years from the Kress Foundation for the study of art history.

The Department of Art will use the remaining $5,000 of the grant for tools necessary in the teaching of art history.

The student loan provisions of the NDEA have allowed low-income students to complete their education, through university-administered loan funds. The proposed amendment would raise authorization for the loan funds to $135 million, and Keppel urged that the ceilings for the next year be raised to $150 million. During the past year, almost 600,000 students borrowed money under the loan provisions, and the rate of repayment well exceeded that required by law, according to Keppel.

NDEA: A Great Success

WASHINGTON (CPS)—One of the major pieces of education legislation left to come before Congress this year, the extension of the highly popular National Defense Education Act (NDEA), is expected to sail through the legislature with few obstructions.

Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) sponsor of this year's NDEA amendment, saw a "change in mood" on Capitol Hill in regard to the education crisis in the country. Congress is gaining "a greater awareness of the needs of the space age," she said, citing the three highly significant education bills passed last session.

The NDEA program, now in its sixth year, has proven successful on two counts: (1) giving direct aid to college students by grants and loans and (2) providing an incentive for students to enter the teaching profession. The current amendment attempts to extend both aspects of the program.

Francis Keppel, U.S. Commissioner of Education, testifying for the proposed amendment before the House Education Subcommittee earlier this month reported that results of a recent survey indicate that "youths from low income families, regardless of academic ability, have a much poorer chance of going to college than their classmates from upper income families."

Keppel termed it "shameful" that income is permitted to determine "who shall be educated and who shall not, and, hence, who shall rise to positions of leadership and personal fulfillment and who shall not."

The student loan provisions of the NDEA have allowed low-income students to complete their education, through university-administered loan funds. The proposed amendment would raise authorization for the loan funds to $135 million, and Keppel urged that the ceilings for the next year be raised to $150 million. During the past year, almost 600,000 students borrowed money under the loan provisions, and the rate of repayment well exceeded that required by law, according to Keppel.
