

Letters To The Editors

Lawler

Editors, The Tar Heel:

The Letter of Laszlo Birinyi (Sat., Feb. 15) contains within it a seriously misleading statement. Aside from the fact and importance of whether or not we have Mr. Stubbs or Mike Lawler to thank for the Honor Council's decision charging demonstrators with campus violations, I am interested in clearing up the phrase "Henry Lawler, decided to usurp Mr. Stubbs' power and make the decision himself." Mike Lawler did not usurp the Attorney General's power. The Constitution of the Student Body clearly states, "The Attorney General of the Student Body shall assist and represent the President in the performance of his duties as the President shall direct." Notice the last phrase which gives the President unqualified power over the office of the Attorney General.

There have been in recent letters in reference to Lawler's "boycott" statement and the Student Legislature's consequent action, certain opinions that reflect the average American's misconception of political democracy. These letters raise certain moral and ethical questions. I am referring to the fact that some writers feel that Lawler, and in particular the Legislature, were ethically and politically wrong in their actions.

Despite the fact that I may or may not agree with the opinion expressed in those actions I heartily uphold the Legislature's and the President's right to commit them. I for one do not want a common denominator of the average man as my representative in government. When I voted I chose a man who not only seemed to have political sympathies in agreement with mine, but also for a man who possessed certain qualities, among them leadership and principles.

Contrary to popular opinion the President and the Legislature do not merely represent their constituency, they also represent that continuous and corporate body known as the Student Body. The difference between the two lies in the fact that the constituency exists only in the present, while the Student Body remains as an entity in itself which continues to live while individuals enter and leave it. It exists not only in the present, but in the past and the future also, and all these conditions must be considered in the government of a political body, for if we care not, as Walter Lippmann has said, "for posterity, why should posterity care for us and our contracts and commitments?" Those we elect to office are in a position, either unattainable or undesired by the average student (or citizen), to take a broader view of issues and judge them in consideration of their long range and total effect.

"Our representatives' duty is to their office and not to the electorate, and the electorate's duty is to fill that office." (Lippmann) This conception of democracy is not unrepresentative, for the power to fill the office still remains in the hands of the student and in our case there is the added assurance of the referendum.

Despite Mr. Robinson's opinion (re: Tues., Feb. 18) I do not vote for men who would merely "reflect our thoughts." I voted for men with more character, ability, and conscience than that needed or desired of automatic "yes" men. I did not vote for a machine to record my desires or those of the majority but for thinking, judging, individuals. We do not, it is true, elect men to do our thinking for us. We elect them to two things: to represent us, and to an office with certain duties and responsibilities and that those duties may at times be at variance with the popular will is not only true, it is imperative in order for sound government to exist.

Might does not make right and neither does mass opinion make right. The question of what is right, is of course, an entirely subjective one and the decision as to who is to make that value judgement has already been pre-determined when we elect a man to office.

I should also like to point out that Mike Lawler never hid his views on the subject of equal service to all students. He campaigned on a platform containing a plank which advocated equal service to all students and his views were freely expressed on that subject during the campaign.

I do wish to infer in this letter that Mike Lawler and the Student Legislature should not pay the political cost of their actions. It is only natural and just that they be held politically accountable and pay the consequences. My point is that it is not only their right to act as they did, it is their duty, and they are to be admired for their ability to rise above the petty currents of the time, for it is men like these, able to stand by their convictions, that have led America to her present greatness. Liberalism

Editors, The Tar Heel.

Undoubtedly you must admit to yourselves that the present board of the Daily TAR HEEL is committed to liberalism. Being fortunate enough to read this from the editorials to the columns to the Herblock cartoons.

While I do not question your right to express your leftist viewpoint, I would submit that the Tar Heel has a responsibility to give space to conservatives other than the medium I am now using.

In the name of justice, fair play, equality, and all the sundry cliches the left inundates the nation with, a conservative columnist and/or cartoonist should be added to your pages. I hope you live up to your words in practice as well as spirit.

Eggs!

Editors, The Tar Heel:

May I suggest that instead of printing the prices on the egg market, you resume a practice neglected for some while: printing the WUNC (FM) program schedule. If not of interest to anyone, at least it would be more so than your latest resort to fill up space.

DRILL TEAM HERE

Five crack Air Force ROTC drill teams will compete here for an opportunity to participate in the Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D. C. this spring.

Units from UNC, Duke, NC State, North Carolina A&T and East Carolina College will compete on the floor of Woollen Gym today.

Each drill team will be composed of 16 to 24 men competing in a three-phase competition. The first phase will be an inspection conducted by officers of the U. S. Air Force. The second phase, regulation drill, is a series of maneuvers taken from the Air Force drill manual. During the regulation drill, teams are judged on sequence and time.

Yack Interviews

Interviews for Editor and Business Manager of the Yackety Yack will be held Tuesday.

The interviews will be conducted in the Grail Room at 4:30 p.m. Applicants should sign their names to a sign-up sheet posted on the door of the interview room at 4.

Past yearbook experience is necessary, preferably with the Yack.

Legislature

All speakers said student aid in the various programs would be greatly appreciated.

In the legislative actions of the evening, a Legislature-approved bill to provide $200 to WUNC Radio was vetoed by President Lawler because of the precedent it might set and the question of its constitutionality. The body sustained the veto.

A bill to appropriate $500 to the Mock Political Convention was passed, as was one to appropriate $600 to the Executive Branch of Student Government.

A resolution urging students to attend "Careers for Carolina" was passed, and another to aid excavations in England was defeated.

A bill to amend the by-laws of the publications Board was passed.

work experience is required for higher classifications. In addition, tests are administered to all applicants for these jobs. The tests may be taken at any of the employment Security Offices or at the University Testing Service in Chapel Hill. Although the tests are not competitive, the majority of the departments heads and other supervisors who make the final selection of their employees are most reluctant to employ candidates whose test scores fall below the average range.

Now for a few facts. Over the past two years only 45 Negroes have made applications for these types of jobs. Of the 45 Negroes who applied for these jobs, only eight took the required tests. Seven of these eight were referred for interviews. Four were offered jobs but they accepted employment elsewhere; unlike nurses and technicians in the hospital, the number of qualified applicants who apply for these jobs is quite limited. Thus currently only 17 Negroes are employed in Clerical and Office positions. Facts are available on carpenters an dother job classifications as well as about each applicant.

I repeat, discrimination in employment is contrary to University policy. If there is evidence of a violation, corrective action will be taken. Until such evidence is produced, I hope those persons charged with the responsibility for hiring will enjoy the presumption that they are fulfilling their responsibilities in accord with University policy.

The Chancellor's speech was met with a single question posed by an unidentified faculty member—"Has a Negro ever applied for a position at the University?"

He replied, "Not to my knowledge." He further pointed out that the Chancellor is not the one who does the hiring, that that is left for the most part to the individual departments.

Coed Gets Probation

The Woman's Council placed a coed on indefinite probation Thursday night after she was found guilty of violating both a woman's residence rule and the Honor Code.

The student was charged with being out of her dormitory without permission making her approximately nine hours late and lying to her dormitory officials.

The coed plead guilty to both charges.

Lentz And Moore Represent Carolina

Ellen Lentz, a sophomore, and Janice Moore, a senior, are representing UNC on Mademoiselle's College Board.

The Board is composed of students from both the U. S. and abroad who report news of their colleges to Mademoiselle. They are also eligible to compete for the Guest Editorship that will be awarded in May.
