graduate courses in History.
 When the year was up he traveled to Russia, the Middle East and Africa, in connection with organization and information tasks for NSA and Sen. Humphrey.

During that 1958 summer he witnessed the oppression in South Africa that later became the subject of "Brutal Mandate." Returning to the U. S. that fall, he went to work for Sen. Humphrey as foreign policy assistant. He returned to South Africa for several of the tribes at the United Nations on conditions there. The fall of 1959 he began practicing law in New York City. He also got involved in reform Democratic politics there, and ended up as campaign chairman for Congressman Ryan.

During the summer of 1960 he was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in Los Angeles. That fall he made a speech about South Africa at the Overseas Press Club and the MacMillan Company commissioned him to write his book. He completed the book in the spring of 1961, then was asked to be assistant Dean of Men and an instructor at Stanford University in Palo Alto, California. In the spring of 1962 he was offered his present position, assistant Professor in Social Studies, at N. C. State. He returned to Raleigh that fall.

The spring of 1963 he applied for a leave of absence to take an administrative post with the Peace Corps. But they needed someone for the job sooner than Lowenstein could get there, so he withdrew from the offer. His teaching position had already been filled for the fall, so he kept his leave of absence and began to think of writing a book about the U. S. racial situation. "I had taken part in demonstrations in Raleigh that spring," he says, "and there was a lot I wanted to try and say about what was happening with race relations in general. There's a chasm growing between whites and Negroes all over the country."

But as the summer vacation opened, Lowenstein got a call from a confederation of civil rights groups in Mississippi. "They said they needed a lawyer. The only white lawyer who'd take a civil rights case had been run out of the state. So I went, expecting to stay only about three or four days."

"It kind of grew into this mock campaign for Aaron Henry for governor. During this campaign erroneous headlines appeared in North Carolina newspapers about Lowenstein 'jumping bond.'"

What actually happened is that Lowenstein and two other campaign workers were going into a hotel in Clarksdale, Miss., to get rooms for the night. "While we were crossing the street, the police—who had followed us as they always did—stopped us and said we were under arrest for violating the curfew."

"I asked them how we were supposed to get from our car to the hotel without crossing the street. They took us to jail anyway."

"The attorney said just forget the whole affair as if it was a traffic ticket. The fine has been paid. Just forget it."

"So I did. Somehow that got reported as me jumping bond, but I didn't."

In November of last year, the mock campaign behind him, Lowenstein went to Spain.

"I'd been working with the non-Communist underground there since about 1959," he says. "I'd been there three times before."

"Franco is going out soon and we're trying to get the non-Communist, non-fascist organization so they're prepared to take over."

Lowenstein returned to the U.

 S. in December and resumed his teaching position at N. C. State this spring.
 In his numerous speaking engagements he is helping to publicize a program aimed at helping Mississippi Negroes this summer. It involves over a thousand students, teachers, lawyers and ministers spending part or all of the summer there, engaged in voter registration, educational and community center projects.
 He is careful to point out that this is being done at the request of civil rights groups in Mississippi.

Chevrolet will go to any length to make you happy Things have changed a lot since a Chevy was only a Chevy. Especially your ideas of what you want a Chevy to be.
 So now you have the Jet-smooth Chevrolet—17 1/2 feet of pure luxury, bumper to bumper. The size makes it a luxury car. But not the price.
 Or you can choose the thrifty Chevy II, a 15 1/4-foot family car with all kinds of passenger and luggage space.
 This year, your choice might be the new 16-foot-plus Chevelle, sized to fit nicely between Chevrolet and Chevy II (and between parking meters, with five whole feet left over).
 Then, too, there's the sporty 15-foot Corvair, so right for so many people (you girls, in particular) that we've never touched an inch of it. And finally, Corvette—still 14 1/2 feet and still too much for any true sports-car lover to say no to.
 The long and short of it is, you don't have to go to any length to find exactly the kind of car you want. Just see the five different lines of cars at your Chevrolet dealer's.
