AT SYMPOSIUM

Knight, Graham On Panel Meet

By ALEX McFAYDEN

Dr. Frank P. Graham and Douglas M. Knight will hold a panel discussion on "Education's Responses to the Cold War" for the Carolina Symposium, Tuesday, April 7.

Graham, a past president of the University of North Carolina, is presently United Nations Mediator. Dr. Knight is the president of Duke University and has been active in several international conferences, qualifying both men as spokesmen in political and educational fields.

Dr. Knight received his A.B., M.A., and Ph.D. from Yale University where he taught English for several years. In 1953 Dr. Knight left Yale to become President of Lawrence College in Wisconsin, then became president of Duke University.

An outstanding educator—both young and active—Dr. Knight has been a member of numerous boards and delegations. He was one of three U. S. delegates to the SEATO Conference of Asian University Presidents in Pakistan and is presently a member of the board of trustees of Education and World Affairs, an organization to promote cooperation and communication among educational institutions in this country and abroad. He is also a member of the board for the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Dr. Graham has been an active educator, advisor and mediator. In the field of education he is most noted for his efforts in consolidating UNC while president from 1930-49.

During World War II he was a member of the National War Labor Board serving as an advisor on several committees. In 1946 he was a representative in the Dutch-Indonesian dispute. After resigning as president of the University, he became a senator from North Carolina.

At present Dr. Graham is the United Nations representative to India and Pakistan and has served as a mediator in several international disputes.

Blanchard Not Guilty, Says Lawyer

HILLSBORO—Gary Blanchard, DTH co-editor, yesterday issued a statement clarifying his position on the contempt ruling he received in the Orange County Superior Court here Wednesday.

Blanchard issued the statement shortly after his attorney, Barry Winston, was seen following Judge Raymond Mallard out of the courtroom in the direction of the judge's chambers.

The complete statement:

"My attorney, Barry Winston, has assured me that there is absolutely no question left open in connection with my contempt hearing. He assures me that I was not found to be in contempt

Council Acquits One Reprimands One Thursday

One student was found innocent and another received official reprimand for an Honor Code violation in Men's Council trials Thursday night.

In the first case, the defendant was charged with an Honor Code violation for allegedly charging a series of phone calls to someone else's number.

The student had moved out of the apartment where the phone was located. The phone and the apartment were still in the name of his former roommate.

He told the Council that he had continued to charge his calls to his former number thinking that the telephone company would bill him for them. He and his roommate had asked that the phone be disconnected, but the telephone company had not done so.

The Council decided that he had not intended to deceive the company and found him innocent.

In the second case, a student was found guilty of lying when he gave a false name to a campus policeman.

The defendant's car had broken down on campus and the policeman had approached him and asked him his name. The student gave a false name.

The Council decided that there had been no intent to lie, but that the student had merely become angry with the policeman. It felt, from the evidence, that the policeman and the student had antagonized one another.

The student was found guilty but was given a lenient sentence of official reprimand. The Council felt that the violation had been more a question of gentlemanly conduct than serious lying.

Salinger Wants Senate

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Pierre Salinger former White House press secretary, Friday formally entered the race for the Democratic nomination as U.S. senator from California on a self-inspired "draft."

"I could tell you that I have succumbed to the urging of my many friends," Salinger told a news conference in his native San Francisco, "but the truth is that this candidacy is a genuine draft—a draft inspired by the candidate himself."

Salinger entered the race against incumbent Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif.) who underwent brain surgery last year, and Alan Cranston, California state controller, who has the backing of the 70,000-member California Democratic Council. San Francisco financier Leland Kaiser, actor George Murphy and Fred Hall, former governor of Kansas, are the announced Republican candidates.

Three other candidates also have filed for the Democratic nomination. They are pension promoter George McLain, Walter R. Buck Buchanan of Los Angeles and Harold E. Fields of Orange, Calif.

The portly Salinger, who served as press secretary to the late President John F. Kennedy and stayed on in the same post under President Johnson, said he was emphasizing his experience in Washington in his bid for a senate seat.

"My candidacy is based on the feeling that I can better serve the interests of California than any of the announced candidates," he said.

He announced his candidacy on the last possible day of filing for the office.

Because of the lateness of his candidacy, he admitted, many of his friends already were committed either to Engle or Cranston. Therefore, he said, he would not try to change these commitments, but would mount a "volunteer campaign" and appeal directly to the people.

MRC Names Jim Fullwood President

James Fullwood, former Chairman of the Men's Residence Council Court, was elected president of the MRC Wednesday night by acclamation.

Other officers are Bob Payton, vice-president; Ron Hendron, secretary; Sonny Pepper, treasurer; Larry Coleman, chairman of the Court; and Jerry Droze, vice-chairman of the Court.

Fullwood called for a more beneficial program for next year by increasing the number of activities that directly involve male residents.

Gordon Appell announced plans for a combo party which will be held tonight and another scheduled for April 1. The parties are co-sponsored by the MRC and the Carolina Women's Council.

In other business, a report on the Residence College System was heard.

MONSOON—Jean Renfrow, Campus Chest Carnival co-chairman, stands alone on the intramural field yesterday afternoon as the rains came down. The rides, scheduled to open last night, were cancelled as the field turned into wet slop. The Carnival will now open this afternoon at 1. The rides have been held over an extra day and will also be in operation Sunday afternoon.

Carnival Ends Today With Rides, Booths

The final day of the Campus Chest Carnival, complete with rides, games and political fun, will feature an assortment of things to do—that is, if the weatherman cooperates.

An enterprising student with money can buy the time of an East Cobb coed, if he happens to choose her legs from an assortment of others behind a curtain.

Some fortunate male will have the chance of showing the Carnival beauty queen a good time with all expenses paid if she happens to draw his lot from hundreds of others.

The queen of the Carnival will actually be the queen of the Var-

SAE Found Guilty Of Bus Damage

One SAE pledge was put on probation and four received official reprimands for vandalism aboard a Trailways bus in Inter-Fraternity Court trials Thursday night.

The other 16 pledges aboard the bus were found innocent. In other cases, a Phi Kappa Sigma brother was found guilty of a violation of the IFC visiting agreement and was given an official reprimand. His house was put on general probation until June.

The defendant had had a date in the Phi Kappa Sigma house after the IFC's prescribed closing hours.

In the SAE pledge case, the men involved were tried individually under IFC Court procedure regulations which state:

"That the Court shall try any person who participates in 'any disorderly conduct or any activity violating the mutual interests of all fraternities.'"

"The Court felt that the destructive activity which took place (on the bus) was not a collective action, but was rather the action of a few individuals," said Ned Martin, acting chairman of the Court.

"Due to the nature of the charge of the Attorney-General's Staff, the members of the SAE pledge class were tried as individuals and not as a group."

BULLETIN

Betty Ward, co-chairman of the Campus Chest, announced yesterday that the Campus Chest Carnival would continue through Sunday. The inclement weather on Friday was the reason for the extension of the Carnival.

Big Time!

It's Craige Weekend!

Yes, social all-stars, come to the open weekend at Craige Residence Hall. There will be a comedy Saturday night and a Hootenanny Sunday afternoon, and it's all open to the public.

The Casuals will play from 8:30-12:30 p.m., and refreshments will be served. Sunday afternoon a group of folksingers—The Higrants—will perform. Girls from the Nurses Dorm will be on hand for this.

The Higrants are a combination of two groups—the Migrants and the Highlanders. In addition, several groups from Craige will play.

SL HOLDS SESSION

Student Legislature approved a report from the Interfraternity Council Court regarding changes in its penalties system and passed a bill appropriating $250 to the Women's Residence Council Wednesday night.

The IFC report was passed after minor changes were made. One clause was stricken when Rep. Arthur Hays (SP) questioned its constitutionality.

The WRC appropriations bill was passed to provide funds for the printing of brochures and other literature about its activities.

Legislature adjourned early after lack of quorum was declared.

PHARMACY OPEN HOUSE

A demonstration of how pills are manufactured, displays of educational and research programs in the drug field and tours of new school facilities will highlight an open house today at the University School of Pharmacy.

sity-Alumni Game, who will have her name announced at the game earlier in the afternoon.

Penn Premier Shows, the largest traveling carnival in the East, will provide rides for the day, and will feature a special mystery ride from Germany. All rides will cost 25c.

Fifty booths sponsored by clubs, residence halls, sororities and fraternities will provide assorted side entertainment at 10c a throw.

For those with sadistic tendencies, there will be numerous fraternity-sponsored booths which will allow the customer to plaster pathetic pledges with various types of goo.

For the politically minded, the Young Democratic Club will sponsor donkey rides and local Richardson Preyer supporters will sponsor a "Pitch for Preyer" booth.

Supporters of Judge Dan K. Moore, one of Preyer's opponents, will also be on hand with a booth.

For the mentally disturbed, Nurses Dorm and Ehringhaus Residence Hall will sponsor a "Lucy Psychiatric Booth."

For the hardened criminal, there will be a jail booth which for commitment costs and the youthful incorrigible for his room.

For the plain old grubby individual there will be a greased pig race.

Carnival Planner Jim Light has been very pleased with the variety and originality of this year's booths.

"I think we have a lot more original ideas this year than I've seen in the last two years," he said. "We have more amusements for all ages."

The Carnival's hours will be 1-7 p.m. Bring money.

Blackwell And Clotfelter Awarded Hearst Prizes

Mickey Blackwell, DTH reporter, and Jim Clotfelter, former DTH co-editor, won eighth and eighteenth places respectively in last month's William Randolph Hearst spot news competition for stories on the same event.

The two wrote on the sit-down demonstrations in Chapel Hill Feb. 8. Blackwell's story appeared in the Charlotte Observer and Clotfelter's in the Durham Morning Herald.

Blackwell, a senior from Gastonia, won a $100 scholarship for his entry.

Clotfelter, a junior from Atlanta, received a scroll. He won a $200 scholarship last year for an editorial writing competition while he was co-editor of the DTH.

Spaulding Sentenced For Check

Ben Spaulding yesterday was given a suspended sentence for giving the Orange County Superior Court a worthless check.

Judge Raymond S. Mallard gave the Carrboro Negro, a former student at UNC, a four-month sentence, suspended for five years.

The check had been used for bail of several sit-in demonstrators, and had been drawn on the account of the Congress of Racial Equality.

Spaulding pleaded nolo contendere, claiming someone had made out a bogus check on the account and exhausted the funds without his knowledge.

The suspended sentence means that Spaulding may be sent to the roads at any time a Superior Court judge desires within five years.

ZAP!

A fifty-foot long nuclear missile will be in Y-Court for five days, beginning April 4.

The Air Force defense weapon is part of the displays that will decorate the campus during the week of the 1965 Carolina Symposium.

"Arms and the Man" is the topic of this year's Symposium, and major discussion will deal with the influence of the Cold War on American society and culture.

The missile, identified as the BOMARC surface-to-air interceptor, is used to attack enemy air craft during a possible invasion. It has a range of 500 miles, and six squadrons of such missiles can provide formidable air defense for the entire continental United States.

During its visit to Y-Court, the BOMARC will stand nearly upright. It will have a wing-span of 18 feet and weight of 15,000 lbs.

Wynn Gets 90-Day Sentence

By JEFFREY DICK

HILLSBORO — Judge Raymond B. Mallard yesterday handed down 90-day road sentences to two college professors convicted of trespass. One of the professors, Dr. William Wynn, is an associate professor of psychology here at UNC. A third professor received a $50 fine. All appealed and were released on bond.

The trio, Dr. Wynn, and Drs. Frederick Herzog and Robert Osborn of Duke University, received their sentences after a 30-minute lecture by the judge. Mallard refused to sentence Herzog to imprisonment because he "did not have the same attitude man motives" that Wynn and Osborn held.

Just before Mallard began the sentencing, he gave each defendant an opportunity to state whether or not he would again deliberately violate the state trespass law.

Wynn and Osborn answered they might do the same thing again under certain circumstances because of moral and theological convictions.

Both Wynn and Osborn said their judgments were based upon the will of God.

Herzog, however, answered: "I have done it once and I have seen the consequences. I can not again do the same thing."

Mallard then began to read his judgment.

"This may seem like a lecture to you, but it is not. I worship the same Christ you do. I have been taught from my youth up to now that Christians and all Christians in a democracy are the best citizens and should so conduct themselves...

"We have spent three weeks here in this court. How many thousands of dollars it costs the county, I don't know. You gentlemen have become part of the problem instead of an answer to it."

Mallard criticized Wynn and Osborn for their expressed convictions that they might again deliberately violate a trespass law again.

"If everyone took it upon himself to determine the laws that they would obey, we would have anarchy. In a democracy, I repeat, the Christian should be the best citizens. We have that attitude here, but two of you still reserve the right to violate the law, still inferring that should you feel that some law should be violated, you have the right to do it."

Mallard criticized Osborn for
