Freshman Camp Dates Set

Freshman Camp which first introduces many UNC students to the "Carolina Way of Life" will be held this year from September 10-13 at Camp New Hope.

Applications are now being accepted for camp counselors. Anyone interested in applying should attend a special meeting Monday night at 7 on the second floor of Y-Court. Some 30 positions ranging from cabin counselors to athletic directors are open.

The camp is held each September just prior to the regular freshman orientation. The camp centers on informal discussions among the students and leaders.

Also several outside speakers address the camp and later lead in informal discussions. Other activities, including athletic paricipation, center around a freshman's life at Carolina.

Speaking about the camp, Erky Duff said, "We feel that Freshman Camp gives the new student a basis for his four year stay here.

"The companionship and fellowship at Freshman Camp is something that most of the fellows never forget. There are some life-long friendships made at Freshman Camp."

Duff said that the camp laid the frame-work for the regular orientation period, "but it gives the young man a better idea of what's going on around him in his new environment," said Duff.

"Individual thought and expression usually develops at Freshman Camp," Duff said. "This is because the new students are urged to participate in the information discussion, and most of them do."

Fall Orientation Counselors Picked

The first training session for next fall's Orientation counselors will be held Tuesday, April 21, in Gerrard Hall at 9 p.m. This will be a joint meeting of both men and woman counselors. Selected student leaders will speak on academics and student government — emphasizing what the counselor should stress with his group about these two important areas.

Orientation Chairman Perry McCarty issued this statement: "I want to say a sincere word of thanks for all those who took the time to come by for an interview. The response on the final interviewing day was simply overwhelming. Again, a hearty thank-you to those involved from the entire Orientation Committee."

Att-Gen Staff Interviews To Be Held

Positions will be filled this week for men and women's positions on the Attorney-General's Staff for next year.

There are approximately 50 positions open, but since a heavy influx of applicants has occurred in the past, interested students are advised to sign up early at the GM desk.

The staff is divided into four separate divisions, including the Men's Council, the Women's Council, the Men's Residence Council Court and the Interfraternity Council Court. Each person selected will work with one of these councils.

Each interview will take about five minutes, and will be held on the following days: Monday, 5-6 p.m.; Tuesday, 4-6; Wednesday, 4-6; Thursday, 4-6; and Friday, 4-6.

Students seeking these positions should make an appointment at the GM information desk. Then they should fill out an application form which can be picked up outside the Council Room on GM's second floor.

TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

The director of the Graham Memorial Student Union at the University, Howard Henry, will attend the annual conference of the Association of College Unions to be held at Indiana University at Bloomington, Indiana April 19-22.

Tone Kills 2 Birds With One Stone

By WILLIAM M. HARDY

"Well, I just couldn't resist an opportunity to come down to Chapel Hill and spend a pleasant week with my son, Pat."

The speaker was Franchot Tone, one of America's most distinguished actors, and the statement was in response to a query as to his presence on the UNC campus. The quick roguish smile which was so familiar to moviegoers during the 30's and 40's hinted that there was more to his presence than a family excursion.

He went on, "Of course, since I've been here, I've been wearing out the pavement between the Carolina Inn and Swain Hall, and the only chance I've had to see Pat is during meals."

The occasion of Tone's visit to Chapel Hill was his appearance as guest star in a 90-minute television show which was being produced by the Department of Radio, Television and Motion Pictures commemorating the 400th anniversary of the birth of Shakespeare. The show, entitled "Shakespeare—A Portrait" will be shown on WUNC-TV, Channel 4, Thursday, April 23, at 8 p.m.

Young Pat Tone is an undergraduate at the University. He is a handsome, husky boy whose interests range from acting (he has appeared in several play-maker productions) to athletics (he is currently a member of the Carolina track squad specializing in the javelin).

Earlier this year, Dr. Wesley Wallace, Chairman of the Department, contacted Franchot Tone about the possibility of his participating in the Shakespeare show. He accepted, and this past week the show was being taped in the new studios of the department. Appearing with Tone are British actor and actress, Eric Salmon, a visiting lecturer at the University, and Janet Crowder. The show was directed by D. John S. Clayton.

Tone's reaction to the University and the television facilities was very enthusiastic. He expressed himself as being impressed by the high quality of the RTVMP students who made up the entire production crew for the show.

He is an actor who has an obvious love for his work. Asked how he became an actor, he grinned and said that it was "just one of those things that happened."

"I was exposed to the old silent movies," he explained, "and I also had the opportunity of seeing a number of stage plays. After I would see a picture or a play, I used to go home and stand in front of a mirror and act out scenes for myself."

His career has spanned almost forty years and includes work on the stage, in motion pictures and in television. During the 30's and 40's, he was one of Hollywood's most popular leading men. Before going to Hollywood, he was a member of the famous Group Theatre which included such great names as Elia Kazan, Luther Adler, and the late John Garfield. In recent years, he has made his home in New York, although he continues to make an occasional film. He will be remembered for his portrayal of the President in "Advise and Consent." He is a member of the Actors Studio Theatre, and, immediately following his departure from Chapel Hill, he is reporting for rehearsals in a forthcoming production of this group.

Asked about his preference of media as an actor, he shrugged and said, "There isn't any real preference. Nowadays, an actor works in all the media. There are differences, of course. The stage actor must act with his whole body because the audience always sees him that way. In films and, to a large extent in television, the acting is in his eyes."

The call was out for the actors to stand by for a final dress rehearsal of "Shakespeare—A Portrait," and Tone excused himself. A final question had to do with the possibility of Pat's becoming an actor.

"Who knows?" he smiled. "He seems to have the bug, but he may come to his senses."

There was something about the way he said it that hinted he would not be sorry to see his son go the same route of the father. After all, by his own admission, he has found a full and complete life in acting, and he went out for the final rehearsal with an air of confidence and satisfaction which indicated he was doing the thing he loved best.

During the treatment, Dr. Speers and his assistants do not respond to the children's abnormal behavior requests, but instead encourage the children to conform to normal means of communication when they need assistance or attention.

"By our failure to respond to the bizarre communication, and only responding to more normal behavior requests," says Dr. Speers, "the child learns more acceptable behavior patterns."
