Mrs. Kennedy To Attend At Kenan

Kennedy Library Service May 17

By HUGH STEVENS
UNC students will play a large part in the huge memorial service for John F. Kennedy set for Kenan Stadium on Sunday, May 17.

The service, which will feature a tribute by Billy Graham and a message from Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, is expected to attract thousands of North Carolinians at $10 per person. The proceeds will be donated to the Kennedy Library in Massachusetts.

The state has pledged more than $230,000 for the library, but leaders of the project are hoping for a much higher figure, perhaps as much as $500,000.

Ray Farris, former football star and Senior Class president at Carolina, is leading the ticket sale campaign on campus. "Every state has undertaken some project designed to honor the late President," Farris said, "but ours is by far the most ambitious. Mrs. Kennedy has called this her favorite project."

Counties Have Quotas

Farris said that county chairmen have been appointed throughout the state, and every county has a quota based on population, retail sales, and distance from Chapel Hill.

"We hope to have the stadium filled for this service," he said. "A color movie will be made and sent to the library."

"This University was the first to award President Kennedy an honorary degree, and one of the few at which he made an address," Farris continued. "We hope to sell a number of tickets to dorms, fraternities, and similar groups on campus in order that the students will be well represented at the service."

Farris announced the following student appointments to handle campus ticket sales: Cris Waterman, women's residence halls and sororities; Pete Range, men's residence halls; Grant Wheeler, fraternities; and Subir Roy, special sales in Y-Court.

"The majority of the undergraduate population will be contacted by these people," he said. "Graduates, faculty members and others can purchase tickets at Y-Court."

Fraternity Sales Urged

Fraternities, sororities, and other groups will be urged to purchase two or three tickets each and select members to represent them at the service, Farris indicated.

SP Says Caucus First

The Student Party floorleader will be required to call for any proposed bills in caucus, it was ruled Wednesday night at the Student Party's first meeting since spring elections.

Reaction among party members over the method in which the controversial referendum bill was introduced in legislature caused the action. The bill had not been discussed in caucus, and a large number of SP legislators were unaware that it was to be introduced.

The referendum bill, which would direct the Elections Board to conduct a campus-wide opinion vote on the controversial boycott issue, was a campaign issue during the spring elections. The University Party attempted to pass a similar bill in the final session before elections, but could not get enough votes to suspend the rules and get it passed.

Paul Dickson was reelected party chairman, and Larry Ford was again named vice-chairman. Other officers were Ann Belcher, secretary; Dan Stoddard, treasurer; and John Brennan, sergeant-at-arms. All were unopposed.

Elected to vacant seats on the SP Advisory Board were Juan Carvajal, Dave Rendleman and Jim Johnson, who defeated Suzy Sterling, Steve Hockfield and Alvin Tyndall. All were elected for one-year terms.

Arthur Hays gave the legislative report, and Ford the treasurer's report in the absence of Jeff Davis, former SP treasurer.

A list of all contributors to the fund will be given to Mrs. Kennedy and the library.

All ticket purchasers will be eligible to bring a child under 15 with them free of charge.

Appearing on the program with Dr. Graham and Mrs. Kennedy will be Governor Terry Sanford and Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges.

Hugh Morton of Wilmington is chairman for the state drive. Dr. William C. Friday, University president, is a member of the state committee, along with a number of other state figures.

The members of the committee, in a recent press release, expressed their desire for the service to be a "living memorial" to Mr. Kennedy, and thus of greater significance than the renaming of a bridge or structure, or some similar project.

Spearmen Issues Statement

Bob Spearman, student body president, yesterday issued a statement urging all UNC students to participate in this tribute to "a great American."

"It was in Kenan Stadium only a year and a half ago that President Kennedy made a major address and received an honorary degree from our University," he said. "It is particularly appropriate that he be honored on our campus this spring by the people of North Carolina."

Attacks Prayer Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Roman Catholic Bishop Fulton J. Sheen today criticized the Supreme Court ruling on prayer in schools, saying the decision should be a responsibility of Congress.

In testimony before the House Judiciary Committee, Sheen said the theory that the use of prayers was an effort to eliminate the separation of church and state was a "myth." Neither the Catholic, nor the Protestant churches in the United States want an established religion, Sheen said.

Other congressional news. Pay Raise: The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee today approved a new $512 million federal pay bill. But the bill called for pay raises of $7,500 for congressmen rather than $10,000 as proposed earlier. The bill would also provide salary hikes for workers in the three branches of government, including postal workers,

L. J. Phipps Named To Local Recorder's Court Judgeship

L. J. Phipps, former Orange County representative to the N. C. General Assembly, was named by the Chapel Hill Board of Aldermen yesterday to the judgeship of Chapel Hill Recorder's Court.

Phipps will serve out the final year in a two-year term of Judge William Stewart, who resigned recently in order to devote more time to his law practice.

Stewart left the elective post after serving for 13 years.

Phipps is currently State Commander of the American Legion, and served as judge of the Orange County Recorder's Court in Hillsboro for 17 years.

The names of Phipps and local attorney Robert Cooper were submitted to the full Board of Aldermen by a special three-man committee. The Board deadlocked 3-3 on the decision, and Mayor Sandy McClamroch cast the deciding vote in Phipps' favor.

The special committee had originally considered all available attorneys in the area. They pared the list down on the basis of experience and interest in the position.

The Recorder's Court has two weekly sessions, one of which deals only with traffic violations. The other hears minor criminal and civil cases, including trespassing and similar misdemeanors. All persons arrested in recent civil rights protests appeared first before the Recorder's Court.

See You At Library On Saturday Night!

The Undergraduate Library will continue to stay open on Saturday nights after a successful three week experiment.

The hours have now been extended until midnight every night of the week, including Sunday.

The experiment began as a project of the University Party Campus Action Board to see if a significant number of students would use the Undergraduate Library and Newspaper Room on Saturday night.

It started April 11 after being delayed one week by a temporary staffing problem.

"This many people in the library on Saturday nights surprised us," said Undergraduate Librarian William A. Pease.

The number of students "certainly jolts us to seriously consider very long opening hours for our new undergraduate building," he said.

The average number of people in the two rooms over the last three Saturdays has been 72 at 9 p.m. and 38 at 11 p.m.

"It seems to us, this is a clear mandate to keep the rooms (UL and Newspaper Room) open on Saturday nights," said Pease.

Performed At Jubilee

Who And What Are The Sinfonians??

By DAVID PRATHER

Direct from an appearance, as the cliché goes, at Graham Memorial during Jubilee weekend, are the Sinfonians.

Who and what are they?

The Sinfonians, named for the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia musical fraternity, are a 15-piece jazz orchestra, for those of you who weren't among the 150 catching their Sunday night Petite Musicale performance.

The membership is composed of Carolina collegiates: graduates and undergraduates, Phi Mu Alpha members and non-members. There are seven North Carolina residents in the group and the others range from Vancouver, British Columbia to Miami, Florida.

The group has been around for a long time, but the Jubilee concert was their first appearance at a campus function this year. Last year the group was the private industry of Sto Fox, now graduated.

The group reassembled this year and became connected with the fraternity, which in turn gave them a grant to buy new equipment. In reorganizing the band, they hoped to achieve a jazz sound similar to the Duke Ambassadors.

Keith McClelland, the pianist, is also the musical director of the group. He, a sophomore, and Errol Gay, a graduate student, do most of the original arrangements for the group.

McClelland got the part in the Jubilee program for the band when he found that the Petite Musicale had an open date.

"We wanted the part for two reasons," McClelland said. "We felt we had an organization equal to or better than the Ambassadors, and we thought there should be a Carolina group participating in Jubilee.

"Now that we are affiliated with the fraternity, we feel that many of the problems of running such a large band will be alleviated and that we will be more capable of participating in campus projects.

"As for future work," McClelland said, "we are assured of a part in next year's Petite Musicale. We also want a part in the Fine Arts Festival next spring and more UNC engagements next year."

Eight Students To Participate As State Interns

Accepting Gov. Terry Sanford's challenge "to take a more active role in the governmental affairs of the state," eight UNC students will participate in the 1964 North Carolina Summer Internship Program in State Government.

Bringing fresh ideas and a capacity for hard work to their assignments in state agencies, the eight from UNC will be joined by 16 other college students. All participants must have completed at least two years of college and are either attending North Carolina schools or are North Carolina residents studying at out-of-state institutions.

UNC students going to Raleigh this summer for an 11-week internship in state government include: Vance Barron, Jr., junior, Chapel Hill; Linda Cogdill, senior, Asheville; Robert Lee Griffin, junior, New London; Harold Martin Lancaster, junior, Goldsboro; Michael Henry Lawler, senior, Chapel Hill; Elmer Oettinger, III, senior, Chapel Hill; Robert Worthington Spearman, junior, Chapel Hill; and Hugh Stevens, Jr., junior, Burlington.

The program, now in its second year, is designed not only to appeal to students who may be interested in state government as a career, but also to those who, while planning to become businessmen, teachers or members of professions, "desire to participate fully in the political and civic life of the state." It is hoped that this program will help "develop the quality of leadership which will be demanded if North Carolina is to forge ahead."

The interns completed extensive applications as well as interviews with the six-member Selections Committee at the Institute of Government before receiving letters of appointment from Gov. Sanford.

Specific assignment of interns to positions with the various state departments will be announced this month. During April each intern was interviewed by five or more of the participating agencies.

The Internship Program is financed by the cooperating agencies and coordinated by the office of the Governor. After one week of orientation in N. C. history and government, the interns will begin earning $75 a week for their work on special governmental research projects and/or as administrative assistants. Assignments will begin June 15 and continue through August 21.

'I Seed' Said The Blind Man

By JOHNNY APPLE

We've been saying all along that the United States Foreign Aid Program is a pretty seedy operation.

Now they've gone and proved it for us.

The American Christian Rural Overseas Program has distributed over 50,000 packages of carrot seeds to the development of the republic of Haiti this year.

"We seed the problem and we always Haiti to let a thing like that go unsolved," an official was quoted as saying.

The Sinfonians Perform At Jubilee

Friday On Education

By MICKEY BLACKWELL

When you want to talk about growing tobacco, you find a tobacco farmer. When you want to talk about education, you go to Bill Friday.

As president of the three-fold Consolidated University of North Carolina, Bill Friday serves as one of the State's foremost authorities on education.

In reviewing his past six years as head of the University, Friday said "the effectiveness of the teacher is still most important in education.

"It is the teacher who instills drive in the student and opens the students' minds to the knowledge and appreciation of the world around him."

Friday said more is being required of prospective college students today simply because of the world we live in.

"Today the single most important factor in gaining admittance to a college or university is the student's high school record. This is the controlling factor for admission.

"I would say that continued determination is very important for success both in high school and in college."

Friday listed two major issues confronting the University today — maintenance of a high-caliber faculty and more opportunities for post-high school work.

"To maintain a qualified faculty, we must be able to pay them a sufficient salary," Friday commented.

"The Legislature has given us money to increase faculty salaries, and this process must continue."

Friday said that UNC must always remain in a competitive position in the procurement of qualified faculty members.

"The reputation of the University really turns on the faculty and the quality of the staff," Friday declared.

Through the years, he said, UNC has managed to build a strong faculty and today, "we are managing to hold our own."

As a possible solution to the problems of post-high school facilities, Friday cites "the important role that community colleges are playing.

"It is true that North Carolina was late in getting this program under way," Friday said, "but now there is a good response to the program coming in. Cities like Gastonia, Mooresville and Leaksville have done a wonderful job in setting up plans for a college.

Friday said community colleges would provide one or two years of college preparatory work, all of which can be taken in the students' home environment.

Here again, Friday stressed the importance of being able to hire quality instructors and emphasized the necessity of high faculty salaries.

"However, with these six or eight Community Colleges, we have to figure out where these students are going to go if they decide to transfer after two years," Friday said.

"Many of them will want to go beyond their Sophomore year, and the question is, 'Where will they go?'"

Other questions will come up, Friday said. Should entrance exams be devised for the transfer student? How much responsibility should the state supported institution take in finding room for these students?

"These are all very real and pressing problems," Friday said. "We must try to solve them with great speed."

"I hope the University can keep its doors open to every resident of North Carolina who can qualify for admission. But that will depend on the availability of adequate housing as well as the availability of faculty members to teach them.

Another thorny issue that bothers the UNC president is the Speaker-Ban Statute which bars anyone who is a Communist or who has taken the Fifth Amendment or who advocates the violent overthrow of the government from speaking on any state supported institutions.

"The University intention is that we be free to communicate with scientists, engineers, doctors, scholars and others from all areas," Friday says in reference to the controversial law. "We would like for them to come here to debate, and to discuss new ideas, inventions and thoughts.

"We are not afraid of people coming here from anywhere in the world to see what we have accomplished through free enterprise, the arts and through service.

"The University does not desire to have speakers on campus who would advocate the overthrow of the State or National government. But when it comes to new ideas, we must have the privilege of meeting with the scientists, farmers and scholars from around the world.

"As we change, we must examine the status quo. I think the people believe in the right to express themselves, and we must not let discussion creep over to question a man's integrity or motivation. There must always be a give and take of ideas."

The Bill Friday Story Part II

Friday—A Tar Heel Through & Through

By MICKEY BLACKWELL

In 1937, Bill Friday graduated from Dallas High School, and prepared to enter college the following fall.

"I entered Wake Forest College in the fall of '37 on a $50 scholarship," Friday said. "I would not have been able to have attended college if I had not received this scholarship."

In 1938, Friday transferred to North Carolina State to study textile engineering. He was one of N. C. State's most distinguished graduates in the class of 1941.

While at State, Friday was president of the 1941 senior class, president of the N. C. Federation of Student Government and a member of the Golden Chain.

While Friday was attending school at N. C. State, he met his future wife, Ida Willa Howell of Lumberton who was attending school a few miles down the road at Meredith. They were married in 1942 and have three daughters.

Between his student careers at N. C. State and the UNC Law School, Friday spent four years from May, 1942 through April, 1946, at the Naval Ammunition Depot, Portsmouth, Va. as a lieutenant.

Friday returned to North Carolina in 1946, and entered Law School at Chapel Hill that same year. Here again, the Gaston County native showed his worth. He was president of the UNC Law School Association, and was a member of the Golden Fleece.

Friday received his law degree in June, 1948, and passed the North Carolina Bar in August of the same year.

In 1948, Friday began "a most enjoyable association with a great university." Friday served three years as assistant dean of students at UNC. In 1951, he was appointed assistant to President Gordon Gray and in 1955 he acquired the title of Secretary of the Consolidated University.

When Gray resigned in 1955 he was succeeded by the Provost, Harris Purks; and when Purks also resigned to become director of the State Board of Higher Education, Friday, on March 1, 1956, became Acting President of UNC.

On Oct. 26, 1956, William Clyde Friday was elected President of the three-fold University, and on May 8, 1957, at 36 years of age, he was inaugurated.
