With HUGH STEVENS

Your Student Legislature is currently embroiled in a situation so muddled, so confused and so controversial that it would take a veritable genius to unwind it.

In recent weeks, three different attempts have been made to present a bill acceptable to the body which would set up a campus-wide special referendum on the student boycott and other aspects of the local civil rights squabble.

Historically, the situation looks like this:

1. The first bill was introduced by George Ingram (UP) at one of the last sessions of the 36th Assembly, only a few days before the recent Spring elections. It met with miserable defeat, and went on to become the only really heated issue of the entire campaign.

Suspension Called
When an attempt was made to introduce Ingram's bill under a suspension of the rules, the Student Party leaders immediately cried "foul." They saw the move as a political trick, designed to enhance the fortunes of the UP slate in the elections, since they realized that a referendum would have wide-spread appeal among the members of the student body. The UP said it was just an attempt to give the students an opportunity to have their say on this vital issue (though only one or two UP members actually knew about the bill beforehand).

To a certain extent, the UP members were probably truthful, since the students have been practically begging for a referendum. But the fact remains that such a move would have been beneficial to the UP campaign, assuming it could have gotten through Legislature. (In retrospect, it appears that this was a pretty poor assumption for any responsible politician to make. What's more, it later turned out that the Elections Board could not have gotten the question on the ballot anyway—though in light of later developments this hardly seems noteworthy.)

At any rate, the SP mustered the necessary votes to prevent the bill from reaching the floor, and the issue became a hot one. Charges and countercharges were filed by members of both parties, with the UP claiming that the SP had let partisanship deprive the students of a referendum, and the SP charging that the whole thing was a political stunt in the first place.

Elections Change Picture
Only a few days afterward, however, the elections were held, sending in a new legislature for its 37th Assembly. The SP again had dominance over the UP (by one seat) but the balance of power was left in the hands of five Independents who nailed down seats for the first time. Begin round two.

2. At the very first session of the new Assembly, almost before the new legislators had settled in their chairs, Bob Wilson (SP) introduced the second referendum bill. It fell among his fellow legislators like a bomb. Everybody in the room seemed surprised except Wilson and Arthur Hays. There was good reason—nobody else knew the bill was going to be introduced.

Nothing was done, really, because the bill simply fell into the usual legislative committee process. But many legislators on both sides of the aisle left in a huff, accusing the SP of doing exactly what the UP had done earlier.

In addition, many of those who saw the bill after its introduction were unable to decide exactly what it said. The questions proposed for the referendum were couched in such vague terms that we saw fit to make editorial comment about them (DTH, April 25th). But whatever the reasons which they gave for their opposition, it was obvious that many were opposed to the bill. Begin round three.

Wilson's Bill Introduced
3. Among those unhappy with the Wilson bill were a group of legislators — UP, SP, and Independent—who had decided to introduce a bipartisan measure at the first regular meeting of the new Assembly this week. They felt that the best way to end the controversy over partisanship was to gather up a large group of people from both parties, introduce a compromise bill and attempt to kill Wilson's of

3rd VOTE BILL IN SL

By HUGH STEVENS

The introduction of a third bill calling for a campus-wide referendum on the controversial student boycott highlighted the first full session of Student Legislature's 37th Assembly Thursday evening.

The latest bill is a nonpartisan one, introduced by Mal King (UP), Dick Akers (SP), Teddy O'Toole (IND), Jim Brame (SP), John Harmon (UP), and John Froneberger (SP).

The action came on the heels of a bill introduced last week by Bob Wilson (SP). Wilson's bill has been the object of criticism from legislators in both

Law Association Names Thornton To Presidency

William Thornton, rising third year Law Student from Asheville, was elected president of the UNC Student Bar Association Tuesday, defeating J. Hoyle Stultz Jr., of Draper and Harry S. Cline of Stony Point.

Thornton is a graduate of Washington University of St. Louis, Mo.

Law students voted overwhelmingly in favor of an amendment to the Law Students' Association bylaws to change the name of their organization to Student Bar Association.

Other officers elected were Sheldon Fogel, rising third year student from Chapel Hill, vice president; Owen Cook, rising second year student from Fayetteville, secretary; Robert Chandler, rising second year student from Rocky Mount, treasurer; and Barry Osmun, rising second year student from Glen Ridge, N. J., chief justice of the SBA Honor Court.

Elected Honor Court justices from the second year class were: Charles P. Brown of Albemarle and H. L. (Al) Allison of Asheville; third year: Mark Hudson of Wilson and Rueben Moore of Atkinson.

MATH COLLOQUIUM

Prof. Eleanor M. Horadam will address the UNC Mathematics Colloquium Thursday, May 7, at 4 p.m. in 383 Phillips.

She will speak on "Clifford Matrices, Groups and Geometry."

The following Thursday, Prof. Alwyn F. Horadam will address the Colloquium.

A 3:30 reception in 277 Phillips will proceed each meeting.

parties who are displeased with its content and the manner in which it was introduced.

No action was taken on Wilson's bill Thursday, as no committee hearings had been held on it. The new legislature committees were appointed Thursday night.

Hearings on both bills will be held by the Ways and Means Committee next Monday at 3 p.m. in Graham Memorial.

The first referendum bill, introduced by George Ingram (UP), was introduced in the old 36th Assembly shortly before spring elections. It failed to gain the floor when Student Party leaders labeled it a "political trick" and mustered the votes necessary to prevent a suspension of the rules.

The sponsors of the latest bill called it "an attempt to clarify the issue and remove the stigma of partisan politics from a vital matter."

Don Carson, Speaker of the legislature, said the introduction of a non-partisan bill is "a big step in getting this issue before the campus."

"The sponsors of this bill include three members of the Student Party, two members of the University Party, and one independent. Their action represents a sincere desire to present this issue to the student body. I believe that all concerned are weary of seeing this issue pulled through the meat grinder of partisan politics," Carson said.

Other Bills Introduced
In addition to the referendum bill, seven other bills were introduced, most of them concerned with financial matters.

Don Wilson (SP) introduced a measure calling for the State Student Legislature Committee to be made a permanent committee of Student Government.

Five legislators were elected to represent the body on other Student Government committees. Jeff Pickett (UP) and Jim Little (SP) were named to the Publications Board. Sandra Burden (SP) and Mal King (UP) will serve on the Consolidated Student Council, and John Froneberger (SP) will be the legislative representative on the Graham Memorial Board of Directors.

The appointment of Mike Chanin as Presidential Assistant to Bob Spearman was approved.

Spearman also submitted the following names for approval as chairmen and co-chairmen of the various SC standing committees: Campus Affairs—Faryl Sims, Lanny Shuff; Editors' Roundtable—Jeff Davis; Co-op Committee—Lloyd Coley; Communica-

Overflights Bring New Cuban Crisis

From DTH Wire Reports

A new Cuban crisis flared Friday.

Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev and Cuban Premier Fidel Castro, in almost simultaneous statements, warned the United States that further U. S. reconnaissance flights over Cuba could bring world disaster.

The U. S. State and Defense Departments restated President Johnson's insistence that flights by U2 and other such planes would continue for the sake of the United States' security. Johnson said recently that Cuban armed efforts to halt the flights would have "serious consequences."

Khrushchev, speaking at the traditional May Day banquet in the Kremlin, said the continued flights could have disastrous consequences and denied there had been any understanding with the United States that they would continue.

"We have always said and declare once again that a threat to Cuba, the continuation of the violation of her sovereignty, the intrusion into Cuba's air space, can have disastrous consequences," Khrushchev said.

George Finishes Second Edition Of BA Yearbook

By HENRY POOLE

Claude S. George, associate dean of the School of Business Administration here, has completed the second edition of his widely used textbook, "Management in Industry."

Professor George, an authority on management and time-motion studies, is a former member of the management staff of Western Electric Company in Burlington, serving from 1946 to 1950, when he returned to UNC for advanced study which led to his Ph.D. degree in business. Dr. George is a native of Reidsville.

"Management in Industry" presents a thorough and up-to-date revision of one of the best accepted books in the field. Critics declare that Dr. George's book "is a well-organized and concisely written text covering the most important aspects of manufacturing enterprise."

Among features in the revised edition are completely new chapters on decision-making and the use of electronic computers in business management.

Dr. George also used the case method in giving full and explanatory comments on facts of managing a business. The text also includes study questions—and answers—as guides to teachers and students.

Prof. George joined the faculty at Chapel Hill in 1954. He received his B.S. and M.S. degrees at Chapel Hill and his Ph.D. at the State University of Iowa. He is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Beta Gamma Sigma, Sigma Iota Epsilon, the Order of Artus, the Academy of Management, and the American Institute of Management.

Basketballers Are Featured In Playmakers Final Show

Zarro Joins Galanti And Cunningham For 'Braggart Soldier'

Roman slaves, courtesans, and soldiers will invade the Forest Theatre for four evenings this week as the Carolina Playmakers present Plautus' wild and racy farce comedy, "The Braggart Soldier" May 7 through 10.

Director Kai Jurgenson has been putting his cast (which includes UNC basketball stars Billy Galanti, and Rick Zarro as slaves) through their paces for the last two weeks in preparation for the May 7 "Student Night" opening at the Forest Theatre. The three performances on May 8, 9, and 10 will play to the general public.

Graham Pollock of Gatesville, last seen as the unforgettable Indian in the Playmakers' production of "The Fantasticks," has been cast in the title role of Pyrgopolynices, a Roman soldier of questionable valor who has an ego as long as his name.

Rounding out the cast are Colin Ferguson, Chapel Hill; Arnold Wengrow, Columbia, S. C.; Ed Kenestrick, Norman, Okla.; Ben Jones, Wilmington; Tom Benenson, New York City; Laurel Dykstra, Chapel Hill; Virginia Cornue, Huntersville; Dan Clayton, Houston, Texas; and Kris Jurgenson and Mike Jurgenson of Chapel Hill.

With the exception of the playwright, who lived a few centuries too early to qualify, "The Braggart Soldier" promises to be a one hundred per cent UNC effort. The translation being used is that of Dr. Albert I. Suskin, chairman of the Department of Classics at the University, and the cast is made up entirely of UNC students.

"Student Night" tickets for "The Braggart Soldier" will go on sale on Tuesday of next week in Y-Court, and the sale will continue through Thursday, if tickets are still available. These general admission tickets, for UNC students and dates only, may be purchased for one dollar (half price) for the Thursday performance only.

WITHDRAWS RESIGNATION AS PHARMACY SCHOOL DEAN

Dr. Edward A. Brecht, Jr., has withdrawn his resignation and will continue as dean of the School of Pharmacy. Chancellor William Aycock announced that Dean Brecht's decision to withdraw his resignation has been accepted and "we are looking forward to the continued progress of the School of Pharmacy under his leadership."

Dean Brecht announced last month that he would resign his deanship to return to full-time teaching and research in the pharmacy school. His resignation was pending final acceptance by University trustees.

Dr. Phillip S. Corbet or the Entomology Research Institute of the Canada Department of Agriculture, will address the University Zoology Seminar Tuesday on "Aspects of the Ecology of Tropical Culicine Mosquitoes."

The meeting will be held at 4:45 p.m. in room 105 Wilson Hall. Coffee will be served at 4:30.

Jane Craige Gray Award To Be Given

The Jane Craige Gray award tea honoring the outstanding Junior girl will be given Sunday afternoon by Kappa Delta Sorority. The winner will be announced at the tea.

The award based on outstanding scholarship, leadership, and service to the University, is given in memory of Jane Craige Gray the wife of Gordon Gray who was President of the University from 1950-1955.

Mrs. Gray who died in the summer of 1953 was a Kappa Delta. Last year the award was given to Miss Beverly Haynes who this year received the outstanding Senior award.

Vito And Slocum To Perform Here

The University Symphony Orchestra will feature Edward Vito, harpist, and conductor Earl Slocum, flutist, at two concerts in Hill Hall during National Music Week.

Vito will appear as a soloist in the concert Tuesday and join the North Carolina String Quartet and members of the Music Department in a Chamber Music Concert on Wednesday.

He has long been associated with the NBC Symphony and Arturo Toscanini. All of the harp solos on her recordings are his. He has appeared in recitals at Town Hall in New York and with leading orchestras of America. He has made numerous recordings with Columbia, Decca, MGM, Cook, Period and others.

First Lecture By Hill Set For Sunday Night

Prof. Samuel Hill, Jr., chairman of the Dept. of Religion, will deliver the first of two lectures on "Southern Protestantism in Transition" Sunday in Gerard Hall at 8 p.m.

Hill is a recent recipient of the Tanner Award for excellence in undergraduate teaching and will spend next year at Harvard doing study and research in American intellectual history.

MEN'S COUNCIL SEATS VACANT

Bob Spearman, Student Body President, announced yesterday that he will hold interviews for vacancies on the Men's Council and Women's Honor Council on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of next week in the Student Government office.

The Men's Council vacancies are in Men's District I—all of the area outside of the corporate limits of Chapel Hill and Carboro; Men's District VIII—Winston, Connor, Joyner, and Alexander; and Men's District X—Ehringhaus.

The vacancy on the Women's Council is in Women's District V, Cobb Dormitory.

All of these seats are for a six month term except for Cobb and Men's District I which are one year seats.

Spearman urged all students who have had experience with the judicial branches of Student Government or who have taken the Honor System quiz, to interview for these positions.

But, Spearman added, "Although experience is desired, it is not a prerequisite. Ability, willingness and desire are the basic qualities that Council members should have."

"I hope that students interested in the Councils will take this opportunity to interview for the positions."

MOSQUITOES

Dr. Phillip S. Corbet or the Entomology Research Institute of the Canada Department of Agriculture, will address the University Zoology Seminar Tuesday on "Aspects of the Ecology of Tropical Culicine Mosquitoes."

Rights Demonstration Set For Today

The second Civil Rights demonstrations since the close of Orange County Superior Court will take place today at 1:30 p.m.

Last week's march attracted only 35 participants, and it was expected that there would be a larger turnout today. The march will begin at St. Joseph's Methodist Church on West Rosemary Street.

"Today's march is specifically aimed at a protest at the harsh and unjust sentences handed down by Judge Raymond Mallard in Orange County Superior Court last week," commented Bill Hicks, a member of the group organizing the march. The group is not affiliated with any organization.

"I have never been arrested", Hicks continued, "but it seems to me that the actions of Judge Mallard cannot be allowed to stand without some sort of protest."

"Without this protest, the whole problem of segregation in Chapel Hill, which Judge Mallard's sentences have in no way alleviated, may well be forgotten by white students."

"We as students have an obligation to keep Chapel Hill from forgetting that many of its citizens do not have even a few of the opportunities that we, as college students, take completely for granted."

Students currently on probation from Judge Mallard's court cannot participate in the demonstration, and this will hamper efforts at a large turnout, according to several persons who have been affiliated with the local integration movement.

Mallard last week gave suspended sentences to many local residents on the condition that they not participate nor associate with demonstrations or demonstrators.

In addition, he sentenced 12 members of the local movement to jail terms ranging from four months to a full year. Those sentenced included Pat Cusick, field secretary for the Student Peace Union; John Dunne, chairman of the Chapel Hill Freedom Committee; J. V. Henry, field secretary for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee; and Rosemary Ezra.

AIN'T SHE NICE?—One of our beautiful secretaries, Mary Ann Butcher, is hard at work, sorting out the many college newspapers we receive from all over the country. She is lucky enough to work with 10 of the most handsome men on campus.
