LAWLER LOOKS BACK

Editor's Note: The following article by DTH Student Government reporter John Greenbacker is the first in a series of three on former Student Body President Mike Lawler's observations on the University and the people, both individuals and groups, who make it what it is.

By JOHN GREENBACKER

"The President must clearly lead and represent the students, and next year, the emphasis must be on leading, or else the students will not be represented."

The quote appeared in big black letters on the side of the election poster, and to the left was the smiling face of Mike Lawler.

The poster is old now, but it forms a vital part of the history, memories and life of the former Student Body president and Student Government.

Whether over iced coffee or cognac, casual or serious, Mike can speak with more authority on the past year and the old administration than any single person in Student Government. Recently, in the comfort of his small living room, he did, and his reflections were varied.

Men's Residence Halls

"Basically, we couldn't make Stacy Hall into a Statler Hilton, but we were able to persuade the Administration to make some improvements."

"We tried to gear our program for the individual student. If our pilot projects are successful, the University will give us more funds to carry out environmental changes."

"In trying to handle the social problem, we attempted to get the Consolidated University Student Council to work in setting up coed receptions where there would be more likelihood of meeting people on an equal level. We're still trying."

"The MRC is still working on this, and eventually it hopes to be able to set up a system where girls won't be brought over here and then dumped somewhere on campus. If they can solve the social problems, the rest will be easy."

Fraternities

"Several changes were made in the IFC Court and its procedures. I would like to see a more efficient system of lower courts established."

"We gave particular attention to the bull pledge ruling, and a plan to alleviate the parking problem in Big Frat Court by using the Ackland lot worked well on a trial basis. I hope it will be continued."

"Fraternities on campus today aren't prospering, and I think much of their problem lies in satisfied mediocrity. They have a great leadership and academic potential which they aren't living up to."

"The fraternities should increase their discipline and re-evaluate their ideals. The University should dictate policy to them, but they must learn to complement the over-all goals of the University."

Sororities

"Sororities are my biggest gripe. They are the most qualified element in the University. In terms of academics they fill this potential, but in terms of its cultural and true intellectual aspects they fall way short."

"Some people describe the sorority-fraternity system as a mutual satisfaction society, not an admiration society, and unfortunately this is largely true."

"Sororities have produced a few outstanding individuals, but this is far from what they could produce."

Student Government

"The real tradition of student responsibility began to be lost about six years ago, and I tried to revive this responsibility during my year in office."

"The late 1950's saw the advent of the 'Participative' philosophy. It was characterized by a lack of ideology and perspective, and soon Student Government existed to justify the needs of the people in it rather than to justify itself."

"The best example of this is the history of the campus judiciary since 1959. In that year, some Student Government officials recognized the pressing need to codify the Honor Codes and student court procedures. Nothing was done."

"Today, after the Ann Carter Case, everybody's in an uproar and no one knows why something wasn't done about codification sooner. During the past year I tried to eliminate this vacuum by appointing to office people who would pay open attention to the larger goals of Student Government."

Mike Lawler—It Wasn't All Smiles

the check for North Carolina's united contribution at the event. President Johnson was high in his praise of North Carolina for the Tar Heel state being the first in the nation to sponsor a program of this kind for President Kennedy's memorial.

Case: Senators Should Be Asked About Baker Ties

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republicans demanded Tuesday that the Senate Rules Committee try to find out the extent of business dealings all senators may have had with Robert G. (Bobby) Baker, former secretary to Senate Democrats.

Sen. Clifford P. Case, (R-N.J.), appeared at a brief session of the committee to push his proposed questionnaire which would ask all members of the Senate for information on their dealings with Baker and campaign assistance provided or offered by him.

L. P. McLendon, special committee counsel for the Baker case, said he felt that asking senators about offers of campaign assistance exceeded the Rules Committee's investigative authority.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark, (D-Pa.), questioned the right of the committee to ask the questions of any senator. Committee Chairman B. Everett Jordan, (D-N.C.), told Case that if he has any charges to bring "against any senator" the Committee would investigate them.

Case, his voice shaking with anger, virtually ignored his prepared three-page statement and told the Committee: "I will not be stopped. I will continue to try to get the facts."

He said that only the pressure of publicity forced the Committee to let him testify in its lengthy investigation of the outside business activities of Baker, who was reputed to have piled up a paper fortune of $2 million on his $19,600 Senate salary.

"Every member of the Senate has had his reputation, his good name, diminished by the Bobby Baker case," he said. "As an individual, I resent Bobby Baker's ability to blacken me."

Top Fraternity Award Goes To Chi Psi; Phi Delt 2nd

By KERRY SIPE
The annual Robert B. House trophy award presented to the most all-around outstanding Social fraternity on the Carolina campus was awarded Monday night to the Chi Psi Lodge.

The award was one of three presented in conjunction with the regularly scheduled meeting of the Inter Fraternity Council. Chi Psi won also the annual Phi Delta Theta Award, based on academic achievement. The fraternity's overall grade average of more than 2.5 placed higher than any other Carolina fraternity.

The award for the most improved academic standing during the past year was awarded to Phi Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

During the past year Phi Kappa jumped from an overall scholastic average of 1.94 to an average in excess of 2.3. The fraternity went from twenty-seventh place to seventh place as compared with other campus fraternities.

Phi Delta Theta Fraternity was runner-up for the Robert House award and Delta Upsilon came in third in the outstanding fraternity competition. Last year the award was won by Delta Kappa Epsilon.

The House Award, the highest honor possible for a Carolina fraternity, is awarded by the Faculty Committee on Fraternities and Sororities and is presented by the IFC. Qualifications for the honor are based on five major categories.

Scholastic achievement by members, participation in various intramural activities, participation in extracurricular activities by fraternity members, outstanding participation in the Inter Fraternity Council and outstanding cooperation in relations with faculty members, and the neatness and appearance of the fraternity house are all taken into consideration by the Committee in bestowing the coveted award.

Our Soldiers Poorly Equipped?

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A congressional investigation shaped up Tuesday into charges that Americans fighting in Viet Nam are having to use obsolete equipment, particularly airplanes.

The House Armed Services Committee, headed by Rep. Carl Vinson, (D-Ga.), already has asked the Pentagon for a full explanation of recent incidents allegedly involving equipment failure.

Two members of the committee, Rep. Ed Forman, (R-Tex.), and Charles E. Chamberlain, (R-Mich.), have formally demanded an inquiry if the facts warrant it.

Informed sources said Tuesday that Vinson has indicated the committee will dig further into the charges when Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara returns from his current inspection trip to South Viet Nam.

Meanwhile, in related developments:

A group of relatives of American servicemen killed in South Viet Nam published an open letter to President Johnson Tuesday asking that the war be carried to North Viet Nam and that the United States fight a "battle to win" against communism.

The open letter appeared in the form of a full-page advertisement in Tuesday's edition of the Washington Star.

It contained the names of 27 Americans killed in Viet Nam from January, 1961, through March, 1964, and 100 names of relatives of the men. The 100 names were from 42 separate families.

A statement in the ad said that "the funds for this advertisement have been provided by a group of Americans in memory of the gallant young Americans who gave their lives in Viet Nam against the communist enemy and in the prayful hope that their lives have not been given in vain."

Paul G. Hoffman, managing director of the United Nations Special Fund, will receive the American Freedom Association's 1964 World Peace Award at public ceremonies here Thursday at 8 p.m. in Carroll Hall Auditorium.

Gov. Terry Sanford will present the award to Hoffman, former administrator of the Marshall Plan, former president of the Ford Foundation, and former president of the Studebaker Corp. Dr. Frank P. Graham, U.N. mediator and former president of the Consolidated University of North Carolina, will introduce Gov. Sanford.

Presiding over the ceremonies will be Dr. Robert H. Spiro Jr., dean of Mercer University, Macon, Ga., and president of the American Freedom Association, Inc. which maintains its national headquarters at Salisbury.

The award presentation culminates sessions of a United Nations Seminar to be held here at Carroll Hall beginning at 3 p.m. Thursday. This seminar is being sponsored by the North Carolina Division of the American Association for the United Nations. Mrs. Roy Nels Anderson of Raleigh, president of the State AAUN, will preside.

"The Widening Gap," a film on U.N. projects aimed at wiping out poverty, disease and illiteracy, will be shown at 3 p.m. and will be followed first by a group of UNC foreign students talking on why they are studying here in the United States and later by discussions on various U.N. activities.

Following the evening presentation of the American Freedom Association Award to Hoffman there will be a reception, sponsored by UNC student campus organizations, in Graham Memorial student union.

Hoffman is a man who has spent the major portion of his life administering development of a variety of items including cars, countries, economies, and research.

For any kind of development, there must be capital, and Hoffman has been administering developmental programs backed by millions of dollars of capital, presently as managing director of the United Nations Special Fund and before that as president of the Ford Foundation, administrator of the Marshall Plan, and head of the Studebaker Corp. and chairman of the board of the Studebaker-Packard Corp.

The 374 developmental assistance projects of the U. N. Special Fund, for example, involve $837 million.

As managing director of the U.N. Special Fund, Hoffman is concerned with developing the undeveloped in the underdeveloped world. This means administering funds to assist countries in surveying and defining their natural resources, in establishing training institutes for the inhabitants of these countries, in establishing applied research institutes, and supporting projects concerned with economic development planning.
